VOTE!

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, WILL BE election day, the day on which citizens of the United States will have the privilege of voting, indirectly through presidential electors, for the man who will, for four years, direct the affairs and guide the destiny of this country. Incidentally, the California Supreme Court has decreed that presidential electors are not officeholders, yet they are the only citizens privileged to vote direct for the next president. Before another presidential election rolls around, every citizen should be given the right to vote direct for every public-servant, from the president down.

The closing national campaign has been a decidedly lively one. Propaganda has been turned out by the ton, and miles of "canned" so-called editorial-matter has found its way into the public press. Just as there are party-bound citizens who would vote for any candidate nominated by their party, without regard to his fitness and policies, so are there numerous party-bound newspapers which will publish any old lot of rot emanating from headquarters.

Every man seeking the preference of his fellow-citizens at the polls, can only be justly judged on his past public record, and the same applies to political parties, which are made up of a number of individuals. It is the duty of the voter to investigate, for himself, the records of candidates and parties, and to then form a conclusion as to which is deserving of his suffrage. In forming such conclusion, do not be swayed by the opinion of paid propagandists and party-bound newspapers, and accept not their interpretation of any candidate's fitness. In short, do your own thinking, voter, remembering always that no man or party is powerful enough to wreck the country. All such talk is rot, pure and simple.

And then vote! It has been rightly said that the peace-slacker—the citizen who fails to exercise the right to ballot—is more of a traitor than the war-slacker. The minority are and have been running this country because the majority have failed to vote, and that accounts, in large measure, for the rottenness, of public record, which has polluted the National Government, and which has brought about a condition which needs rectifying at the hands of the majority.

Prior to an election, candidates and parties promise many things which, following success at the polls, are forgotten or disregarded, the purpose being to deceive the voter. Remember, just before the May presidential primary, when it appeared that Senator Hiram Johnson would be the choice of the California voters, the President and his followers intimated, if not actually promised, that the bill then before Congress providing for the exclusion of aliens ineligible to citizenship would be passed and signed? Well, don't forget that when Senator Johnson failed to carry his home-state, the President said that he would not sign the bill, for fear that it would offend Japan, and he would not have signed it, had not Congress impressed on him the fact that it would be passed over his veto, by an overwhelming majority, if he vetoed it.

In the writer's opinion, the presidential vote in California will determine whether or no the Japs and other ineligible-to-citizenship aliens are to be permanently excluded from this country. That, so far as California is concerned, is the most vital question involved in the national campaign. The Grizzly Bear has, in previous issues, presented the facts on which this opinion is based, and those facts are available otherwheres. Consider them before going to the polls, and then vote, as a citizen of California, according to the dictates of your conscience.

What do the apologists for Japan in this country now think, since the proceedings at the Geneva conference, where the cunningness of the wily Jap was forced into plain view? Do they still contend that Japan has not now in mind, as it has always had, the eventual acquisition of California and the other Pacific Coast states by force of arms, if its nationals be not permitted to freely enter this country and take what is wanted by "peaceful invasion"?

Japan had its way at the conference, the approved peace protocol being so worded as to make it possible for a nation to declare war over the internal policy of another nation without being defined as an aggressor. Which really means that Japan, within the meaning of the League of Nation's peace protocol approved by those in conference at Geneva, may, without being classed as an aggressor nation, declare war upon the United States for excluding its nationals.

Japan insisted, too, that immigration, a purely domestic question, must be submitted for arbitration to the League of Nations, which that country appears to dominate and with which—thank God!—this country is not associated. Threatening to withdraw, unless its demands were concurred in, the conferees, probably not wishing to "offend sensitive" Japan, made every concession demanded by the representative of Japan.

Unless a firm stand be taken and "sensitive" Japan told plainly where to head in, another war is inevitable. Japan knows full well that the United States and other Jap-excluding countries—in fact, no self-respecting nation,—will ever submit to arbitration, at the hands of the League of Nations or any other group of powers, the question of immigration. Japan is simply following its usual course of camouflaging, and in the meantime is strenuously preparing for war. Reports from English and French sources are authority for this latter statement.

And what is this country, at which Japan's war efforts will undoubtedly be directed, doing? Decreasing the numbers and efficiency of its army and navy, permitting Japs to colonize in strategic positions on the Pacific Coast, furnishing Japan with the sinews of war, and encouraging that country, in every conceivable way, to wage a successful war against the United States. Is it not about time for the hundred-percent White Americans to unitedly arouse the national authorities from their Jap-induced slumber!

To the electors of California, there will be submitted at the November election, eighteen measures. Every voter should familiarize himself with the purpose and intent of each, and then vote for all, that no single law may be placed upon the statutes by a minority of the citizenry. Time given to the consideration of such matters is not wasted, but well invested for the benefit of the state.

Proposition five on the November ballot, drawn up by the executive committee of county and school superintendents, relates to transfer of funds. Will C. Wood, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, says that if it carries "all veterans' welfare measures will be seriously affected and perhaps rendered unconstitutional." That being the case, proposition five should be defeated. In the interest of the war-boys, vote "NO!"

Proposition thirteen on the November ballot should receive an overwhelming "YES" vote. It provides for the collection from all male inhabitants of voting age who pay no other taxes, with a few exceptions, of an annual five-dollar poll-tax, the funds to go to the state school-fund. The public-schools need the money, and those who are benefiting through residence in California, but paying none of the expenses of government, should be compelled to contribute.

IF I WERE A TREE

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

I would deem it a privilege, if I were a tree,
To have some sweet bird build its nest in me.
To swing on my branches and sing a sweet song
That would cheer some worn traveler passing along.

When wild storms were raging and birds needed care,
It would give me great comfort, my shelter to share.

What joy it would be, all the days that I'll live,
If friendly protection to the birds I could give.

I'd then fill a place that would just suit me,
By homesteading for songbirds, if I were a tree.

WHOLE NO. 211

Thursday, November 27, will be Thanksgiving Day. With all their troubles, real and imaginary, the American people have much to be thankful for. And particularly so, those dwelling in this land of sunshine, fruits and flowers—California!

Have you noticed that the females involved in the divorce, murder and other scandals which fill a large portion of the daily-press are almost always referred to as "beautiful"?

The old saying, to the effect that pretty is as pretty does, apparently has lost its charm in these times of moral delinquency.

Referring to Humboldt County's endeavor to preserve the redwoods, the Los Angeles "Herald" of recent date said editorially: "Humboldt is not the largest of the forty-eight counties into which California is divided."

The last time we counted them, there were fifty-eight counties in California. The "Herald" editor should have a recount, or procure an up-to-date California history-book.

In Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, a man convicted of manslaughter—running down with his auto and killing a sixteen-year-old lad—was sent to the penitentiary for ten years.

He should have had a change of venue to Los Angeles! There, where pedestrians are killed daily by careless autoists, the penalty generally inflicted by the courts, unless the convicted party be lacking in "pull" and the coin of the realm, are suspended sentences and probation.

"California, for the second successive season, is winner of the National Forest Fire League championship of the United States," says the California District Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture. "After getting off with an indifferent start in the face of a bad season, and trailing for months in the second division, she staged a spectacular come-back in July and August and rapidly climbed to first place. With a total of 1,810 fires which up to September 30 had burned over 605,000 acres of government and private lands, and cost $786,000 to suppress, there is no possibility, experts say, of any state in the union overcoming her commanding lead."

That's a record to be ashamed of! Its achievement is chargeable largely to careless individuals. Unless greater care be exercised on the part of those who visit the forests, the national and state authorities will be justified in perpetually closing them. California's forests must be saved!

CALIFORNIA'S MINERAL WEALTH

COMPILATION OF THE FINAL RETURNS from the mineral producers of California for 1923 by the statistical division of the State Mining Bureau, under the direction of State Mineralogist Lloyd L. Root, shows the total value for the year to have been $344,024,678, being an increase of $98,840,852 over the 1922 total of $245,183,826. There were fifty-four different mineral substances, exclusive of a segregation of the various stones grouped under gems; and all but one of the fifty-eight counties of the state contributed to the list.

The salient features of 1923, compared with the preceding year, were: The continued increase in petroleum yield; increases in cement, copper, lead, natural gas, brick and tile, and crushed rock; decreases in gold and silver values.

Petroleum accounted for an increase of $69,350,044 in total value, accompanying an increase in quantity of over 124,000,000 barrels. Gold decreased from $14,670,346 to $13,379,013, in spite of which, as in 1922, California continued to account for approximately 30 percent of the gold output of the United States.

Sulphur, which had not been produced commercially in California for many years, was added to the industrial group.

MOUNTAIN MONITORS TUNING UP.

It is apparent that hydraulic mining is about to assume large proportions in northern Sierra and southern Plumas Counties by the expedient of the great concrete dam at Bullard's Bar, says the "Grass Valley Union." Ten or more companies, strongly financed, have secured holdings in the Scales-La Porte region and after months of preliminary work are ready to operate as soon as water is available. A number of nationally-known mining men are interested in exploiting the auriferous gravels under the conditions made possible by the building of the Bullard's Bar dam.

So far, Nevada County is affected but little, but if the expedient proves successful, as now seems certain, the building of a similar dam at Smartsville will follow and this will make possible the mining of large areas of gravel in this county. The venture, as a whole, is one calculated to stir the imagination, for the government estimate of gold still locked in the ancient channels and tributary ground is $500,000,000.

So filters through the mesh and blight
Of ignorance which holds me tight,—

SPREAD THE TRUTH

When you have finished reading your Grizzly Bear, mark the Jap articles and SEND THE NUMBER TO EASTERN ACQUAINTANCES, and ask them to pass it on to their friends.

The East needs and wants to be informed of the true situation regarding the yellow peril, and the East must be enlightened before it will join forces with the West to rout the Asiatics.

The Japs see to it that the East gets limitless quantities of lying and misleading propaganda, and all White-Americans should unite to meet that situation with a flood of facts.

The Grizzly Bear will do its part by publishing articles dealing with the truth. Will you do your part, by keeping the truth in circulation?

It is suggested, too, that every Parlor of Native Sons not now doing so, subscribe to the magazine for its local libraries—public and high school.

A REBUKE TO THE MOUNTAINS

TO THE AWE-INSPIRING MOUNTAIN, I cast my eager eyes, and bow my head in humbleness to grandeur that never dies. Afar upon your rugged slopes stands the gnarled and twisted pine, a dark grim sentinel to guard your snow-capped line.

Your beetling cliffs and mossy glades, your canyons, deep and wide, have dared brave men upon your face who perished there and died. Who perished in your cold, cold snow, far, far beneath your crown, in trying to reach your hoary crest to win the world's renown. To win that praise that comes from man for deeds both brave and grand, they dared the fields of ice and snow, upon your dome to stand.

From off your towering summit, you hurl your blinding snows, a menace to both man and beast which ever it enfolds. From out your roaring nostrils the red-hot lava rolls and courses down your rugged breast like streams of molten gold.

Upon the homes and smiling fields that nestle at your feet, you hurl your rain of fire and mud, man's efforts to defeat. You cheat him of his stock and grain and everything called home, you force him from your shades to flee, out in the world to roam. Bereft of all that man holds dear, driven out to a life of woe, while you look down so grim and grand in your coat of cold white snow.

Look down upon your handiwork, you demon of the earth; look down upon the carnage your fiery wrath has wrought! Enveloped in your mantle of cold and glittering white, you stand as God's great handiwork of power and of might. You stand a living monument to that almighty power that formed your base and reared your head high in the air to tower.

How can you be so cruel, how can you be so vain, how can you look with smiling face on thousands you have slain? And still you draw vast multitudes of man and beast and kine, that dare and brave all dangers to worship at your shrine; to worship at your massive feet, you proud and grand old king, and gaze upon your fiery face, you monstrous, heartless thing!

EX-SERVICE MEN NOW TO BE GIVEN PROMPT SERVICE.

The general order calling for the organization of regional offices—the final decentralization step in the Federal Government's program of furnishing aid to the disabled world-war veterans—has been signed by General Frank T. Hines, director of the United States Veterans' Bureau. The order establishes fifty-one regional offices, located in centers where the activities of the bureau are greatest and so situated that prompt service may be rendered ex-service men immediately. Two of the regional offices will be established in California, at San Francisco for the northern part of the state and Nevada, and at Los Angeles for the southern part of the state.

The regional offices will be in charge of a manager and will consist of medical, claims, rehabilitation and service divisions. They will have the following powers, to be exercised under the orders and regulations of the Veterans' Bureau:

(1) Examining of claimants and beneficiaries; the making of medical ratings and awarding of compensation claims.

(2) Granting of vocational training; supervision of training and securing employment opportunities.

(3) Granting of medical, surgical, dental, hospital care, convalescent care and necessary and reasonable after care.

(4) When specifically authorized, making payments for compensation, training allowance, and for administrative expenditures.

In addition to the functions as outlined above, an employment section, a follow-up nursing service, a supply section and other administrative offices are designated in the general order.

"For youth loves not the things that are sad, but turns to the hopeful and the glad."—Phoebe Cary.

THINK IT OVER!

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is, we believe, with the exception of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, the only organization that limits membership exclusively to NATIVE-BORN AMERICANS.

Knowing the serious conditions in this country today, this fact alone should impel every Native Son of California to immediately SEEK AFFILIATION with that American-born and American-operated institution, the man-power and wealth of which are pledged to the protection of American institutions in times of peace as well as in times of war.

A SIERRA MEMORY

THE FOLLOWING POEM, "A SIERRA Memory," the best ever written of scenes and old times of Placer's mining country of the Iowa Hill and Forest Hill Divides, says the "Placer Herald" of Auburn, is by Anna Catharine Markham.

Mrs. Markham is a native of Iowa Hill, and was the loved schoolteacher there many years ago. Now, she is a poet, secretary of the Poetry Society of America, and wife of America's great poet, Edward Markham. In New York, she sings with love her memories of the Iowa Hill home of long ago:

Sometime, O, California, far away,
I stop and fondly say your name,
As when one speaks a secret word of prayer
Upon a heart-remembered holiday.
And then, once more, like sudden altar-flame,
Burns up the long, bright gold adown the air
Behind your mountain crests that break the sky,
My earliest memory of time—your flight
Of purple peaks that edge the night
Crowned with ineffable, far, fadeless light.

Oh, just the magic of that word,
And quick a hundred memories are stirred!
I see the wondrous months of rain deferred
When pines and herbs sift down their quick, keen balms,
As Magdalen spilled the rose of odorous balms—
The months when coppery skies are arched Above down-dwindling streams, and roadsides parched,
Yet rich with dim, evasive hues and hints—
As though rehearsing all of April's tints—
And then the delicate first November rain
That kindles blaze of green on hill and plain
And calls the perished flowers to life again.
And, lo! the rifted rocks of the ravine
With penciled, old-gold violets in between,
The manzanita with its bells awing,
To tell of small, tart apples she will bring,
The ceanothus with its white bloom spread
Upon the ground like crumbs of bread,
The poppy lifting up its warm, red gold
Our miser hearts in heaven will hold.
Memophila, cream-cup, cyclamen,
Azalea, lupine—oh, I know just when My lost ones come, and where the eye may catch
Each thronging clan in its own happy patch.

The old home-names! And suddenly in dream,
I see again the lizard's darting gleam,
Its sanctuary in the granite seam;
At night I hark coyote's hollow dare,
Braggart when but the moon is there.
I scan the hazel thicket where the deer
Find harvest in the brown o' the year;
The bounteous immemorial parks of oak
Whose acorns feed the bear and Indian folk.
The quiet forests of the pine and spruce
Where time and grief hold endless truce.
O, California, just the old dear sound—
Again that one word can the whole world bound!
Thank God, for that Sierran word, a king
Might go his way, long envying,
Among illimitable peaks high-hung
With forests, dateless, deathless—ever young—
The child-world bright with faith and hope.
Larger, not safer, sweeter, now the scope
Than when in my Sierran mining camp
I knew the folk at every evening lamp;
Was welcome at each hearth and sill,
Was friend with every grave upon the hill;
That time when men of every land of earth
Walked down our roads as brothers of one birth.

LAW RELATING TO JAP LAND CORPORATIONS INTERPRETED.

In answer to a request from District Attorney Orrin L. Lowell of Placer County, Attorney-general U. S. Webb has rendered an important opinion affecting the leasing of land in California to corporations made up of American citizens and Japs or other persons ineligible to citizenship.

The opinion deals with penalties for violation of the State Alien Land Law, first, in the matter of the leasing of land by a corporation a minority of whose stockholders are ineligible to citizenship; second, in the matter of the leasing of land by a corporation a majority of whose stockholders are ineligible to citizenship.

"Assuming even that a corporation was organized before the Alien Land Law of 1913 went into effect," Attorney-general Webb rules, "the stock of the minority stockholders would escheat to the state, in the first case, while in the case of a corporation composed mainly of aliens ineligible to citizenship the land itself would escheat to the state."

ACROSS THE PLAINS IN FIFTY

MAY 12 1851, WILLIAM E. PEARCE, A Pioneer of 1850, wrote from Nevada City, California, to his father in England, a letter giving, in brief, an account of his trip across the plains and his experiences in the gold mines. The original of the letter, which is presented here, is in the possession of Pearce's daughter, Mrs. William L. Jarrott, a resident of Los Angeles.

"This time I write from the far-off golden California, the land that has taken so many thousands from friends and home. I would have written long before this, but I delayed because I hoped to be able to tell you in my first letter that I had made a fortune. But it appears that my turn has not come yet; how soon, the Lord knows, but I am living in hopes and trying hard at the same time. I am happy to say, however, I have been in the best of health ever since I left the states. True, I have been laid up for the last week with a sprained ankle, but it is getting well fast. I was cutting under a high bank of earth and, coming down sooner than I expected, it nearly buried me and crushed my foot badly. I wrote to you just before I left the states over a year ago, and I thought you would like to hear from me by this time. I know I shall be most happy to hear from home, for it is so long since I had a letter I feel quite an exile from everybody in England.

"I ought to tell you something about our trip across the plains. I started for Oregon with a company from Beardstown, on the Illinois River. We had thirteen wagons, some worked with mules, some with oxen and some with horses—mostly oxen. Our boss used oxen, with horses to ride when we were not driving the team. Our starting point was Independence, on Missouri River next the Indian country. Camping here and waiting for the grass to grow for about two weeks, we finally left on April 27, 1850, the civilized world for a trip of 2,100 miles overland. The first part of the trip was splendid. The very novelty of the thing was the fun of it. Imagine seventy-five or a hundred scapegraces from 18 to 25 years of age with fine fresh horses scouring over a country very much like the Downs of Old Dorset, and dressed in every kind of style. And every one of them armed to the teeth, while a hundred Indians rode with them and reined their mettled steeds in opposition. Fine times, fine weather, and fiddling and dancing in the camp every night after supper.

"This state of things only lasted about ten days, when matters changed wonderfully. We were out about 200 miles from the settlements and the corn, oats, etc., which we had taken in the wagons, began to fail, while the grass was too young yet to support the animals. The Indians through here were hostile and thievish, never missing an opportunity to steal a horse or a mule. The weather had now turned very wet and cold. Very few of us, as far as I could judge, seemed to admire standing guard when it came our turn. I own, myself, that I more than once dreaded that standing guard away from the camp, the nights dark and cold and rainy, straining the eyes to be sure that some old black stump of a tree was not an Indian watching to shoot you; or startled by the howl of the prairie-wolf within ten feet of your heels. This way of spending a night, after a long day's journey, was not so pleasant as sleeping in a house and on a feather bed.

"We soon struck the California road from St. Joseph. This road was crowded with wagons full of emigrants to the gold mines, and grass got scarcer than ever until, the 15th of May, we got to Fort Kearney on the Platte River. Here the feed was pretty good and our animals began to travel better and we had better times along there. Buffalo began to give us some sport, and fresh meat, too. But they are hard to kill, their hide is so thick. I have seen them shot at least a dozen times and then not brought down; a ball will glance from the head all day long, unless you hit the eye, when their beef is yours. Certainly the meat is not so good as beef, but nothing to turn up your nose at on the plains. We arrived at Fort Laramie June 1st, 700 miles of our journey. But many a wagon I have seen turning back home, disheartened with the trip, long before we got here at this place. We bought a few provisions and again pushed ahead, for we were anxious to keep the advantage we had gained by so early a start and to keep clear of the rush behind us. We sometimes heard of the sufferings of those behind us—how their animals died for want of food and how, leaving their wagons, they had to foot it.

"About this time we were getting pretty well up toward the Rocky Mountains and we began to see the elephant and feel him. Here feed was scarce and water poisonous. The road is strewn along with every sort of dead animal, putrid and rotting in the sun, offensive and sickening to view. And then the roads—I can't begin to describe them! And hills almost steep enough to make a horse fall back. It often took all the cattle in the train just to pull up one wagon, beside the aid of ropes. And then the descent of some of those mountains was worse yet. It almost made me giddy to look down. June 15th we reached the summit of the dividing ridge of the Rocky Mountains. The weather, which had been so hot and oppressive, was now as cold as winter, with ice and snow all around us. We trudged along, but all the romance of our trip was gone, and to ease our jaded horses we had to walk nearly all the time. And soon we had to cross deserts, with not a blade of grass for fifty miles; nothing but sand, sand, and then the sun. When our train moved very slowly we had to travel sometimes all night to get that very necessary element, water, and grass for our famishing animals.

"It was comical enough to see the figures we cut once in a while. The dust along the road is generally very fine, ankle deep and of different colors—black, white, red, yellow, etc. The wagons are nearly all the time enveloped in a cloud of it, while the perspiration made it stick to our faces. About this time you might have seen a chap about my size tramping along the road pretty well tired of the whole concern. Clothes all torn to rags, boots that scarcely deserved the name; to look at them you would have allowed that at any rate I had exerted my ingenuity to keep sole and body together. And my hat—but I had none—and a red handkerchief tied round my head answered all purposes. But I am tiring your patience. Well, we passed Fort Hall about the last of June, 1,300 miles, and in two days left the California trail.

"We were now in the Oregon Territory, but the most of it is barren and desolate except in spots. After crossing the Blue Mountains the country looks much better. We were now alone, none of the emigrants were going to Oregon and we had no company except the wild Indians on

Have you forgotten the trickery of President Coolidge and supporters at the presidential primaries in May? How they caused newspapers to announce Sunday, Monday and Tuesday "President Coolidge Favors Japanese Exclusion"? How on Wednesday, a day after the primaries, he renewed his efforts to defeat exclusion? How he flouted the white people of the Pacific in his message on the immigration-exclusion act?

MORELAND TRUCKS and BUSES Have Demonstrated California's Superior Manufacturing Possibilities

Fourteen years ago when the Moreland Trucks were first made, many people scoffed at the idea that quality manufactured products could be made in California.

In 1923, over $4,000,000 worth of Moreland Trucks and Buses were sold in direct competition with the leading makes in the United States.

The Moreland Company has demonstrated California's manufacturing possibilities by building trucks and buses of a quality unexcelled by any produced anywhere in this country.

ELECTION NOVEMBER 4th 1924

LOS ANGELES BULLETIN

TO INSTITUTE NEW N. S. PARLOR

VAQUERO IS THE NAME SELECTED for the new parlor of Native Sons of the Golden West which will be instituted November 11, when the Board of Grand Officers gather here from all parts of the state. Efforts of the new link in Native Sonism will be largely devoted toward reviving the spirit and customs of the old Southern California festival days. The new parlor will meet the first and third Tuesdays at the old Vaquero adobe, built in 1850, on the Lugo ranch, and the second and fourth Tuesdays in Native Sons' Hall, 134 West Seventeenth street.

At an organization meeting October 9 at which Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer presided, the following officers were selected, and various committees were appointed to assure Vaquero attaining its "place in the sun": Sidney W. Neighbors, junior past president; Edward E. Ayers, president; Herbert M. Ford, first vice-president; Milton L. Wicks, second vice-president; John G. Johnson, third vice-president; James Smith Jr., recording secretary; George Hickson, financial secretary; James A. Bottiller, marshal; David E. Jones, inside sentinel; John F. Foster, outside sentinel; Harry C. Gutsch, treasurer; Miguel Nicaroli, Jose B. Rico, Arthur Malhein, trustees. More than 100 charter members are promised.

At the time of the institution of Vaquero, the Board of Grand Officers, headed by Grand President Edward J. Lynch of San Francisco, will initiate large classes of candidates for all the Los Angeles County Parlors—Los Angeles 45, Ramona 109 (Los Angeles), Corona 196 (Los Angeles), Long Beach 239 and Pasadena 259. Unless present indications are deceiving, this will be the biggest initiation in point of numbers ever conducted by the Native Sons. The institution and initiatory ceremonies will be held at Knights of Columbus auditorium, 612 South Flower street. An immense attendance is anticipated, for in addition to the local members of the Order, the ceremonies will be attended by machineloads of visitors from San Diego and San Bernardino.

There is every prospect that, in the very near future, a branch of the Order of Native Sons will be instituted at San Pedro. A charter petition, now in circulation, has close to one hundred signatures attached. Glendale and Pomona are on the prospective-list, too, with most favorable indications, according to Deputy Grand President Mayrhofer.

SPEAKS ON JAP QUESTION.

V. S. McClatchy of San Francisco, secretary of the California Joint Immigration Committee, embracing the California American Legion, State Federation of Labor, Master State Grange and Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, addressed the Native Sons, the Native Daughters and the general public of Los Angeles at Ramona Hall, October 24, on the Jap question, with which he is, perhaps, more familiar than any other man, having long made a study of it from the local, national and international viewpoints.

McClatchy's remarks centered mainly about the Immigration Law, with the ineligible-to-citizenship exclusion provision, enacted by the last Congress, much to the dislike of President Coolidge and Secretary of State Hughes. He also referred to the recent peace conference at Geneva, where Japan, which is opposed to the exclusion of its nationals via the Immigration Law, had its way in the drawing up of a peace agreement.

"In the matter of Japanese immigration to this country," said the speaker, "Japan, in my judgment, has been induced within the past six months to place herself in a false and embarrassing position by listening to the unwise counsel of those in this country whom she regards as her friends."

"I do not question the good faith of these friends to Japan. I do question their discretion. They," meaning the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the Commission for International Goodwill, the California Protestant Church Federation, etc., "are either ignorant of, or blind to, the fundamental facts and principles in the case," he continued, and then proceeded to enlighten his hearers on those facts and principles.

"What is true as to the facts and as to the attitude of Congress in late May when the President"—after it had been made very plain to him that Congress would pass the Immigration Bill over his veto, if he failed to sign it because of the exclusion provision, to which he strenuously objected,—"signed the bill, is equally true today. And public sentiment, which generally endorsed the principle of exclusion then, is becoming more pronounced now in its approval of the course taken by Congress as the detailed reasons therefor become known."—C.M.H.

If you vote "YES" on Initiative Measure Number Eleven you will save the Klamath River power, worth (says the Electro-Metals Company) $108,000,000, for the people of the State; and when public interest shall call for the abandonment of fish conservation in favor of power, the people can exercise an initiative repeal. Then you can sell the power site, develop it—or give it away, which your State Water Commission and Federal Power Commission are now trying to do.

The Klamath River is still ours. Keep it so by voting "YES" on Initiative Measure Number Eleven. Help save just one California river by voting "YES."

California Conservation League and Fish and Game Commission of California

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

CALIFORNIA WAS VISITED DURING November 1874 by three heavy rainstorms. The heaviest began the 22nd and lasted several days.

The Feather and Yuba Rivers rose to high-water mark, and Marysville, Yuba County, was partially inundated. The stable there of L. B. Ayers fell from the effects of the flood, killing Thomas Hammell. The building and equipment contained therein were totally wrecked, causing $10,000 damages.

The railroad line between Sacramento and Dixon, Solano County, was washed out in numerous places.

Thursday, November 26, was, by proclamation, declared Thanksgiving Day. Dinner supplies were cheap then, compared with prices since the war. Turkeys were 25c a pound, roosters and ducks 50c each, eggs 60c a dozen for California and 25c for Eastern, butter 45c a pound, green peas 4c, cabbage and tomatoes ½c, potatoes 1½c a pound, pineapples $5 a dozen and apples $1 a box.

A family in Vallejo, Solano County, had four generations at dinner. Great Grandfather Jamison was 83, and the youngest child but a month old.

Mrs. Arms, at San Jose, was 87 years old and now saw the seventh generation of the family arrive. She had known from her grandparents down to her great-great-grandchild.

Colonel Paul K. Hubbs, a prominent pioneer, died in Vallejo November 17 at the age of 75. He represented Tuolumne County in the State Senate of '52, and was California's first superintendent of public instruction.

Wadsworth Wadsworth, editor of the "Pacific Rural Press," died November 1 at Sacramento. He was not only an early-day editor, but a pioneer in the California beet-sugar industry. When a young man in Connecticut he was the author of the Wadsworth bird bill, passed by the Connecticut Legislature and still in force. It was the first protection bird bill enacted in the United States.

The great $25,000 four-mile-and-repeat running race of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club drew an immense crowd to the Bay District track, San Francisco, November 14. "Katie Pease," an Eastern thoroughbred, won in two heats—7:43 ¾. 7:36 ¾. The club cleaned up $26,500.

November 21 there was a trotting race, two in three, to wagon. "Judge" won in the best time on record in similar events—2:20 ½.

There was another trotting event November 28. "Occident" winning in three fast heats—2:19, 2:20, 2:20 ½.

Panamint Mines Bid Fair to Rival Comstock.

November saw a number of wild days on California street, San Francisco. The stock market boomed to higher prices without hesitation. On the 11th Ophir jumped from $60 to $175 a share. It afterward slumped to $90, playing havoc with the financial accounts of many brokers.

Con. Virginia, Crown Point and Belcher paid $938,000 in dividends. During the month Con. Virginia went from $115 a share to $200, California from $50 to $80, but Crown Point and Belcher dropped below $50. The market was in terrific agitation and fortunes were made and lost daily.

When the price of Ophir slumped from $165 to $90 in a few hours a Chinaman entered a broker's office on Montgomery street and, pointing to a price list of stocks posted on the wall, asked: "How him look?" "Down," laconically answered the broker. "Heap hell!" said the Chinaman as he sauntered off.

A pocket found in the Mount Pleasant mine near Grizzly Flat, El Dorado County, yielded $5,120. It was struck by some leasers and resulted in a lawsuit, with the sheriff in charge through a writ of attachment.

The town of Silverado was established near Calistoga, Napa County, as a result of the silver mine development on Mount Saint Helena. A new ledge of silver ore, assaying $3,000 a ton, was discovered there during the month.

The Sheep Ranch mine in Calaveras County produced $61,000 this year.

George Kline on French Gulch, Shasta County, discovered a quartz ledge that assayed $700 a ton. Some decomposed quartz was found that yielded $1 a pound. In a few hours $1,000 was taken out, with plenty more in sight.

The development of the Panamint mines was so big it was expected they would rival the Comstock Lode in extent and richness. There were nearly 1,000 miners employed, and about as many saloonkeepers, gamblers and other gentry were there engaged in separating them from their money. A visitor reported frequently seeing jack-pots in which over $2,000 was bet. Stage lines from Los Angeles and Bakersfield were operating to capacity; $40 was charged for the three-day trip.

The new mint in San Francisco was completed and accepted by the Federal Government November 1.

E. Sherwood donated to the town of Salinas, Monterey County, sixty acres of land for a public park and racetrack.

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting of the citizens of Petaluma, Sonoma County, November 3 to inaugurate the building of a railroad from Petaluma to the bay at San Quentin. It was to be called the Sonoma and Marin Railroad Company. A committee to solicit and receive subscriptions to stock was appointed.

Shortage of Houses in Los Angeles.

The clipper "Three Brothers" sailed for Havre from San Francisco October 24 1873 and returned November 8 1874, making the round trip in 380 days. It was considered the best clipper on the seas.

A hunter named Matthews in Monterey County killed 105 deer this month.

Steele Bros. sold 13,000 acres of land in San Luis Obispo County for $200,000.

A big sale of real estate at Lompoc, Santa Barbara County, November 1 drew a large crowd. Some of the 5,223 acres sold as high as $90 an acre. Total sales amounted to $345,000.

At an auction sale in San Francisco the Lick House was disposed of for $920,000. Other real estate of James Lick, the philanthropic Pioneer, that was sold brought $1,039,595, making $1,959,595 the result of the sale.

There was a shortage of houses for rent in Los Angeles and a hundred or more families were domiciled with generous residents awaiting an opportunity to get a home.

November 11 the steamboat "Sacramento," plying between Vallejo and San Francisco, caught fire from an exploded coal-oil lamp and burned at its wharf. There was a $20,000 loss.

The Los Angeles Water Co. sued the Herald Publishing Co. for $25,000 damages for the publication of a statement that the water furnished was impure and unwholesome.

E. I. Robinson, an attorney, sued the Sacramento "Union" for $10,000 libel damages. It was a political mess growing out of a primary election in which the "Union" charged fraud. The case was on trial this month, and the jury found a verdict for the defendant.

A proposition came from citizens of Antioch, Contra Costa County, for people to use tule shoots, young and tender, for food, following the example of the Russians.

Wm. Thomas, at Los Angeles, was preparing to plant a 50,000-acre orchard in that county.

THE STORY OF THE PINE

MONTEREY—IN CELEBRATION OF the seventy-fifth anniversary of the signing of the First Constitution of California, a very interesting ceremony, to which justices of the Supreme and Appellate Courts and officials of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West were especially invited, was arranged by the citizens for October 10.

The afternoon festivities centered at historic Colton Hall, where the constitution was signed October 10 1849. A program of music and the following addresses was featured: "The Old Dominion," Father R. M. Mestres; "The Missions," Justice William H. Waste (Berkeley 210 N.S.G.W.); "The Pathfinder," Senator James D. Phelan (Pacific 10 N.S.G.W.); "The Constitution of '49," Chief Justice Louis W. Myers; "The Framers of the Constitution," Judge Bradley V. Sargent; "The Native Sons and Daughters," Justice Thomas J. Lennon (Mount Tamalpais 64 N.S.G.W.); "The First Capital of California," Carmel Martin.

In the evening there was a banquet, at which J. A. Bardin was the toastmaster. Father R. M. Mestres offered the Divine blessing, and Judge F. A. Treat extended the greetings of the Monterey County bench and bar, which was responded to by Justice W. H. Langdon (Modesto 11 N.S.G.W.). Spanish songs and dances interspersed the following responses to toasts:

"The Spanish Cavalier, Mariano G. Vallejo," Justice Emmet Seawell (Santa Rosa 28 N.S.G.W.); "California," Edward J. Lynch, Grand President N.S.G.W.; "The State Legislature," Senator Charles C. Baker; "The Supreme Court, Justice William P. Lawlor; "The Southland," Justice John W. Shenk.

"Old Monterey" was the subject assigned Justice John E. Richards (Observatory 177 N.S.G.W.) and he responded with an original poem, "The Story of the Pine," which deals with the discovery and settlement of historic Monterey. So well received was the poem, that the banqueters suggested its preservation by publication in The Grizzly Bear. It follows:

I am the patriarch of the pines,
The father of the wood;

Through summer suns and winter winds
Of centuries I have stood,
Where meet the ocean and the bay
Which modern men call Monterey.

Long, long ago, when youth was mine,
Amid the rocks and sand,
I grew a tall and lonely Pine,
Within a lonely land;
And watched, a single sentinel tree,
Beside an undiscovered sea.

Then came a rude and savage race
Of simple, stolid men,
To make their brief abiding place
Beneath my shade, and then
To wander without thought or care
Of wiser people elsewhere.

But lo! one eve, beside the Sun,
A wide sail glistened white;
A loud and unaccustomed gun
Resounded through the night:
At morn, Cabrillo's vessels lay
Within the broad arms of the bay.

The fateful storm, the breakers roar
Forbade the Spaniard's stay,
And warned him from the friendly shore;
But, ere he bore away,
He swept its surf-encircled lines,
And christened this "The Bay of Pines."

Anon, across the western sky,
From orient lands of sun
And isles of spice, came creeping by
The freighted galleon;
And hovering fiercely on its wake,
The pirate fleet of Francis Drake.

A new-born century saw the ships,
Which bold Viscaino bore,
Rise where the round horizon dips,
Seeking this wooded shore;
And heard, amid my forest dim,
The Carmelite chant his solemn hymn.

The Spaniard went, and solitude
Resumed her ancient reign

Over the ocean, bay and wood;
The waning power of Spain
Bade no bold captains to the West,
To scourge its seas or break its rest.

No shadow from the troubled world
Crossed my horizon lines;
No state its bloody flag unfurled
Among my peaceful pines;
The savage grandsire mumbled o'er
A dim tradition by the shore.

So crept the sleepy years along,
Until, one bright June morn,
Through the wide woodland went a song
On scented breezes borne;
It was the Mission Fathers, come
To seek a settlement and home.

They built their church beside the sand
And swung the mission bell

About Bills

By R. R. PEARSON, Chief Bookkeeper

HOW are my gas and electric bills made up?" asks the interested consumer. The process is quite simple and accurate, resulting in very few complaints from the 400,000 bills rendered each month.

First, the addressing department stamps the consumer's name and address in three places on the blank bill forms. This is done by automatic machines, each of which has a capacity of 16,000 bills per 8-hour day.

Next, the stamped bills go to the bookkeeper for comparison with the ledgers. They are then sent to the billing room, where the billing clerks insert the meter readings as shown by the meter readers' "statement books", and also the reading dates, total gas or electricity used and the amount of the bill. The total consumption and the amount of the bill are automatically calculated by the billing machines.

The bills as thus completed are again sent to the bookkeepers, who check them with their ledger records for any possible errors before they are presented to the consumers.

It requires the services of 118 persons to make up the bills for the consumers of Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation.

Which answered back across the land
From Carlos to Carmel;
To virgin vales they gave increase;
To savage souls they whispered peace.

But all too soon the evil strife
Of men from many climes,
Destroyed the peaceful mission life,
And stained the land with crimes;
While stronger people watched the prize
Of these rich shores with lustful eyes.

One summer morn, a stately ship
Sailed up the sunlit bay,
Flaunting a flag which did not dip
To other flag that day;
But, high uplifted on the shore,
Proclaimed the old dominion o'er.

Beneath that banner's ample fold
Gathered, with swift increase,
A restless race athirst for gold,
Yet skilled in arts of peace;
And strong to found, in laws secure,
An ordered state which should endure.

For gold they delve in mountain mines,
For gold they sift the sands,
They make the valleys laugh in vines,
And till the fertile lands,
To freight their ships for every shore,
Whose traffic swells their golden store.

But when, their weary spirits spent
In that mad race for wealth,

They sigh for peace and sweet content
And seek for rest and health,
To my wide woods beside the bay
They come, and dream their cares away

And, wandering in my woodlands dim,
Or lingering by the shore,
They seem to hear the solemn hymn
The padres sung of yore;
While echoes of a mission bell,
Sweep through the pines from old Carmel.

L' ENVOI.

The cypress and the pine trees swing
Their censors in the breeze;
The surges of the ocean sing
The chanson of the seas;
The brooding spirit of a rare
Romantic past pervades the air,
With incense of that elder day
Which was and is "Old Monterey."

"Many a tale of former day shall wing the

UNCLE SAM TAKES ANOTHER

FALL OUT OF JOHNNY BULL.

Stockton Uncle Sam has taken another fall out of Johnny Bull in friendly competition. Add San Joaquin County's potato victory to the long list of Yankee achievements! For it was officially announced at the Potato Day celebration October 18 that the peat soil of the San Joaquin delta has yielded the enormous total of 57,752.75 pounds of Burbank potatoes from one surveyed acre. The record was certified by federal, state and county officials.

This tremendous yield, surpassing any ever before recorded in America or Europe, as far as could be learned, was made under ordinary field conditions, with no special preparation for competition. The former world's record yield, held by Great Britain, was twenty-four long tons, or 53,760 pounds. It will be seen that the delta land yield exceeded this record by two tons! The highest previous American yields, officially recorded by the United States Department of Agriculture, were 692.7 bushels per acre in Nevada County, California, in 1916, and 700 bushels per acre in Maine.

In Memoriam

FRANCES DUNN SUENDERMAN.

To the Officers and Members of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181 Native Daughters of the Golden West—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect and condolence to the memory of our dear departed sister, Frances Dunn Suenderman, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom has called from our midst our dearly beloved sister, Frances Dunn Suenderman, thus taking from us one of our most devoted and loyal members—a faithful and true friend whose loss is deeply felt by all, especially those nearest and dearest to her.

None knew her but to love her

None named her but to praise

Resolved, That we, the members of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181 N.D.G.W. extend to the bereaved husband and family our deepest sympathy, and he further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our departed sister, to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Parlor.

SAN FRANCISCO BULLETIN

SPANISH FAMILIES VANISHING

"THE NAMES OF CALIFORNIA'S original Spanish families are vanishing from our land," said George H. Barron, curator of the Golden Gate Memorial Museum, in a recent address before the California Historical Society.

"Only a few of these family names are now to be found in the northern part of the state, although there are more survivors south of Tehachapi," the speaker said. "In some northern places a few female members of the Spanish families still exist, their identity being merged with newcomers through marriage. But male representatives are scarce. The Anglo-Saxon race has supplanted the former inhabitants. The generous, free-handed Spaniards saw their lands and haciendas slipping away from them, and as they realized that they no longer were able to maintain families in the way to which they were accustomed, many remained unmarried, and the sons who would have perpetuated these proud names were never born."

Curator Barron reported that he has recently had three surprises. The first was a visit from the great-grandnephew of Father Crispi, the noted diarist, who accompanied Father Junipero Serra; the second was a visit from the granddaughter of Dana, who wrote "Two Years Before the Mast." For years he has searched for a member of the family of Dr. Robert Semple, and at last succeeded in finding a grandniece of the distinguished Pioneer who, with Judge Colton at Monterey, edited the first American paper in this state, "The Californian."

CEMETERIES' REMOVAL UP FOR DECISION.

The question of the removal of the burial places of many California Pioneers—Calvary, Laurel Hill, Odd Fellows' and Masonic cemeteries—will be submitted to San Francisco's voters at the November 4 election for final decision.

It would seem that the city by the Golden Gate, which has become a great metropolis mainly through the endeavors of the Pioneers, could well afford to purchase the properties and turn them into public parks, dedicated to the memories of those Pioneers who rest therein.—C.M.H.

HEAR OF EARLY DAYS.

At the social session October 20 of the Daughters of California Pioneers, Mrs. Alma Craig Chisholm president, the following program was presented:

"Early Days in San Francisco," Mrs. John W. Classen; reading, Nancy Buckley; "Reminiscences of James Lick," Mrs. James J. Donnelly. Mmes. John H. Ahnden, A. J. Norris Hill, Fred Bartels, Walter A. Scott made up the reception committee.

BONDS VOTED.

By a vote of more than twenty to one—68,513 to 3,354—San Francisco's citizens October 7 approved a $10,000,000 bond issue for continuation of work on the Hetch Hetchy water project.

San Francisco—Bank clearings: $698,900,000 (1924), $651,500,000 (1923). Building permits: $5,671,784 (1924), $2,907,389 (1923).

Oakland—Bank clearings: $69,030,296 (1924), $63,589,890 (1923). Building permits: $2,502,144 (1924), $2,068,124 (1923).

LUNCHEON CLUB GROWS.

The San Francisco Native Sons' Luncheon Club is steadily growing, now having 150 members. At each meeting a speaker enlightens those assembled on matters of general interest, and much benefit is derived.

October 1, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Will C. Wood (Halcyon 146 N.S.G.W.) spoke on "The School System of California." October 15 the finances of the state and the workings of the various state institutions were explained by Lieutenant-Governor C. C. Young.

November 5, Supervisor Ralph McLeran (California 1 N.S.G.W.) will address the club on "The Finances of San Francisco." All Native Sons are invited to attend the luncheons, which are held the first and third Wednesdays.

RELICS OF GOLD DAYS SHOWN.

As part of her endeavors to keep alive the memories of the Pioneers, Mrs. Ella Sterling-Mighels (Hayward 122 N.D.G.W.) conducted an Admission Day program at the Hamilton grammar-school which was greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. Mighels also exhibited a shawl, brought to California in the '40s by her mother, and a gold-rocker used by miners on the American River near Folsom, Sacramento County, in the gold-rush days, and later utilized as a cradle for herself when she was an infant.

RITUAL TEAM VISITS.

The ritual team of Yerba Buena Parlor No. 84 N.S.G.W. journeyed to Petaluma October 20 and exemplified the ritual for the benefit of a large class of candidates for Petaluma Parlor No. 27.

The team consists of: Frank Stone, president; Walter Wieden, first vice-president; Walter Daly, second vice-president; Bob Nelson, third vice-president; Ralph Freese, marshal; George Guen-

ARE "DROVES OF PEOPLE LEAVING LOS ANGELES DAILY"?

Registration figures indicate increase or decrease in population. For the November 4 election, the registrations in Los Angeles County total 610,000—340,000 within and 270,000 without the City of Los Angeles. The total gain, compared with registrations for the August primary this year is 37,861—20,952 within and 16,909 without the city.

These figures do not bear out the claim very frequently made during the past six months that "droves of people are leaving Los Angeles daily." On the other hand, the following registration statistics substantiate the claim that Los Angeles' population is continually on the increase:

1920 presidential election—Total county registration, 386,366; 234,600 within city, 151,766 without.

1922 general state election—Total county registration, 447,318; 251,947 within city, 195,371 without.

1924—May primary: Total, 523,571; 286,596 within, 236,975 without. August primary: Total, 572,139; 319,048 within, 253,091 without. November presidential: Total, 610,000; 340,000 within, 270,000 without.

In just four years, or since the 1920 presidential election, the Los Angeles County registrations have increased just 223,634, or more than 55 percent.

School for Growers—A practical school for growers of deciduous fruits and grapes is to be conducted at Van Nuys, Los Angeles County, November 17 to 22.

CALIFORNIA PROSPERITY IS GENERAL

THAT PROSPERITY IS GENERAL throughout California, is evidenced by the figures contained in statement number sixteen, issued by the State Controller's Department at Sacramento, which deals with property values, indebtedness, taxation rate, etc., for each of the state's fifty-eight counties for 1924.

The grand total value of all property this year is $6,661,409,392; last year it was $5,716,358,058, an increase of $845,051,334 for the current year. The 1923 increase over 1922 was $580,373,495. The total value of property returned by county auditors this year is $6,340,891,049; last year it was $5,417,538,598. This year's total value of railroads, assessed by the State Board of Equalization, is $320,518,343; last year's was $298,819,460. Other interesting comparative figures follow:

Real estate	$3,052,687,156	$2,582,163,319
Improvements	1,429,950,120	1,233,216,369
Personal property	981,875,717	813,242,214
Money, & other credits	75,058,240	63,150,301
Nonoperative property	5,519,083,503	4,691,753,337
Operative property	$21,807,186	725,757,261

One fact that the taxpayer should give particular heed to, is this: The total indebtedness of all the counties is given in the report as $125,319,018.74, mostly due to bond issues. Compared with last year's figures, the increase amounts to $9,195,723.50. The counties free of debt are: Alpine, Amador, Calaveras, Humboldt, Madera, Marin, Mariposa, Mono, Nevada, Placer, Shasta, Sierra, Siskiyou, Trinity, Tuolumne and Yuba.

The following counties have more than a million acres of land assessed: Kern 3,709,694, San Bernardino 2,503,882, Fresno 2,178,000, Siskiyou 1,901,099, Riverside 1,788,201, Mendocino 1,787,012, Humboldt 1,710,938, San Luis Obispo 1,696,379, Shasta 1,542,930, Monterey 1,518,211, Tehama 1,384,382, Los Angeles 1,242,197, San Diego 1,201,785, Merced 1,192,000, Imperial 1,172,028, Santa Barbara 1,045,536. San Francisco is the smallest county in number of assessed acres of land, having but 29,760.

Los Angeles County went up into the two-billion-dollar class this year. The grand total value of all property there is $2,716,223,805. Compared with last year, this is an increase of $724,155,711, the 1923 total being $1,992,068,094. The county's total indebtedness almost doubled, going from $3,702,901 last year to $7,266,465.70 this year.

These pertinent facts regarding Los Angeles County, revealed by the figures in State Controller Ray L. Riley's report, are worthy of re-counting: Of the grand total value of all property in California ($6,661,409,392), more than 40 percent ($2,716,223,805) is credited to this one county. Of the gain in total value for the whole state for 1924 compared with 1923 ($845,051,334), more than 85 percent ($724,155,711) is credited to this single county. Los Angeles also has, by far, the lowest tax-rate of all the counties—$1.12 (inside), $1.46 (outside) on each $100 of assessed valuation.

Alpine County, in which the grand total value of all property is the least, is credited with a gain of $89,329, the figures being $896,878 (1924), $807,549 (1923). It has a tax-rate of $1.90.

San Francisco, which has the only combined city and county government in the state, increased its grand total value of all property by $72,522,553, going from $916,695,517 last year to $989,217,070 this year. Its total indebtedness increased from $68,563,600 last year to $76,306,000 this year. The tax-rate is $3.47.

trants. The list includes:

HUMBOLDT COUNTY ESTABLISHES SAVE THE REDWOODS FUND.

Eureka.—A fund of $25,000 has been appropriated by the Board of Supervisors of Humboldt County for the purpose of saving the redwoods.
The amount was provided for in the tax levy for the ensuing year as the beginning of a Save the Redwoods Fund to be utilized as needed in completing the redwood park system in Humboldt County.

Humboldt County previously appropriated $85,000 toward saving redwood timber in the Humboldt State Redwood Park. This brings the total sum appropriated by that county to over $100,000. The action on the part of Humboldt County followed the formal determination of the Board of Supervisors of Del Norte County to set aside an annual fund for the saving of redwoods along the state highway in that county.

MORE SCHOOL ROOM.

The Board of Education has approved building plans that will accommodate an additional 50,000 Los Angeles school children by September 1 of next year. The continued growth of the city makes it near impossible to keep Los Angeles supplied with adequate public-school accommodations.

The approved building program provides for the erection of several modern structures, as well as the enlargement of many now standing.
It is expected that when the program is completed all temporary accommodations may be eliminated and every child provided full-day schooling.

PREPARING FOR BUILDERS' MEET.

The Los Angeles Builders' Exchange has under way the program for the entertainment of the delegates to the National Association of Builders' Exchanges which meets in the Angel
City February 23 to 26 next year.

It is estimated 300 representatives of the building industry will be in attendance. In its entertainment plans the Los Angeles Exchange will have the hearty support of neighboring exchanges.

SEPTEMBER BUILDING RECORD.

Following are the September building-permit comparative figures for Los Angeles County, reported by the California Development Association:

Los Angeles City—$13,090,467 (1924), $14,- 099,353 (1923).

Long Beach—$2,368,746 (1924), $1,409,462
(1923).

Pasadena—$923,899 (1924), $1,601,338
(1923).

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY R. H. TAYLOR

PRACTICAL TEST FARM BOOKKEEPING

LAST MONTH WE DISCUSSED THE question of keeping books on the farm and pointed out the opportunity now offered farmers through the willingness of the banks to assist them in this important phase of farm work. There is no argument half so effective as that of the man who has done the thing proposed, so we give one actual case to prove our point.

One farmer has kept accounts over two years. He found at the end of the first year that crops which he fed to livestock brought him more money than when sold outright and that his methods of handling his hogs were efficient. His figures showed him, however, that his cows were poor, averaging only $34 per cow for dairy products. Comparing his figures with other farms in the state, he also found the number of acres cultivated per man on his farm, as well as the number of acres per horse, were below average. These comparative figures were furnished him by his county farm advisor.

Acting on the information his account book gave him, this man rented more land and replanned his 12 small, irregular fields, making them into 9 fields of better proportion, so that the crop area per man was increased 26 acres and the area per horse increased 3 acres. He sold two scrub cows and bought three cows of good dairy records. When he figured his accounts for the second year and compared the two years, he found that the income from the farm, after paying all expenses and interest on the amount of money invested, had been increased over $350.

EXTRAORDINARY STATEMENT.

The following statement appeared in the "Honolulu Advertiser," under date of July 25: "Coast Need Not Fear Fruit Fly. Pest Flourishes in Warmer Climates Only, View of A. L. C. Atkinson."

California need not be afraid of the fruit fly, which it is trying to keep out by stringent quarantine measures, A. L. C. Atkinson, president of the territorial board of agriculture and forestry, believes. It is on account of the supposed danger from the fly that Hawaiian fruits cannot be sent to the mainland.

Atkinson does not base his arguments on scientific principles, but on common-sense. The fly was brought here from the Orient and there has been just as much opportunity for it to be introduced into California as there has been for it to come here, he says. In fact, he firmly believes that the fly has been introduced into mainland ports thousands of times, but has never developed there.

The fly is found in numbers only in warm climates and would never be able to live in California, Atkinson believes. If it should live, he points out that there are known parasites and that the fly could be destroyed by parasites before any great damage was done should it be found to live in cooler climates.

In commenting upon the above statement, G. H. Hecke, our own director of agriculture, recently pointed to the fact that Hawaii's largest fruit crops are admitted into the United States with little or no restriction. These are pineapples and bananas, being practically the only fruits grown commercially in that territory that are not subject to the attacks of the fruit fly, and which, it may be stated, have been able to survive solely because of this circumstance. All other branches of the fruit and vegetable industry have been pretty badly hit.

While it may be open to debate as to just how much of a menace the two fruit flies, the Mediterranean and the Melon, would be to the State of California, there is a factor which Atkinson has apparently not given serious consideration, namely: California's fruit and melon industries, both of which contain fruits which are among the chosen food plants of the fruit flies, aggregate an f.o.b. value of more than $250,000,000 annually. The question might well be asked, "Can California look with calmness upon any pest which is likely to seriously affect these crops?" Is not California justified in seeking to assure the continued existence of these crops, which would not be if the fruit fly came in? Particularly is this so in view of the fact that in this state costs of production are high compared with those in other competing countries and profits are not high enough to overcome a fruit fly handicap.

It is a well-established fact that the territorial government of Hawaii has spent considerable money in financing expeditions to all parts of the world in an endeavor to find parasites that will help to reduce the numbers of the Mediterranean fly and the Melon fly. Thus far they have failed.

In regard to the claims made that the climate of California is too severe, it may be pointed out that there are a number of parts of the world where the mean annual range of temperature is just as severe as that in the fruit districts of California, yet the fly has been able to establish itself and has become a periodic menace. In this connection reference can be made to the southern part of France, South Africa, Australia and the Bermuda Islands. If Atkinson's so-called common-sense views are taken, is it not a common-sense view for California to seek to protect its investments and not jeopardize those industries that are so essential to its well being, for the sake of allowing to enter a small amount of fancy, tropical fruit, most of which will be used to garnish a few favored tables, in order that producers of those fruits in the Hawaiian Islands may find a market for their product?

Viewing the case in retrospection, California's experiences with foreign plant pests and diseases are not such as would lead it to adopt anything but a most careful policy in regard to insects possessing such potentialities as the fruit fly. The position of California in this regard must be fully maintained.

INTEREST IN CALENDAR SIMPLIFICATION.

The farmer, with others, is vitally interested in the matter of simplification of the calendar for perfectly obvious reasons. During the past two years there has been a wide recognition of the need for some form of simplification. Now that efforts are being made to bring about an international congress to consider the best way to do this, we believe the farmers should be thinking of the method being proposed by our own United States Department of Agriculture through the chief of the Weather Bureau. It is a form which would result in a year based on our present 7-day week as a unit. The year would consist of thirteen months of 28 days or exactly 4 weeks each, and an extra day. The suggestion is that this 365th or extra day be given a special name, such as "New Year's Eve" or other equivalent designation, made a world-wide holiday and placed between December 28 and January 1.

The extra month, for which a new name must also be invented, would be least likely to upset our present way of calculating, if introduced in midsummer, between June and July. "Leap Year Day," by whatever name it may be known, would be acceptable as a mid-summer holiday every four years. A slight change in the system of establishing century leap years is also recommended.

The division of the year into months, which are exact multiples of a 7-day week without a fractional remainder, will greatly simplify the assembling of meteorological data, accounting and paying in business and industry generally, whether in the city or on the farm, computing interest, and making many financial and other reckonings based on the calendar. Business men are in favor of an exact number of weeks in a quarter, and school terms and recesses could be arranged with much less disturbance to the curriculum than at present.

If such a congress succeeds in taking action before 1928, the nearest year in which January 1 falls on a Sunday under our present system, the change can be instituted without inconvenience.

CAPONIZING COCKERELS.

Within the last few years the business of producing capons has grown rapidly in this country, but not to the extent in California that the merits of the industry warrant. The state markets ought to consume more of this delicacy and we believe they would, if growers would produce them at the right time and at a reasonable cost.

The time of year when caponizing should be performed, so far as the effects of the operation and the rapidity and ease of healing are concerned, is of little importance. The capons seem to recover and do well at any time. Certain other considerations, however, do influence the time. The age and size of the cockerel are very important. As soon as the cockerels weigh 1½ to 2½ pounds, or when 2 to 4 months old, they should be operated upon. The lower age and weight limits apply particularly to the American breeds, while the higher apply to the Asiatics. If smaller than this their bodies do not give room to work handily. On the other hand they should never be over 6 months old, as by this time the testicles have developed to a considerable extent, the spermatic arteries carry larger amounts of blood, and the danger of pricking these arteries and causing the fowl to bleed to death is greatly increased.

The fact that capons are in greatest demand and bring the best prices from the Christmas season until the end of March, and that it takes about 10 months to grow and finish them properly, makes it important to hatch the chicks in early spring so that they will be of the proper size for caponizing in June, July and August. These are by far the most popular months for the operation, though in some cases it is performed still later.

GOOD STOCK SHOWS VALUE.

In support of increasing evidence that well-bred livestock pays a better return on investment than scrub stock, a Massachusetts dairyman notified the United States Department of Agriculture of his experience. He purchased a purebred heifer bred to a purebred bull of the same breed. The heifer cost $800. He sold the first bull calf for $300, and the second one for $400. The next calf, a heifer, sold for $125, and the milk produced by the cow during the 38 months covered by the report sold for $1,275. The total income thus received totaled $2,100, and the farmer still owns the original animal. The cow has made very creditable milk and butterfat records in the meantime, qualifying for the advanced register.

"I think this stock," the farmer states in conclusion, "shows the value of getting good purebred stock for a foundation. Even after making the deduction for feed and labor, there is a much larger return than from a grade."

Tillers of Soil to Confer—The fifty-seventh annual conference of California's fruit-growers and farmers will be held at Sacramento, December 9, 10 and 11, under the auspices of the State Department of Agriculture.

BOXING DEVOTEES WANT 10-ROUND BOUTS

(JACK DOYLE.)

Boxing devotees of California are intensely interested in the election of November 4, not only because of the national issues involved, but because of the proposed amendment No. 7 that will give state recognition to their favorite sport. Pointing to the huge success that boxing has been in sister states, where the sport has been recognized, backers of the amendment are asking support of the measure from friends of the boxing game when they go to the polls to cast their ballots.

The amendment provides for the appointment of a boxing commission by the governor, with full power to administer the affairs of the various clubs, to place the sport on a firm and substantial footing, and to issue licenses to boxers, managers, seconds, referees and clubs. It also provides that every club which obtains a license must be a bonafide organization, in order to protect legitimate organizations from the "fly-by-night" promoters who have been a decided detriment to the game in the past.

The measure also provides for the commission to collect a percentage of the receipts from each contest, thus making the board a self-sustaining organization. Reports from states where boxing is conducted under a legislative provision assert that the sport is one of the best revenue-producing departments of the state governments. New York, Minnesota, Wisconsin, New Jersey and many other states have conducted the professional sport on a legalized basis for many years, and each reports huge sums to the credit of the state government each year.

The amendment which will give California sport followers boxing upon a high plane and under the supervision of the state government will be listed on the ballot as amendment No. 7.

Californians must bear in mind that the recognition of ten-round bouts will in no way interfere with the conduct of the four-round bouts now permitted under existing state law. It means simply that the topnotchers of the boxing profession, now barred from participation in contests in California rings, will be permitted to meet worthy opponents when occasion demands. It will give California lovers of clean sport the opportunity of seeing the greatest boxers in the profession in action, without having to cross the continent to points where the professional game is recognized.

One of the strongest points supporters of the measure possess, is the fact that the amendment is approved by practically every man connected with amateur sport in the state. While the provisions of the present law give the amateur opportunity to bask in the limelight of sport, the amendment will give the professional boxer the same right. There is every indication, according to reports from all parts of the state, that the amendment will be placed upon the California statute books by a large majority.

ANOTHER MORELAND INVENTION

PROVES WESTERN PROGRESSIVENESS.

Competition among merchants of all kinds for additional trade has stimulated the Moreland Motor Truck Company to bring out a new type of vehicle—a low, drop-frame chassis. It satisfies the demand for greater speed for the delivery of merchandise to greater distances and is a new weapon in the hands of competitors for the battle of trade.

The advantages of these chassis are: extreme ease of loading and unloading on account of the low construction; low center of gravity assures safety in turning corners; special flexible springs together with low center of gravity give smoothness and comfort in running and ease in driving; the light yet strong construction, together with the powerful motor, imparts speed for short or long deliveries.

This new construction brought out by the Moreland Motor Truck Company of California furnishes another proof of Western progressiveness, in finding means to meet the keen competition of the day.

CALIFORNIA HAS MORE THAN

MILLION PUBLIC SCHOOL STUDENTS.

Sacramento—The 1924 enrollment in all branches of California's public-school system was 1,055,848, according to an announcement of Superintendent of Public Instruction Will C. Wood. Compared with 1923, this is an increase of 112,410.

Wood says the public-school growth the past ten years is the most remarkable in the state's history. In 1914 the enrollment was 513,319. Since then there has been an increase of 542,529, or 105.7 percent.

TO BOND AUTO OPERATORS.

Sacramento—At the coming session of the State Legislature, Assemblyman Percy G. West of this city will introduce a bill compelling all auto drivers to be bonded.

The purpose is to make possible the collection of damages resulting from auto accidents. At present, many operators carry no accident liability insurance, and having no assets, collection for damages awarded by courts is impossible.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW.

The Los Angeles Motor Car Dealers' Association will stage the twelfth annual automobile show at Exposition Park, November 1 to 9.

Four tents, with 162,000 square feet of floor space, will be utilized to house the exhibits. Three of the tents will be given over to autos, and the fourth to accessories. A decorative scheme is planned which, it is promised, will outclass any previous efforts along that line.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

FASHION PAYS HOMAGE TO TUNIC

THE ENSEMBLE COSTUME COMPLETELY dominates the 1924 fall and winter mode. The new ensemble consists of a matching wrap and frock, designed for morning, afternoon and evening wear. The ensemble idea has now reached the pinnacle of popularity and is enjoying with distinction the prestige fashion has so generously bestowed upon it.

Early autumn ensemble models disclose the extensive use of wool materials plaited in harmonious colors, combined with plain wool fabrics, particularly kasha. Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the chicness and serviceability of this soft-finished fabric.

A forecast of the evening mode indicates a season of brilliance, as far as gowns and wraps are concerned. Beading, embroidery, lace and jeweled elaborations are confined chiefly to trimming, and lines remain faithful to the ever fascinating straight, beltless, tube silhouette.

Metal fabrics, rich brocades, velvets, and sometimes sheer georgette crepe, top the list of favored materials. Rich colorings share honors with delicate pastel shades, and chantilly and silver lace promise to become favorites for adorning evening gowns.

Fashion pays homage to the tunic, Chinese in inspiration, Parisian in style adaptation and universal in becomingness. The tunic frock is one of the most definite modes emanating from the designers. From three-quarters to seven-eighths is the somewhat limited length range of the tunic, and quite frequently it flares at the lower edge and is banded with fur.

For evening wear, the tunic yields to elaborate metallic brocades and georgette crepe heavily embroidered with brilliantly-colored beads. Clever ways to simulate the tunic include the use of tiered treatments. Tunic lines also hold as important a part in formal modes as they do in street costumes.

An interesting design on this order shows a tunic in sheath suggestion with circular line at hem. The material is silk brocade over a foundation of metal lace. There are also charming interpretations of the tunic in pointed effects, usually with a silver or gold lace underskirt.

Skirts are generally short, even among costumes of the most formal sort, although there are women of distinctive style and individual taste to whom the extremely short skirt is not becoming. For this reason we find among the showings of practically all of the leading garments a more conservative length.

Evening gowns are unquestionably sleeveless. The favored decolletege of the season is usually lowest at the back, either in a deep "V" or deep "U" shape. Extreme models reach the waistline. The undecorated line at the neck is favored by many, while others favor rich bandings or impievements of fine lace.

Many of the new models show surplice lines simulating the side fastenings of coats and frocks. More simple models often show a rounded neckline in front and a moderately cut-out arrangement in back, defined by bands, which are outlined with embroideries and fur in both the natural and dyed pelts. This style is promised great vogue throughout the season.

Dyed fur has, to a great extent, supplanted the ostrich trimmings which were in such high favor last season. The pelts generally used as trimming for evening wraps are fox, either dyed or natural, Japanese mink, beaver, seal, squirrel, nutria and lynx. Leopard and wildcat are among the fur novelties of the season.

A stunning compliment to the new leopard trimmed costume is smart velvet in tones of brown, rich shadings that reach a climax in a bright feather at the side. The feather motif is held in place by trimmings resembling long leopard claws.

The fur-trimmed scarf is also an innovation of the season, and is carried out in many delightful and original ways.

Other trimmings for daytime dresses, coats and suits, are buttons, ornamental braids and embroideries. The latter are expressed in terms of wool, chenille and silk stitching. Suede, velvet and leather appliques are also among the novelty trimmings.

The season's modes in dresses range from straight, simple models of faille or bengaline for informal afternoon and street wear, to the semi-dinner dress developed in interesting color combinations, smartly embroidered. For the street, milady has her choice of bengaline, faille, satin or any of the smart new wools.

This is a season in love with color, and many and delightful are the color effects in party frocks for the young girl. Combinations heretofore unheard of have been tried and found delightful. Festive modes for the sixteen-year-old embrace bouffant, godet and circular effects, as well as the straight-line and tunic ideas. Fashion's taste in trimmings for this delightful age is quite varied, plaits, laces, beads, plastic flowers, fur and embroidery being the favorite mediums. The sixteen-year-old miss may wear a simple bandeaux with her party frock, and a string of pearls and a simple band bracelet are also in good taste.

An attractive dress for the young woman is made of black-and-white chiffon velvet. The waist is quite straight, the skirt circular and provided with deep godets and narrow band of

For the girl of ten or twelve years, the favored materials are much the same as those used for grown-ups and include net, chiffon, crepe-de-chine, flat crepe, georgette, crepe satin, radium silk and taffeta, the latter being in solid or changeable colors.

The colors best suited to the young girl are white, ivory and the pastel shades, and these are usually chosen in accordance with the child's individual type and coloring. The girl with delicate features and colorings, slight build and fair hair, the decidedly feminine type, is at her best in softest colors and fabrics.

Top coats for sports, steamer or motor wear indicate the invasion of plaids in the world of fashion. A stunning model is plaided in vermilion and tan, and collared with fox to match. Another smart model, made of homespun in rather plain and subdued tone, has a long cape section lined with Scotch plaid.

Slashed and upturned brims are features of many of the new hats. Often a tiny brim is slightly rolled at the side, front or back and finished with stiff little ornaments or feather fancies, dyed to match the hat. Among the larger hats, a stunning model of hatter's plush in black, blue and brown is very popular just now.

Square crowns, in keeping with the directoire spirit, dominate the field, although there are many other smart types designed for those who object to the square crowns.

Besides hatter's plush the materials used are felt and velvet, plain and panne. In many instances, felt and velvet are combined, also satin and velvet, or satin and hatter's plush.

A necklace of oriental character is made of tiny Chinese dice in imitation ivory and amber beads used alternately. Lovely imported earrings set in sterling silver and marcasite have colored stone combinations of black, red, green and other gay colors.

 MAKE HISTORY DISTASTEFUL.

"Miss Marjorie Boyd, care The Grizzly Bear—Dear Friend: The compliment you paid to "Forward Looking Lessons in United States History" in your book reviews for October is greatly appreciated by the author.

"I believe you have also done something for the future native sons and daughters of the Golden West. There is so much charm to history it should be loved as a study, but the heavy and tiresome texts that our boys and girls are doomed to use make it very distasteful to them.

"Judging by what you wrote, I am led to presume you read only part one, designed for the seventh grades. Part two, for eighth graders, is more interesting and brings the subject down to date.

"Yours in gratefulness,

"W. J. SAVAGE.

Native Sons of the Golden West

GRAVE OF FIRST CHRISTIAN

MARTYR MARKED BY NATIVE SONS.
AN DIEGO—A THOUSAND PEOPLE VISited San Diego Mission October 5 to participate in the formal dedication of a huge cement cross with bronze tablet, erected by San Diego 108, over the grave of the first martyr to Christian civilization in California—Padre Luis Jaume. The padre was murdered November 4 1775 by the Indians, who attacked the mission. The tablet bears this inscription: "In Memory to Padre Luis Jaume, First California Martyr, Who Was Killed Nov. 4, 1775, by Indians on This Spot. Erected and Dedicated by Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West."

Dan C. Shaffer, chairman of the Parlor's landmarks committee, presided at the dedicatory ceremonies, and the Knights of Columbus glee club furnished several numbers. Edward H. Dowell, for the Parlor, presented the monument, which was accepted by Rev. John Brady. Superior Judge Edgar A. Luce spoke on "Our Interest in Perpetuating the Memories of the Founders of the Golden West." S. A. Johnson related the history of the missions, Miss Marion Stough paid tribute to Padre Luis Jaume, and Father Gabriel spoke on "San Diego Mission." "The Star Spangled Banner," by the assemblage, concluded the program.

San Diego was officially visited October 13 by Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge of Martinez, who was accompanied by Grand Trustee John T. Newell of Los Angeles. Plans for the visit of the Board of Grand Officers November 10 were discussed. On that occasion San Diego will have a class of at least a hundred candidates for initiation, it is promised, seventy applications already being on file. Addresses pertaining to the work of the Order were delivered by the Grand Trustees, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer and others. Refreshments were served.

Appeals for Loyalty to Flag.

Merced—Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington and Grand Secretary John T. Regan were guests of honor October 10 at a supper given by Yosemite 24 at which venison stew and roast duck had a prominent place on the menu.

Byington came to the city at the request of the Parlor to deliver the principal address on the occasion of the dedication of the Merced Union high-school's new flag and flagpole. To the 1,000 school children and an equal number of grown-ups, he made a patriotic appeal for loyalty to the country's flag. Tribute was also paid to the glorious history of California, and the speaker reminded his hearers that the day was the seventy-fifth anniversary of the adoption of the state's first constitution, which was adopted at Monterey, October 10 1849.

Judge Fred Ostrander was chairman of the day, being introduced by Principal A. W. Meany. Judge E. N. Rector delivered the invocation, there were solos by Daniel Dupertuis and choruses by the students and the assemblage, and a brief address by District Attorney C. H. McCray. The history of the flag was presented by Mrs. W. C. Crawford of Veritas 75 N.D.G.W. While the boys' band, under the direction of Prof. J. P. Bareilles, played "The Star Spangled Banner," the American Legion hoisted the flag. Prior to the ceremonies members of various fraternal and civic societies marched to the school, led by the boys' band.

Drive Adds Twenty-five.

Livermore—The six weeks' membership drive of Las Postias 96 ended October 16, when a record-breaking crowd witnessed the initiation of a class of ten candidates. The drive, conducted by two teams of fifteen each captained by E. Wente and W. Block, added twenty-five, bringing the membership to over 200. Block's team won by a majority of eight, and the losing team promises the winners a sumptuous repast.

A feature of the evening was the address on "The Spirit of California" by Grand Director Charles L. McEnerney of San Francisco. Continued applause evidenced that his expounding of the gospel of California was heartily appreciated. The Parlor subscribed for five copies of The Grizzly Bear for the perusal of patients at the Arroyo County Tubercular Sanatorium. The famous "side" degree, "The Trail of Trials," was put on to the satisfaction of all, including the candidate, who was thoroughly impressed. A sumptuous repast concluded a wonderful evening.

Big Sonoma County Class Promised.

Santa Rosa—Santa Rosa 28 initiated a class of candidates October 16, the ritual being creditably exemplified by the Parlor's regular officers. Addresses were made by Past President Bond, L. Stanford Lewis and Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn.

At the latter's suggestion the Parlor appointed a committee to meet with committees from the other Sonoma County Parlor—Petaluma 27, Glen Ellen 102, Sonoma 111, Sebastopol 143—to arrange for the big joint Sonoma County class initiation to be held here during November and to arrange a program for the occasion. It is promised this will be the largest class ever inducted into the Order.

At the meeting's close a banquet was served, jointly with Santa Rosa 217 N.D.G.W., which had initiated a class of ten candidates. Speeches and songs were enjoyed until after midnight.

Flags Presented School.

San Rafael—Mount Tamalpais 64 presented the West End primary-school with a set of flags, American and State (Bear), October 17. Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge officially visited the Parlor October 27, when a class of candidates were initiated and a banquet was served.

The Parlor accepted the invitation to initiate a large class of candidates for Sebastopol 143, rounded up by Fieldman Newman Cohn, October 24. All of the Sonoma County Parlor were represented in the crowd in attendance and there was a big time. Cohn, affiliated with Mount Tamalpais, is doing very effective work in old Sonoma, not only in the matter of securing new members, but in getting the Parlor active in civic affairs.

Arrowhead Meets Wednesday.

San Bernardino—Arrowhead 110 meets every WEDNESDAY night at Eagles' Hall, 469 Fourth street. Attention is called to the fact because the Official Directory of Parlor in The Grizzly Bear has erroneously given, for the past several months, the meeting-night as Tuesday, and considerable confusion has resulted.

The Parlor will have a large class of candidates ready for the Board of Grand Officers when they visit San Bernardino November 12 to exemplify the ritual. Plans are being made to entertain not only the official visitors, but a large number from near by Parlor. Arrangements for the entertainment of the Grand Parlor, which meets here in May, are getting well under way.

Membership Drive Under Way.

Oakland—Fruitvale 252, now holding fifteenth place in the membership standing of Parlor, has a drive on that, judging from past accomplishments, will put it well up toward the top. It started September 25 and will end January 1. At its conclusion, the Fruitvaleites say, the Parlor will be the largest in membership in Alameda County.

Basketball and bowling teams are being organized among the Parlor's membership. September 25 was "ladies' night," and the good of the order committee provided a fine entertainment. Fruitvale took an active interest in the annual masque ball benefit for the homeless children at the Municipal Auditorium October 23.

Old Timer Again in the Fold.

Sacramento—Herbert W. Taylor, an early-day active member of Sacramento 3 who for many years has resided in Washington State, paid a brief visit to this city and was reinstated into the Parlor October 9. A smoker was given in his honor, and many of the old-timers were out to welcome him back into the fold.

Winter social activities of the Parlor will open October 31 with a Hallowe'en dance, to be given jointly with La Bandera 110 N.D.G.W. A benefit for the homeless children is being arranged. A radio has been installed in the clubrooms in Native Sons' Building.

Grand Trustee Delights Auditors.

Grass Valley—Quartz 58 was honored by a visit from Grand Trustee Seth Millington of Colusa October 6, and there was a large attendance of members out to greet this enthusiastic disciple of the Order. Millington was former state commander of the American Legion, and this fact brought out quite a number of the ex-service men of the Parlor. During the evening he made an address which was most interesting, giving intimate details in connection with the birth of the Order which are not generally known. Following the meeting a dinner was served and a social program was presented.

The following day Grand Trustee Millington was guest of honor at a reception tendered the pioneer men and women of the community. He was called upon for an address, and delighted the guests of the occasion. Quartz Parlor was shown to have 248 members and a treasury of about $16,000. It is the banner Parlor of its class and won the membership trophy last year.

Guests of Daughters.

Hollister—October 17 Grand Trustee Charles A. Thompson of Santa Clara officially visited Fremont 44, and his pleasing address was appreciated and greatly enjoyed. A dinner was served preceding the meeting.

Members of the Parlor and their ladies were recent guests of Copa de Oro 105 N.D.G.W. at a 500 party. Prizes were awarded and refreshments were served.

Visitors Initiate Class.

Daly City—Headed by Grand Secretary John T. Regan, a large delegation from South San Francisco 157 visited El Carmelo 256 October 13 and initiated a class of candidates for the local Parlor.

Addresses were made by Grand Secretary Regan, D.D.G.P. Virgil Orenge, Fred Schuler and John Ryan of the visitors, and by Secretary W. J. Savage, Peter F. Callan, Ernest Micco and President Frank Sturla of El Carmelo.

After 'Em in Mendocino.

Fort Bragg—Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn, who has had wonderful success in his organization efforts in Marin and Sonoma Counties, has been sent here by Grand President Edward J. Lynch to "put over" a membership drive for Alder Glen 200.

Grand Trustees Visit.

Santa Barbara—Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge of Martinez paid an official visit October 9 to Santa Barbara 116, being accompanied by Grand Trustee John T. Newell of Los Angeles.

Previous to the meeting the visitors were guests at a chicken dinner. Following the Parlor session, during which the Grand Trustees spoke on the affairs of the Order, a group of Spanish entertainers delighted with music and dance numbers.

Past Presidents in Session.

San Jose—The General Assembly of the Past Presidents' Association was in session here October 18. From 6 to 8 p. m. the delegates were guests at a banquet at the home of John Corotto (San Jose 22). Addresses were made by Governor General Ray Felton, Past Governor General James F. Stanley, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Director Charles L. McEnerney and Grand Trustee James F. Wilson.

The following officers were elected, and installed by Past Governor General James G. Beatty: Governor General, Virgil L. Orenge (Rincon 72); Junior Past Governor General, Ray B. Felton (Fruitvale 252); Lieutenant Governor General, Joseph Ganong (San Jose 22); Director General, James P. Cronin (Fruitvale 252); Secretary-Treasurer, John T. Regan (South San Francisco 157); Trustees General, Herbert de la Rosa (Mission 38), M. M. Lavelle (Santa Clara 100), Arthur Cleu (Fruitvale 252); Guard General, M. D. Cooney (Brooklyn 151); Sentinel General, B. Orenge (Rincon 72).

The General Assembly's aims and purposes, as well as those of the branch assemblies, are to keep active in the affairs of the Order those who have passed through the chairs in the respective Subordinate Parlor. Every county having twenty-five or more past presidents, should organize an assembly, as it will be found beneficial not only to the Parlor but the Order at large. Arrangements for organization may be made by communicating with Grand Secretary John T. Regan, 414 Mason street, San Francisco.

PERSONAL MENTION.

John T. Stafford (Sacramento 4) of Sacramento paid a visit during October to Chicago, Illinois.

William P. Canby (South San Francisco 157) of San Francisco, Past Grand President, was a recent visitor to Washington, D. C.

Harvey M. Toy (Stanford 76) of San Francisco was elected president of the California Hotelmen's Association at the Santa Barbara meeting during October.

Miss Frances Miller of Sacramento and David Elliott (Courtland 106) of Courtland were wedded September 17 at the Capital City. They will reside in Courtland.

Dr. George C. Sabichi (Ramona 109) of Bakersfield was elected president of the National Association of Exchange Clubs at the recent Nashville, Tennessee, convention.

William R. Sharkey (Mount Diablo 101) of Martinez, editor of the "Gazette" of that city, will continue to represent the ninth senatorial district in the State Legislature, being the victor in a recount suit following the August primary.

Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge (Carquinez 205) of Martinez, treasurer of Contra Costa County, spent the first half of October in the southern part of the state, and as the guest of Grand Trustee John T. Newell (Los Angeles 45) of Los Angeles was motored to various places of interest in the southland.

In Memoriam

DELIA ROUNER.

To the Officers and Members of Sirling Parlor No. 146 N.S.G.W.: We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed sister, Delia Rouner, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, By the death of Sister Delia Rouner our state has lost an honored pioneer, our parlor a beloved member, and her family a kind and loving wife and mother, and whereas, the charm of her upright character and kindly disposition won for her the respect and love of our membership, who deeply grieve over her passing, therefore, be it Resolved, That this tribute of attention be sent to the bereaved husband and children, a copy be spread upon our records, and a copy sent to The Grizzly Bear and town papers for publication.

HANNA H. McVAY,
MARY REBER,
FRANCIS E. WESTOVER,
Committee.

Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, had a building boom. Over 100 houses were in process of construction.

King Kalakaua of the Sandwich Islands with his suite arrived in San Francisco from Honolulu November 29 enroute to Washington, D. C. Thousands of people lined the sidewalks and greeted the visitor with cheers.

John Shine's stage, from Sonora, Tuolumne County, to Milton, Calaveras County, was stopped by six highwaymen November 2 near Salt Spring Valley. They demanded the express box, which Shine did not carry. They ordered him to drive on and waited for Miller's stage. This they stopped and took from it the express box. They did not molest the passengers.

"You Know You Lie!"

The Shasta County stage that ran from Shasta to Redding was stopped November 21 by masked highwaymen two miles from the latter place. They took the express box, with about $3,000 in it. Passengers were not molested. Sheriff Philbrook of Trinity County was aboard, but was unable to assert his authority.

Two highwaymen stopped and robbed A. Solomon and two women on the Cliff House road near San Francisco. They made them get out of their carriage and, appropriating it, drove into the city.

George Goodman killed a grizzly bear weighing 900 pounds near Big Geyser Springs, Lake County. The bear was known as "clubfoot," from the shape of its tracks, and the county had offered $1,000 for its removal.

D. B. Frink, editor of the Truckee, Nevada County, "Republican," was shot and killed by an unknown person the night of November 23. He was a leader of the Vigilance Committee, and it was believed he had been assassinated by an undesirable citizen.

Mat Barker and Joseph Francis had an altercation over teaming November 26 near Georgetown, El Dorado County. Barker shot at Francis, who returned the fire, hitting Barker in the mouth and badly wounding him. Two days afterward Francis went to Barker's house to see if their quarrel could not be adjusted, as they had been former friends. As soon as he entered the room where Barker was the latter drew his revolver and, shooting Francis in the head, killed him instantly.

A fad among men about town was wearing under the coat lapel a slip of paper about three inches long and two inches wide on which was printed "You Know You Lie!" It was exposed to the view of a yarn-spinning acquaintance when he had finished a tale. Several black eyes and bloody noses had resulted from the showing of the slip.

Conrad Hummelman and Alfred Stevens, butchers in Sacramento, were loading a wagon with gravel to be hauled to their slaughter house November 19. The bank of the pit caved upon them, and when dug out they were dead.

John Holden, 9 years old, sent by his father on an errand, was crossing a plank bridge over the American River in Placer County November
 9. He fell off and was drowned.

The stage from Marysville, Yuba County, to Colusa, Colusa County, was upset November 1 by striking a stump by the side of the road. Several of the passengers were injured.

A hunting party, in a buggy, left Placerville,
 El Dorado County, November 1. At Chili Bar the horse took fright and jumped down a bank several feet, upsetting the vehicle.

CALIFORNIA'S FEDERAL PLAYGROUNDS YIELD OVER MILLION REVENUE.

San Francisco During the fiscal year ended June 30 1924, there was turned into the federal treasury, through the United States Forest Service district headquarters, the sum of $1,241,605 as receipts from timber sales, livestock grazing and other forms of uses of the seventeen National Forests of California. The expenditures for the administration and protection of the forests, for the same period, amounted to approximately $985,000, leaving a credit balance of over one-quarter million dollars.

Twenty-five percent of the receipts, or $310,- 400, will be returned to the state, to be distributed to counties in which National Forests are located, for school and road development. An additional 10 percent, or $124,000, will also be expended locally by the Forest Service for the construction of roads and trails. California will thus benefit to the extent of nearly $435,000 from the business receipts of the National Forests, without taking into consideration the in-tangible asset of sport and recreation that the federal forests afford, and which are yearly enjoyed by millions of citizens.

HOME PRODUCTS TO BE SHOWN.

For the purpose of "boosting" the consumption of home products, the Commercial Board of Los Angeles will stage a series of exhibits commencing at the Biltmore, November 5.

The first exhibit, to open at 9 a. m. and continue throughout the day, will show the extensive list of food products. More than seventy-five establishments will be represented.

Where prices and quality are equal, preference in buying should be given to California-produced articles, thus stimulating local industry and keeping home-earned dollars at home.

Orange Exposition—The Northern California
 Orange and Fruit Exposition will be held at Oroville, Butte County, November 25 to 29.

Henry M. Willis

Candidate for Judge Superior Court Los Angeles County

Born at San Bernardino in 1871, being the son of Judge Henry M. Willis, a forty-niner and for many years a judge in San Bernardino County, and Amelia Benson, who arrived at San Bernardino in a covered wagon in 1856, her father, Jerome Benson, being one of the captains of the wagon train.

Graduate of the University of California, 1893, and admitted to practice by the Supreme Court in 1894. Deputy District Attorney of San Bernardino County, 1905-06; Assistant United States District Attorney, Southern District of California, in portions of the year 1909-10, and State Senator from the Thirtieth District 1907-11. During the world war was Government Agent on Appeal.

During second half of term as Senator was chairman of the Judiciary Committee of that body. Author of the "Hunter's License Law," "The Mining Code" and many other laws now on the statute book, and during his term as Senator had charge of all code revision bills introduced on the revision of the codes during those years. His long experience, covering a period of nearly thirty years as prosecutor, legislator and practicing attorney, has well fitted him for the position to which he aspires. His principal work in the practice of law has been the preparation and trial of cases. Member of the Knights of Pythias, B. P. O. Elks, and Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 N.S.G.W.

RETAIN— JUDGE HARRY A. HOLLZER

Incumbent

Judge of the Superior Court, Los Angeles County (Unexpired Term of John W. Shenk) Vote for

HARRY A. HOLLZER X

Among the Native Sons and Daughters who have endorsed Judge Harry A. Hollzer are the following: JUDGE BENJAMIN F. BLEDSOE, ROBERT M. CLARKE, ISIDORE B. DOCKWEILER, THOS. P. WHITE, JOSEPH P. SPROUL, MISS M. LABORY.

THE PEOPLE'S PROPERTY IN JEOPARDY

(F. M. NEWBERT,

Pres. State Fish and Game Commission.)

Among the many initiative measures appearing on the November 4 ballot is one wherein every Native Son is deeply interested from every practical, as well as sentimental, point of view. "Klamath River Fish and Game District Initiative Measure," numbered eleven, proposes establishing, by popular vote in the quickest practicable way, a fish and game district prohibiting any dam-obstructing passage of salmon and trout up Klamath River to the mouth of Shasta River, where their eggs sufficiently mature for the Fish and Game Commission to collect and hatch them artificially, thereby maintaining these finest of fish in behalf of every wild-life lover and other food-consumer throughout California.

Klamath River flows over 200 miles down a narrow, steep gorge, traversing Siskiyou and dividing Del Norte from Humboldt County. It fills the wildest large canyon in Northwestern California. The proposed district has just been opened up to automobile touring. Forever impossible for irrigation with so little tillable land tributary, un-navigable and un-polluted, Klamath River is by nature California's best stream for salmon and trout reproduction. Therefore, it must be saved for all the people; first, as a perpetual propagating seed-bed to continue restocking the entire state; second, as a vast public playground wherein recreation-seekers and resident Indians may keep on freely enjoying these wonderful fish under existing laws.

This is the same measure recommended by over 105,000 registered voters who filed the record initiative petition placing before everybody this opportunity to determine whether the people shall hold for themselves not only the vast resource represented by these peerless food and game fishes, but also what their opponents frankly admit to be the last large hydro-electric power-development possibility left to the state. This is what a "no" vote now would tie up in private hands until the "trust" is ready to sell it back to us at their own price. By the time Northwestern California really needs to sacrifice her birthright of salmon and trout by turning over their last stand to further power-development, these lower Klamath damsites would have grown into a first mortgage upon the state for all time. Many who care little about angling and less for fish, are interested in preventing such giving away of a natural resource whose income might reduce taxes for posterity, instead of piling up private profits.

Abundant power awaits development above the proposed district. Trinity River, tributary to and near protested sites threatening salmon and trout on lower Klamath, offers 250,000 horsepower without imperiling all California's future fish resources. Sea-run fishes cannot be passed over high dams. California now suffers from shortage of water, not of storage projects. Power plants thirty years in excess of present demands await normal rainfall to turn off designed capacity. In the south, Colorado River offers enormous possibility without sacrificing California's outdoor attractions. The duties of the Fish and Game Commission demand conservation of wild life. Co-operate by voting "yes" to preserve in its primitive charm, the magnificent Klamath, foundation of future fishing, essential to keeping salmon and trout henceforth for all Californians, a duty we owe posterity as well as ourselves.

As against these facts, the private power "trust," which seeks for its own purposes of personal profit to corral the vast waters of the Klamath, claims it is "California's Muscle Shoals," with a far greater power possibility. It admits it is worth over a hundred million dollars and advances that as an argument why we, the people, its present owners, should give it to them! Surely, we of California have been "fed up" by now on this thing of Washington giving away our property. Under the laws, it appears that the California State Fish and Game Commission is custodian of the fish and game of California which are the property of the people of California in their—our—sovereign, or voting capacity. Well, on November 4 we, the people, are "in the saddle" in exactly that "sovereign capacity," and then is a splendid opportunity, perhaps our last chance, to register for once a sweeping protest with our "yes" votes. It is high time California kept some of her resources. She has been lavish enough with them without sacrificing the last chance of her fishcultural work, already famous throughout the world, where ours is known as the sportsman-angler's state.

There is not, cannot be, any question about the impossibility of getting salmon and ocean-run trout up over high dams. Forty feet has been set as the limit, not of practicability, but of possibility, by every disinterested fish authority from Secretary Hoover and U. S. Fish Commissioner O'Malley to the Western States Convention of Fish Wardens, which protested damming the Klamath and confirmed the California commission's position.

Let us "Keep the Klamath" as the Almighty made it, until all California needs to sacrifice her last primitive salmon run to utmost power development. One good winter, with all the power projects now going ahead, will fill the dams and end the present shortage of power. Make no mistake—this is one place where a "yes" vote means no dams, and creates a perpetual, public playground for all the people.

A SUNSET

(SUZANNE MCKELVY.)

When you've watched the magic blending
Of the earth and sea and sky,
And gazed in breathless wonder at the sight,—
As the purple glory gathers
When the day begins to die
And fade into the shadows of the night,—
With raptured eyes you look, and ask
No greater boon of Fate
Than just to see the sun go down
Beyond the Golden Gate.

THANKS TO ALMIGHTY GOD.

ALTURAS—THE NEAR APPROACH OF Thanksgiving, an "institution which has come down to us from remote times," has impelled Grand President Catherine E. Gloster to send the following Thanksgiving Day letter to the Subordinate Parlor:

"Today our thanks we're giving for the riches that are ours,

For the red fruits of the orchards and the perfume of the flowers,

For our homes with laughter ringing and our hearthfires blazing bright,

For our land of peace and plenty and our land of truth and right;

And we're thankful for the glory of the old Red, White and Blue,

For the spirit of our fathers and a manhood that is true."

"Thanksgiving is an institution which has come down to us from remote times. It was first celebrated by the Puritans when, after a long winter of cold, hunger and sickness, they were blessed with a season of bountiful crops.

"The practice of celebrating Thanksgiving slowly became general throughout the colonies.

In 1789, when President Washington issued his first proclamation, the day became a national legal holiday for thanksgiving.

"The President of these United States will soon issue a proclamation naming a day for this year's general thanksgiving.

"In grateful acknowledgment of the mercy and bounty of Almighty God for His kind care and protection, for the union, peace and plenty which we enjoy, for the civil and religious liberty with which we are blessed, for our institutions of learning, for our happy homes, and for our beloved friends, let us approach this festival season with a spirit devoted to the service of that Supreme and Glorious God who is the beneficent author of all good that is or that will be in Time or Eternity, and let us unite in rendering unto Him our sincere thanks."

History Study Club Formed.

Hollister—September 26 Irene Sullivan-Hamm was the honored guest at a jolly kitchen shower given by Copa de Oro 105 after her marriage a few days previously. She was the recipient of many useful gifts, accompanied by happy sentiments in prose and rhyme. Games and the serving of dainty refreshments closed a most enjoyable evening. September 30 the Past Presidents' Club was entertained at a bridge party at the home of Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs. Prizes were awarded and refreshments served.

A goodly number of the members of the Parlor have formed a class for the study of California history during the winter months. The first meeting was held at the home of Past Grand President Briggs October 3. Justina Lewis gave a pleasing introductory explanation of the purposes of the class, followed by a comprehensive talk on the "Search for a Western Route to India and Its Influence on the Discovery and Settlement of California" by Sarah Held. Hilda Thompson gave an entertaining account of "Columbus, His Life, Voyages and Discoveries." Justina Lewis then spoke at length in an interesting manner of "Balboa." P.G.P. Briggs told of the achievements and privations of "Magellan in the First Circumnavigation of the Globe."

October 10 the bobbed-haired members of the Parlor acted as hostesses to the unshorns. At the "Quick Bob" beauty shoppe several of those still adorned with long tresses were speedily beautified (?) with the "La Follette" bob. "Serra" snip, "Coolidge" cut and other latest styles in abbreviated locks. At the refreshment table, the centerpiece consisted of two dolls appropriately labeled "Before and After."

Successful Dance.

Galt—Chabolla 171 gave a benefit dance October 4 which was a wonderful success. The committee in charge received much deserved praise for its efforts.

Past Presidents' Club Doing Good Work.

San Jose—Vendome 100 entertained eighty-seven members of the Santa Clara County Pioneer Association October 2. An elaborate program was presented under the supervision of Mrs. David J. Gairaud and Miss Tillie Brohaska, and Mrs. J. C. Hayes and Mrs. Earl Bickford supervised the serving of a sumptuous dinner. A feature of the reunion was the display of history relics, among them the key to California's first capitol building, exhibited by Dr. Bowen-Hittell.

Miss Lucy Blackwell and Mrs. Earl Bickford entertained the Past Presidents' Club October 7. The California question-box was resumed, and a banquet was served. A class of candidates will be initiated in the near future. Each month Vendome supplies a large number of home-made cakes to one of the wards at the Palo Alto Base Hospital.

October 23 the Past Presidents' Club was hostess for the Thursday Club, when a delightful whist party was held. Past Grand President Mamie Pierce-Carmichael was the hostess chairman. The Past Presidents' Club of Vendome actually goes on record for the number of fine things it does, expecting no reward or publicity. It works as a unit, everybody doing her duty. During October the members gave their attention to the tubercular-inclined children in the Preventorium. They are bringing cheer and happiness by treating them to a Hallowe'en party.

Vendome may well be proud of its Past Presidents' Club. October 30 the Parlor will join with Observatory 177 N.S.G.W. in a party for the members and families of both Parlors. Supper will be served.

Meet in Joint Session.

Redding—Parlors of Shasta and Tehama Counties—Camellia 41 (Anderson), Lassen View 98 (Shasta), Hiawatha 140 (Redding), Berendos 23 (Red Bluff)—met in joint session October 11 to welcome Grand President Catherine E. Gloster on her official visit. Miss Gloster was accompanied from Alturas by several members of Alturas 159.

The gathering was a most pleasant one, and those in attendance were delighted with the address of the Grand President, in the course of which she outlined the Order's ambitions and made suggestion for the Parlors' benefit. Refreshments were served.

Pioneer Women Guests.

Middletown—Clear Lake 135 entertained the pioneer women October 4. Mrs. Cora Merrick welcomed the guests, and referred to the aims and objects of the Order, and Mrs. Frank Johnson responded, tendering the thanks of the visitors for this annual event, which is keenly looked forward to. A musical program was presented, and a wonderful feast, prepared by the Parlor members, was served.

Members Enthusiastic.

Sonoma City—Sonoma 209 enjoyed a social session September 22, when a miscellaneous shower was tendered Dolores Breitenbach-Schmitt, the Parlor's most recent bride and one of the fraternity's most ardent workers. The unusually large and beautiful collection of gifts bore testimony to the young matron's popularity. Delicious refreshments concluded the evening's pleasure.

October 13 the Parlor initiated a class of four candidates. Much enthusiasm exists among the members, who are delighted at the progress made by Sonoma the past year.

Neighbor Visited.

Alturas—Accompanied by several members of her home-Parlor, Alturas 159, Grand President Catherine E. Gloster paid an official visit to Mount Lassen 215 at Bieber. Offices were installed, and a sumptuous banquet was served.

Anniversary Observed.

Pittsburg—The nineteenth anniversary of the institution of Sterling 146 was celebrated October 15 with an elaborate banquet at which Past Grand President Amy V. McAvoy presided. The tables were prettily decorated in festival colors, and musical numbers were rendered by Miss Theresa Gatto and Miss Ruth Miller. Among the large number in attendance were two charter members, Mrs. McAvoy and D.D.G.P. Hanna McVay. In charge of the banquet was the following committee: Mary Reber, Hanna McVay, Francis Westover, Vera Laidlerick, Paula Gatto, Theresa Gatto.

Members of the Parlor, prettily attired in yellow and white, and carrying the American and State (Bear) Flags, appeared in the Defense Day parade, and have been muchly complimented on the showing made. Jointly with Diamond 246 N.S.G.W. a "hard times" party was given for the benefit of the homeless children. November 8 has been selected as the date for the Parlor's annual masquerade. The committee in charge is: Bertilda Wright (chairman), Olive Burris, Amy V. McAvoy, Mae Dempsey, Rhoda Roelling, Margaret Delp, Mrs. G. B. Arentz.

"Youngsters" at Reunion.

Susanville—About forty "youngsters" who arrived in Hone Lake Valley prior to 1864 were guests of Nataqua 152 (Standish) at a reunion and banquet. The feast was served by members of the Parlor, under the supervision of Mrs. John Doyle.

W. W. Sharp was the toastmaster, and addresses dealing with early-day events were delivered by Finn Barry, Norman J. Barry, Congressman John E. Baker, Grand President Catherine E. Gloster, District Deputy Mrs. Ralph Laird, A. M. Fairfield and Fred Y. Madley.

Hallowe'en Party.

San Leandro—El Cereso 207 had a Hallowe'en dance October 11 which proved a great success. Miss Rose Saunders was chairman of the committee in charge. Another social affair is being planned for November.

Indoor Circus.

San Jose—San Jose 81 presented for the amusement of its members an indoor circus October 16, when many character costumes were in evidence. October 23 a class of candidates were initiated, and the birthdays of the September and October "girls" were celebrated. An informal dancing party is to be given November 8. Miss Genevieve Harris is chairman of the arrangements committee.

Bazar in November.

Petaluma—Petaluma 222 initiated eight candidates October 7 and received three applications. Refreshments followed the meeting. A public whist, with Angie Miner in charge, was held October 21.

Florence Anderson reports great progress on the bazar and party to be given the afternoon and evening of November 18. Valuable prizes will be given away at both events.

Stork Shower for President.

Daly City—The October 1 meeting of El Carmelo 181 was attended by Grand Trustee Mae L. Edwards of San Francisco, and Marguerite Sullivan, Lottie Crawford and Helen Kelly of Alta 3 (San Francisco). A surprise stork shower for President Madeline Fellows was the feature of the evening. A miniature clothesline was loaded with offerings. Delicious refreshments were served, the tables being decorated with storks and other suitable articles.

JUDGE FREDERICK C. VALENTINE, WHO IS A CANDIDATE TO SUCCEED HIMSELF AS JUDGE OF THE LOS ANGELES SUPERIOR COURT for the unexpired term of Judge Leslie R. Hewitt, was appointed just prior to the primaries in August. His law practice in Los Angeles extends over a period of seventeen years. Judge Valentine having come to this city from New York, where he was born and received his preliminary education. He is a graduate of Union College of Albany.

Judge Valentine was a law partner of the late Henry T. Lee, and in more recent years has specialized in ecclesiastical and probate law. He is advisor and chancellor of the Los Angeles diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, a member of the University Club, the Diocesan Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Automobile Club and the Masonic Fraternity. He also is a member of the State and County Bar Associations, and in the recent plenary of the latter organization Judge Frederick C. Valentine received twice as many votes as the total cast for his four contestants in the campaign for election to fill the unexpired term of Judge Hewitt. As a means of clarifying any possible confusion between the identities of Judge Frederick C. Valentine and Judge L. H. Valentine, both judicial incumbents, it is stated that while both are candidates for the Superior Court bench, they are not related, although they have been friends for a number of years. Their candidacy in no ways conflicts, since the offices which they seek on the Superior Court bench are respectively for the unexpired term of Judge Leslie R. Hewitt and the regular long term—Advertisement.

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES POST OFFICE TO THE YEAR 1829."

By Wesley Everett Rich, Ph.D.; Harvard University Press, Cambridge; Price, $2.00.

By quoting from the introduction to "The History of the United States Post Office," a clearer conception of the nature of the book and its author may be had:

"This volume of the Economic Studies is a doctor's dissertation offered in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Ph.D. at Harvard University in 1917. It is but the beginning of a comprehensive investigation which Dr. Rich intended to make of the history and present operations of the United States Post Office. The untimely death of the author leaves it for others to complete the study which he had begun with such zeal and intelligence. . . . Wesley Everett Rich was born at Chelsea, Massachusetts, on August 13, 1889, and died at Camp Devens on September 25, 1918, from an attack of influenza."

There are ten chapters in the book. The first deals with "The Beginnings of Postal Service in the Colonies," and on through the succeeding chapters the development, the extension and the operation of the postal service in the United States are expounded. Nor is it a dull exposition, for the information is well and interestingly written.

As a college textbook for economics, the history is particularly valuable. To those interested in research history work, it is invaluable. To casual readers, the book is illuminatingly instructive.

"NELLY'S SILVER MINE."

By Helen Hunt Jackson; Little, Brown & Company, Publishers, Boston.

"Nelly's Silver Mine" is a book written particularly for children. That it is a child's book does not mean that it is of the general monotonous childish type. On the contrary, no parent should dread the request to "please read out loud," if this book should be the choice. The story has enough of plot and worth-while description to hold the interest of a grown-up, yet by retaining that rare quality, simplicity, can be readily understood by a child.

Beginning with "Christmas Day in Nelly's New England Home," the story entertains at once. Nelly March, her twin brother, Rob, and her mother and father, lived very happily together. Nelly was a healthy, happy little girl, but her brother, Rob, had always been very delicate. Partly for this reason and partly because Mr. Marsh suffered acutely from asthma, the family decide to move to Colorado, where the air is very pure and the climate very healthful. You can imagine how excited Nelly and Rob were when they thought of traveling so far and of going to live in a new, strange country. Of their adventures on the train and their life in Colorado, the story deals principally.

The book needs no further recommendation other than the well-known name of the authoress, Helen Hunt Jackson. Her beloved "Ramona" is famed the state over. Four beautifully-colored illustrations, so dear to the hearts of all children, are painted by Harriet Roosevelt Richards. This book would be an ideal Christmas gift for a child.

"PRILLIGIRL."

By Carolyn Wells; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Guy Thorndike was a matinee idol of no ordinary type, for he was bashful. He was also a gentleman. He said that he would marry Corinne Deane, because he pitied her, because she was "Prilligirl" and because she asked him to, but he wouldn't admit that he loved her until the very end of the very last chapter. Their marriage was to be a strictly business proposition. In fact, the less they saw of each other the better, so ordained the unnatural bridegroom.

Then a horrible murder and the suspicion of guilt shadowed their strangely-united lives. A famous playwright was found ironically murdered by his own pen, a curiously-wrought mediaeval dagger. "Prilligirl's" bloody fingerprints on the handle of the dagger point to her guilt. Yet how could she, a young, innocent girl, commit such a terrible crime? Young McGee, amateur sleuth, is plainly baffled. Fleming Stone, the Sherlock Holmes of New York, is called in and the solving of the mystery begins.

Upon its solution, "Prillilgirl" finds that her marriage, though a farce, has netted her a husband.

Although the plot is sufficiently strong and the mystery is satisfactorily solved, the novel falls somewhat short of the usual "Fleming Stone Detective Stories." The characters are overdrawn. "Prillilgirl" is too innocent to be real, and on the slightest provocation quotes Browning and Shakespeare, for no apparent reason at all except to let the reader know that she is well versed. Thorndike also impresses as a weak, spineless chap, and one not very likely to act as the authoress has depicted. For those who enjoy very light reading, the book can be heartily recommended.

"PROFESSOR HOW COULD YOU!"

By Harry Leon Wilson; Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.

Are you "100% goldfish," or do you long to flop out of your smug little bowl and "run off to be a wild trout in a regular creek?" If you have flopping tendencies, follow the trail blazed by Professor Coppelstone, Ph. D., of Fairwater College. For many years "Dry and Dusty" submitted to the rule of "Iron Hand," mayor of Fairwater, his wife. Then, one day, the worm turned.

Fortified by two glasses of sherry, the balmy spring weather and the whisperings of an inner voice, the professor escapes from Fairwater. Humdrum days are over for "Dry and Dusty;" adventurous life on the open road begins.

Imagine the innocent professor hobnobbing with bootleggers, enlisting with a medicine-show in Indian guise as "Heap Big Chief," and falling in love with a hamburger queen! These are only a few of the marvelous adventures which Coppelstone leads her to. His initiation into the realm of slang and his interpretation of it provoke frequent chuckles. Rising gallantly to every situation, he enriches the story with his quaint philosophy.

But as summer withers in the brisk clutch of fall, Fairwater claims its own. "Coppie" returns, a sadder, a wiser and a richly-informed professor. Only he and his pal, Sooner Jackson, know that Iowa owes its skin to the loss of a "Heap Big Chief" and the recall of one Algernon Coppelstone.

"CECILY."

By Clementine Helm; J. P. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.50.

"Cecily" (Elf Goldhair) is a delightful tale for children. It is quaintly foreign in phraseology, and the colored illustrations in the book closely resemble old German prints.

The story has enough of the fairy-tale charm to be irresistibly appealing to children. It tells of that children's wonderworld, the circus, and of the life of a little circus child. Of Cecily's adventures, mishaps and final triumph, the book dwells in length.

The large, plain printing and simple wording make this a book which any ten-year-old child could read with ease. With eight illustrations in color, specially-designed lining papers, and title page by Gertrude A. Kay, the story-book is unusually decorative. The translation is by Elisabeth P. Stork.

ATTRACTIVE SOCIAL PROGRAM.

South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. has mapped out a series of sociables for the entertainment of its members and their friends the next two months. November 1 will be the thirty-fifth annual masque ball, at which many valuable prizes will be competed for.

November 5 will be given over to an Armistice Day celebration, at which the Parlor's many ex-service members will be honor-guests. There will be a banquet and entertainment. Professor George Barron, curator of the Golden Gate Park Museum, will be the speaker of the evening, his subject being "California History."

December 15 has been set aside for the fourth annual minstrel show. All the talent will come from within the Parlor. The boys have been rehearsing a long time, and promise an exceptionally good bill. Children of the members will be guests of the Parlor at a Christmas tree party December 21. Each child will receive a present, as well as candy. The O'Neil sisters and their kiddies will supply the entertainment. For 1925 many other affairs are already being planned.

en, has reorganized and mapped out a program of winter social activities. October 15 a successful whist party was held for the benefit of the homeless children. Miss Elsie Forsell was chairman of the arrangements committee, and Mrs. May Hawkins headed a diligent committee which secured attractive prizes. November 5 a class of eight candidates will be initiated. Refreshments will be served, and a jolly evening is anticipated.

Prize Won at Costume Ball.

Fresno.—The fourteenth institution anniversary of Fresno 187 was celebrated October 10. Minutes of the first meeting were read by Mrs. Cora Van Meter, the charter secretary, and addresses were made by Mrs. Nancy Brander, Mrs. Harriet Boust and Mrs. Jennie Lessman. During roll-call each member responded with some historical fact concerning the place of her

LONG BEACH: The Forward-Looking City Where Native Resources Grow With The United Enterprise Of All

LONG BEACH UNIQUE AS BIG OIL PRODUCER; PROPERTY WORTH MILLIONS

J. Oliver Brison

(PUBLICITY SECRETARY, LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

THE CITY OF LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA, has had various claims to distinction. In many ways, it is a most remarkable community. At one time official census figures justified the boast that this community had "the fastest growing population in the world." Again, investigation into the conditions in the Long Beach schools revealed a situation which, according to certain cynical observers, justified a repetition of the above contention with the omission of the word "growing."

But as Long Beach grew to metropolitan size, other and smaller cities wrested from it the palm for rapid growth; while such centers as Pomona and Hollywood snatched its laurels in the less desirable line of notoriety. Long Beach, left thus without the twin boasts of "speed" which had distinguished it in the past, was compelled to look to some new field for supremacy. It found its metier in petroleum.

The story of how it secured the property is an interesting tale, worthy to be ranked with the hundreds of others which go to make up the romantic and human-interest side of the oil business.

In 1911, Long Beach was approaching the estate of a metropolis. It was no longer a mere "beach town," but a city. One of the steps of the transition was to provide for public utilities. The city decided to establish a municipal water system, and pursuant to that end acquired the property of the private organizations then serving the community. There was no thought then of the enormous dividends that would some day be paid upon that public investment.

In purchasing the establishments and equipment of the water companies, the city also acquired sites suitable for reservoirs and for water wells. The reservoirs, of course, must be placed on high ground near the city. Blind luck, or guiding providence, or a concealed divining-rod,

A PORTION OF THE SIGNAL HILL, LONG BEACH, OIL FIELDS.

Today, the city is noteworthy as being a plutocratic land-owner in the midst of one of the most famous of producing oil fields. Probably no city has ever been situated so fortunately with regard to the control of natural resources.

led the engineers of the city to exactly the places where oil was later to be found, and there the city established its claim to land for reservoir purposes.

field, brought in June 25 1921 by the Shell Oil Company, demonstrated the correlation between the sites selected by the city for the water department and the favorable drilling sites in the newly-discovered oil field. The first producer was directly across the street from the two-acre piece of property owned by the city.

Long Beach was immediately in the class of the favored land-holder. Several different operators instituted negotiations looking to the leasing of the city's holdings, which comprised several parcels of land in favorable locations. On August 13 1921 a lease covering approximately thirty-seven acres of the city's land was consummated with W. R. Ramsey of Oklahoma City on a forty percent royalty basis. These lands lay along the dome of the oil structure in the now-proved territory in the eastern section of the field.

As the Long Beach field developed to the west, it first justified the rosy predictions which had accompanied its discovery and then exceeded them. Westward the tide of production took its way and, as it did so, the hand of fortune pointed toward still other lands which the city had acquired through the water companies. Accordingly, in April 1922 a lease was executed to the A. T. Jergins Trust of Long Beach, providing for the development of 140 acres of land in the western section on the same royalty basis as obtained in the previous lease—forty percent.

The Long Beach field, as known to engineers, comprises approximately 1,100 acres. The city, with its total of 188 acres under lease at the present time, is thus in the unique position of a one-sixth owner of one of America's greatest producing fields. The value of the city's properties under lease for production is estimated at a figure variously placed from five to ten million dollars.

Incidentally, the water department of the city has not suffered from the turn of affairs which made the property so much more valuable for oil than for its original purpose. The merger under municipal control, initiated for progressive development and a unified policy of control, was not only extremely fortunate for the city as a whole, but has resulted in improved service and efficient management, with each year revealing a small surplus of earnings. The rates charged have been among the lowest of those maintained in cities of the same class.

As the oil development occurred on the higher lands, it left untouched the acreage used for development of water for the city and, being located in a different formation, it does not affect the water supply as obtained from its wells.

While the income which will redound to the city on account of its place in the galaxy of oil producers is impossible to estimate, being dependent on the future life of the field, the income from royalties has already put the city in a unique position, as far as revenue is concerned.

The first income from its royalties, $5,209.75, was from Ramsey-Municipal No. A-1, for the month of December 1921. This well was brought in from the Alamitos zone on November 29 1921 and has produced a total of approximately 130,000 barrels. The income from the oil-well royalties, including all properties, has steadily increased since that time, and for the month of March 1924 amounted to approximately $185,000, making a total of over a million and a quarter dollars to date. October 1 1924 the average daily receipts were approximately $6,400.

As the new development is largely offsetting the natural decline in production, a substantial amount is anticipated each month for some time to come, according to petroleum engineers of the city.

In addition to the participation of the municipality in oil royalties, the Board of Education of Long Beach receives approximately $9,000 monthly from royalties from two producing wells located on property under the control of the school board. All monies thus received by the city and Board of Education are used for acquiring new parks, playgrounds and public buildings, and not for current expenses.

In addition to the revenue derived from the royalties, the water department receives approximately $18,000 per year from its leases to the supply houses, siding locations and pipe-line easements. At the present time, the city has nineteen wells on production, two others being deepened, with six others now being drilled, and a future program of probably ten more to be drilled.

Another way in which ownership of oil lands has developed to the advantage of the citizens of Long Beach, is in connection with the surplus amount of gas developed and the consequent agitation for lower gas rates, which finally resulted in the purchase of the Southern Counties Gas Company's system and the establishment of a reduction of fifty percent in the rates in force July 1921. This reduction from a $1.00 to a 50-cent schedule for domestic purposes and 15-cent rate for industrial use will, it is estimated by the city's engineers, net the residents an annual saving around $480,000.

"From rags to riches" is not an unusual chapter in the annals of petroleum. "The million-dollar backyard" of some fortunate individual has many times been chronicled as one of the typical phenomena of oil. It is unusual, however, for a municipality to figure as the recipient of such wealth, and Long Beach has once more demonstrated that it is "sui generis"—in a class by itself.

VALLEJO DESCENDANT AFFILIATES.

At the October 14 meeting of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. several candidates were initiated, among them Mrs. Lillian Vallejo-Raine, a granddaughter of General M. G. Vallejo who, in 1846, surrendered California to the California Republic party at Sonoma, and Mrs. Harriet Noble Ferrell Smith, whose parents settled in Iowa Hill, Placer County, many years ago.

A social hour, with refreshments, followed the meeting.

the plains. These were friendly, but it was a kind of sulky friendship, for they had been beaten not long before by United States troops. We passed through two powerful nations of them—there were enough of them to have swallowed our little train. We finally, after crossing the Cascade Mountains, arrived at the settlements in Oregon, August 16th.

"I soon saw that although I might like the country very well I could not make money enough. I sold out my interest in the teams, and after staying two weeks again started on a trip to California, about 700 miles more, but this time by water down the great Columbia River and down the Pacific Coast to San Francisco, arriving there September 5th. I cannot stop to tell you of everything and every place I was in, but will tell you something of the mines.

"Nevada, my present stopping place, is in the center of the richest mining region in the whole state, with a population of 6,000 persons. One year ago you might have seen about fifty men at work digging and washing gold dust. I remained one month in Sacramento last fall and then, with a partner, came up here and sold hay. A good business then, but not worth a cent now. It came near breaking us, but we chanced to get hold of a good claim about that time which saved us. I mean a mining claim. It is a piece of ground thirty feet square and is all any man can hold legally. There is more or less fine gold in all the soil around this country. You would not take a pailfull of dirt out of our streets without a portion of the precious metal. Hired men get $5 per day, and men working their own claims from $50 to $100 per day. At present, I am interested in four different claims, but only one which is workable now, the others have too much water in them. The first claim I worked was in what is called the Cegota Diggings; it was in a hill sixty feet down below the surface. It is done by sinking a shaft in a hole down to the rock, and gravel that lays on it is the stuff that pays. The dirt is hauled up with a windlass. I never fancied much working and picking that far under ground by candle light; and then the place is only four feet high, the roof kept up by heavy timbers. The dirt is now washed mostly this way: Boxes from 14 to 21 feet in length, 12 inches in width, the same in height, fitting together so as to form one long box. The dirt is shoveled into them and a stream of water passes through them. The gold, being heaviest, sinks to the bottom. You will see by the papers what fires we have had."

held October 7. All interested in California history are invited to attend the meetings, which are held the first Tuesday of each month in the Board of Education rooms in the Security building.

D. E. Hughes of the United States Army Engineers spoke regarding the "History of the Inner Bay of San Pedro" and Dr. Rockwell D. Hunt gave the "History of the State Division Controversy."

PEOPLE GIVEN AMPITHEATER.

Hollywood bowl, a beautiful natural amphitheater containing 60,000 acres and valued at $1,500,000, is now the property of the people of Los Angeles County, the owners, the Community Park and Art Association, having tendered October 16 a deed of gift, which was accepted by the Board of Supervisors.

FLAGS PRESENTED HIGH SCHOOL.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. has a membership committee which promises a large class of candidates for the November 11 joint initiation; Carl A. Mueller is directing the campaign. John P. Ward is organizing a baseball team to represent the Parlor in the Native Sons' league.

October 15, on behalf of Ramona, Judge John L. Fleming presented to the Downey Union high-school a set of flags—American and State (Bear.) The Parlor's program for November includes a literary entertainment the 14th, a high-jinks the 21st and the monthly dance, for members and their families, the 28th. Plans are under way for a Christmas party.

The official visit of Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge to Ramona October 17 brought out a large crowd. Several candidates were initiated, and there were addresses by Past Grand Presidents Herman C. Lichtenberger and Sheriff William I. Traeger, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Grand Trustee Dodge, President George E. Cavell of Pasadena Parlor, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer of San Diego Parlor and others.

BENEFIT DANCE FOR WORTHY CAUSE.

The Los Angeles Joint Committee of the Native Sons' and Native Daughters' Central Committee on Homeless Children will give a dance November 18 at Native Sons' Hall, 134 West Seventeenth street. The proceeds will go toward paying for an auto in which to transport homeless children that come under the watchful care of the committee.

This home-finding work, financed by voluntary contributions, is not confined to children in any way allied with the Native Sons and Native Daughters. It is non-sectarian in character, and is carried on for the benefit of all homeless children, without regard to race, creed, color or nationality.

Officers of the committee are: Irving Baxter, chairman; James B. Coffey, treasurer; Annie L. Adair, secretary. Mrs. Adair, in active charge of the work, resides at 322 No. Van Ness avenue, and her telephone is Hollywood 6702.

REFORESTATION DISCUSSED.

At the meeting October 7 of the Native Sons' Forest Preservation Committee with George H. Barnes, president of the American Reforestation Association, the matter of affiliation with the national society was discussed. It was decided that, while co-operating with the American organization, the Order of Native Sons would devote its efforts mainly to the California problems, which are numerous.

Legislation that the coming State Legislature will be asked to adopt, was decided on. Barnes notified the committee that its chairman, Harvey M. Toy (Stanford 76), and Grand President Edward J. Lynch had been appointed members of the advisory board of the American Reforestation Association.

BABY SPOONS PRESENTED.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. initiated three candidates October 2. A donation of $22.65 was made to San Fernando Mission. Baby spoons were presented the son of Mrs. Mildred Ripling and the daughter of Mrs. Irma Norton. A card party, under the good of the order committee's auspices, followed the meeting. The dance at Jinistan Grotto October 23 was well attended and a social success.

November 6 the Parlor will receive an official visit from D.D.G.P. Carrie Lenhouse of Long Beach and will initiate a large class of candidates. November 20 John Steven McGroarty will deliver an address on "California's Missions." As the result of the members' recent visit to Palisades del Rey, the Parlor's treasury has been enriched to the extent of $204.

STATE (BEAR) FLAG FOR ROSE BOWL.

Two teams, captained by Clarence F. Gerhard and Clark E. Ives, are conducting a membership drive for Pasadena Parlor No. 259 N.S.G.W., and their efforts promise great success. Thirty-five applications are on file, and the Parlor will be represented at the county initiation in Los Angeles November 11 by a large number of candidates. A complete orchestra is a near-future prospect.

Armistice Day, November 11, preceding the Cal.-Tech. and Occidental College football game at the Rose Bowl, there will be flag-raising ceremonies. The American Flag will be hoisted by the American Legion, and the Board of Grand Officers N.S.G.W., acting for Pasadena, will raise the State (Bear) Flag. Resolutions have been adopted by the Parlor deploring the death of Lieutenant Arthur E. Hamilton, who was instrumental in its institution, and an engrossed copy will be sent his sorrowing parents.

Large delegations from Los Angeles 45 and Ramona 109 Parlors were in attendance October 10, when Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge paid his official visit to Pasadena. In addition to Dodge, addresses were made by Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Ronald H. Ross, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, Nathan Bixby and others. The Parlor has under way plans for the due observance in Pasadena next year of Flag Day, June 14, and Admission Day, September 9.

TRUST MAY HAVE COMPETITION.

Rumor has it that a $100,000,000 Eastern company is desirous of giving Los Angeles a competing telephone system. The biggest fool thing the people of this city ever did was to grant permission for the consolidation of the Home and Pacific companies under the camouflaged title Southern California Telephone Company, which is, in reality, but a branch of the Pacific telephone trust.

As the result of the merger, rates have been increased and service efficiency woefully decreased. For the good of Los Angeles, it is to be hoped that the new company will invade this field at an early date to compete with the trust. —C.M.H.

FRANCISCAN DAY.

October 9 was Franciscan day at the California History and Landmarks Club meeting. Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes presided, and there were addresses and music numbers pertinent to the occasion by Mrs. Nathan Cole Jr., Mrs. Grace Goucher, Miss Marcia Gilmore, Judge J. Walter Hanby (Ramona 109 N.S.G.W.), Miss Pauline Shelton and Miss Ruth Thompson.

TO CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. is making great plans for the observance November 13 of its thirty-eighth institution anniversary. The celebration will start with one of those famous ravioli suppers at 7 p. m., in the Parlor's quarters, Native Sons' Hall, 134 West Seventeenth street; reservations should be made early with the secretary. All the old-time members are to be special guests. Several specialty features will be introduced. Officers for the ensuing term will be nominated November 6 and elected the 20th; the 27th being Thanksgiving Day, there will be no meeting.

Los Angeles will present a large class for the Board of Grand Officers to initiate at the joint county ceremonies November 11. Two teams of fifteen members each, directed by William G. Newell and J. F. Velasco Jr., are competing for honors in getting the largest number of candidates; the losers will banquet the winners. The good of the order committee has made several beneficial changes in the Parlor's program.

Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge officially visited Los Angeles October 16 and witnessed the initiation of two candidates. There were talks by the visitor, Grand Trustee Newell and others, and "Chef" Golding served a "feed" which was greatly enjoyed by the big crowd assembled.

HAS NEW MEETING PLACE.

Corona Parlor No. 169 N.S.G.W. will hold its November 5 meeting at its new quarters in the Catholic Women's Clubhouse, 927 South Menlo avenue near Vermont. On the 20th there will be a home-warming, to which the Natives and their ladies are invited. Plans for the winter months call for short, snappy meetings, followed by social sessions. Corona will be host to the Board of Grand Officers on the occasion of their visit for the joint county initiation November 11.

L. A. HITCHCOCK, Member N.S.G.W.

At that function the Parlor will have a large class of candidates, which are being rounded up under the supervision of the membership committee, John Topham chairman. The membership has been divided into teams, captained by Vincent Cox, George McLain, Carl Frowein, Arthur Davis, Henry Bodkin, Leo Ward, Peter Muller, William Kennedy and Earl Thompson, which are conducting the drive for eligibles.

On the occasion of Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge's official visit to Corona, October 8, a class of candidates were initiated, and refreshments, including delicious home-made cake, were served. During the evening addresses were made by Grand Trustee Dodge, Henry G. Bodkin, Joe P. Sproul, Peter H. Muller, Grand Trustee Newell, Harry Joerder and others.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Edward N. Baxter, a member of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., died September 29. He was a native of Shaw's Flat, Tuolumne County, aged 61. Deceased was a son of the late David S. Baxter, at one time sheriff of Tuolumne County, and was a member of the State Assembly for two terms.

Cathmor Stamps, father of Willis O. Stamps (Ramona N.S.), died October 1 at the age of 70.

Lieutenant Arthur Elton Hamilton, a past president of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., died at Daggett, San Bernardino County, October 12. He was a native of El Monte, Los Angeles County, aged 36. He sacrificed his life for his country, for his untimely passing was directly due to injuries sustained while at the front during the world-war. He is survived by his wife, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Hamilton of Pasadena, and several brothers and sisters. "Ham" was a splendid type of the native Californian—a devout patriot, a first-class citizen and a loyal Native Son.

Liberato Di Vecchio, father of D. L. Di Vecchio (Los Angeles N.S.), died October 20. He was a native of Italy, aged 69. He came to California many years ago, and resided in Amador County until 1898, when he came to this city to engage in merchandising.

BUSINESS BAROMETERS.

Following are the September bank-clearing figures for Los Angeles County reported by the California Development Board:

Los Angeles City—$548,881,000 (1924).
$574,170,000 (1923).

Long Beach—$26,277,786 (1924), $34,985,639 (1923).

Hollywood—$23,093,141 (1924), $25,572,134 (1923).

Pasadena—$21,318,632 (1924), $19,087,814 (1923).

Santa Monica Bay—$7,977,453 (1924), $7,850,984 (1923).

Whittier—$2,546,988 (1924), $3,041,159 (1923).

PERSONAL MENTION.

James B. Coffey (Ramona N.S.) was a recent visitor to San Francisco.

A native son has arrived at the home of W. E. Peterson (Los Angeles N.S.).

Herman C. Lichtenberger (Ramona N.S.) was an October visitor to San Francisco.

Senator James D. Phelan (Pacific N.S.) of San Francisco was a visitor during October.

Jerome W. Woodworth (Los Angeles N.S.) has returned from an extended visit to San Francisco.

J. Frank Warner (Ramona N.S.) and wife have returned from an extended trip through the Eastern states.

Mrs. Amelia Colliver and Mrs. Laura Gilleran (both San Jose N.D.) of San Jose, were among the October visitors.

Elliott Gibbs (Pasadena N.S.) has been appointed justice of the peace for Pasadena township by the Board of Supervisors.

Judge Louis P. Russill (Ramona N.S.) and wife spent a large part of October autoing through the northern part of the state.

Mrs. Johanna Catherine Sharp of Pasadena and Thomas Jefferson Sawyer (Arrowhead N.S.) of Highland, San Bernardino County, were wedded here October 8.

Miss Lenore Gregg and Chester R. Bowen (Ramona N.S.) were wedded October 13 at the home of the bride's parents, Westwood, Los Angeles County. The honeymoon was spent at San Francisco.

Rice Crop—California's 1924 rice crop is estimated at 2,270,000 bags; last year the yield was 2,462,000 bags and in 1922 3,465,000 bags.

GRAND TRUSTEES VISITORS.

Many members of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. were out October 15 to welcome Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge of Martinez on the occasion of his official visit. Four candidates were initiated, making eight additions to the membership for the month. Numerous applications are on file, and the applicants will be presented at the Los Angeles County joint initiation in Los Angeles City, November 11, when the Board of Grand Officers will officiate. During the evening affairs of the Order and the Parlor were discoursed on by Grand Trustee Dodge, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Dr. S. T. Luce, Percy Hight, William G. Newell, Deputy Grand President A. V. Mayrhofer and others.

The matter of the proposed ousting of the Natives from Patriotic Hall, in the City Hall, was thoroughly discussed, and a committee was named to wait on the City Council and "show them" that, if there be any organizations sufficiently patriotic to meet the Council's requirements for permission to use the hall, the Native Sons and Native Daughters are to be classed as such, for they, as their records prove, are wholly and solely patriotic institutions, laboring for the welfare of nation and state.

The Parlor has a committee composed of Moya Robertson, T. E. Cervantes and Howard Norwood, charged with organizing a baseball team to enter the Native Sons' league. It also has a very active committee—Howard S. Norwood and A. Lee Gaudin—which serves an excellent repast at the close of each meeting.

head of a darning needle," says an exchange. "These insects live from eight to ten years as a general rule, although specimens in captivity have been known to reach the age of fifteen."

There are specimens of the human family with brains not so extensive as those of the ant, running around loose and living to a considerable age. Why pick on the ant?

At the convention of the Woman's Home Missionary Society at Chicago, October 9, Mrs. Mary Leonard Woodruff said: "The informed Christian sentiment of this country (America) is certainly with Mr. Hughes and President Coolidge in believing that the section of the immigration act providing for Japanese exclusion is both unnecessary and unwise."

What Mary should have said, is, "the Christian sentiment" fed up on pro-Jap propaganda emanating from the headquarters of Dr. Sidney L. Gulick and the Japan Society of America "is certainly with Mr. Hughes and President Coolidge." Those really informed know that, for the good of the country, Jap exclusion is both necessary and wise.

XMAS

CHRISTMAS IS THE ANNIVERSARY OF the nativity of Jesus Christ. The celebration properly begins with the evening of December 24, called Christmas Eve, and continues until Epiphany, January 6, the whole period being known as Christmas-tide.

Throughout the whole world, Christmas Day is now generally observed by religious services, festivities, interchange of gifts between relatives and friends, and distribution of food and clothing among the poor. In most Christian communities, the day is observed as a legal holiday.

"The first footsteps we find of the observation of this [Christmas] day," says Buck's "Theological Dictionary," "are in the second century, about the time of the emperor Commodus. The decretal epistles, indeed, carry it up a little higher, and say that Telesphorus, who lived in the reign of Antonius Pius, ordered divine service to be celebrated, and an angelic hymn to be sung the night before the nativity of our Saviour.

"That it was kept before the time of Constantine we have a melancholy proof; for whilst the persecution raged under Dioclesian, who then kept his court at Nicomedia, that tyrant, among other acts of cruelty, finding multitudes of Christians assembled together to celebrate Christ's nativity, commanded the church doors where they were met to be shut, and fire to be put to it, which soon reduced them and the church to ashes."

The managing editor of The Grizzly Bear recently received a request from the editor of "The Forum," published in New York, for a letter "giving your opinion as to whether we should naturalize the Japanese." The following was sent, in reply to the request:

"I am strenuously and unreservedly opposed to the naturalization of any Japs, or of any aliens ineligible to citizenship in this country. I believe that, in the interest of the future welfare of the United States, and particularly the Western portion thereof, where Japs have colonized by and with the consent of Japan, citizenship rights should be withheld from the offspring of aliens ineligible to citizenship.

"There are in this country numerous Japs who have entered illegally. As a class, and speaking from their record in California, they have no regard for our laws. They are deceitful. They have furnished no proof of their 'superior intelligence and industry'.

"If the privilege of naturalization be extended those Japs now here, it cannot be consistently denied others that may come in the future, and the past record vouches for the truth of the assertion that Japan, unquestionably having in mind the acquirement of Western United States, will find a way to keep a steady flow of its nationals into this country to become naturalized citizens.

"If the privilege of naturalization be extended the Japs now here, then it must, in all fairness, be extended to other aliens ineligible to citizenship—the Chinese, Hindus, etc.

"Naturalization of the Japs would mean the doom of California! They are unwanted, because they are, in no particular, our kind of people, and hence could not be assimilated. They are man-god worshipers, and their standards of living as well as their moral standards are such as would preclude the possibility of their becoming Americanized. Their presence here daily grows more menacing. Every effort should be made to have those now here return to their own country; that alone will assure lasting friendship between the United States and Japan."

Speaking from the bench on the Prohibition Amendment in the United States District Court at San Francisco November 13, Judge John S. Partridge said: "Everybody knows that there is a most widespread violation of the law, and the records of this court day by day show that the majority of those violating it are likewise defiant of it. If the time has come when repentance in some form is more important to the American people than the high state of rugged manhood by which alone this country can fulfill its manifest destiny as the abode of civilization, let's find it out and say so and stop being hypocrites about it."

The record in Judge Partridge's court is identical with that in every court in the land. The non-enforcement of the Prohibition Amendment not only reflects on the integrity of the National Government, but is daily increasing disrespect for all law. Officials, sworn to uphold the Constitution—not simply those portions which they personally approve of—and the laws are among the most consistent and willful transgressors. Assistant United States District Attorney David Hart is authority for the statement that right in the National Capitol there are 5,000 bootleggers—one booze-dispenser for every ninety Washingtonians.

In California, conditions are no worse and no better than elsewhere in the country. Booze, of all varieties, is being consumed in greater quantities than at any time prior to the enactment of the Prohibition Amendment. And the consumers, as well as the dispensers, are not alone the "foreign elements" of the population, but include federal, state, county and city officials, as well as numerous other "prominent" citizens. We have a situation where men address schoolchildren, foreigners, etc., on "respect for the Constitution," and then proceed to take on an over-cargo of any old sort of booze they can get hold of. What hypocrisy, and what an effect on the future welfare of the nation!

The Jap "tourist brides" are supplanting the "picture brides," and thus evading the exclusion provision of the Immigration Law which, among other things, was designed to stop the entry of new Jap-wives to breed subjects of Japan on American soil.

Here's the system: Female Jap "tourists" are allowed in under the law, and during the six months they are permitted to remain serve as "wives" and then go back to Japan. Their return the following year as "tourists" will be timed so that their children will be born here and thereby be American citizens.

The Jap has no respect for the laws of God or man, excepting those promulgated by his worshiped emperor. Knowing this to be a fact, valuable time is being lost and the yellow menace grows more menacing by continued failure to adopt an amendment to the Federal Constitution which would deny the right of citizenship to any child born in this country of parents ineligible to citizenship.

With that additional protective law and the rigid enforcement of all national and state laws now on the statute-books, there is hope that California may yet be saved for the White race. Otherwise, otherwise!

In the Union Ferry Building at San Francisco November 20, there was unveiled a panorama map of the State of California, procured by the California Development Association at a cost of over $100,000. It has been designated "California—Paradise in Panorama," that title, submitted by Miss Anna Porter of San Francisco, having been selected in a competition for a name which brought forth 18,000 suggestions.

The map is six hundred feet long and sixteen feet wide, and gives preference to no section of the state. It is effectively lighted, and the effect goes so far as to produce storms, sunrises, sunsets and other manifestations of nature. It is a wonderful piece of work, designed to impress on the viewer the greatness of California.

"The petty jealousy, fanned by small minds, too often encouraged between Northern and Southern California, should be ruthlessly destroyed," said John L. McNab of San Francisco in the keynote address at a gathering of representative men from all parts of the state preceding the unveiling. "Every business man in California should crush in its infancy the suggestion of anything stronger than wholesome rivalry between north and south. Let us unite in one forward drive, one common purpose and irresistible pressure for the good of ALL California."

Council for Prevention of War, was in Los Angeles last month, and in an address pleaded for "international good-will" and for the United States' entrance into the League of Nations.

Libby is pro-Jap, and there is a suspicion that he came to California for the purpose of arousing sentiment in favor of the repeal, by Congress, of the recently-enacted Immigration Law with the ineligible-to-citizenship exclusion provision. He is closely aligned with those church and other interests which appear determined to give the Japs all they seek, and thereby make California thoroughly yellow.

The State Department of Education is progressive, having planned programs for the benefit of the rural schools of California by use of the radio. The programs are from twenty minutes to a half-hour in length, and California history is among the subjects presented.

Grace C. Stanley, commissioner of elementary schools, in charge of the radio programs, arranged for broadcasting them from K.N.X. in Los Angeles every Tuesday, from K.M.J. in Fresno every Wednesday, and from K.G.O. in Oakland every Monday. The same topics are followed in all stations, but the speakers are taken from the various localities.

For the first nine months of 1924, the State Bureau of Vital Statistics reveals, 858 people, many of them children, were killed by autos in California. If the average of nearly 100 per month continues throughout the balance of the year, and there is every reason to believe that it will, the 1924 auto-killings will reach close to 1,200.

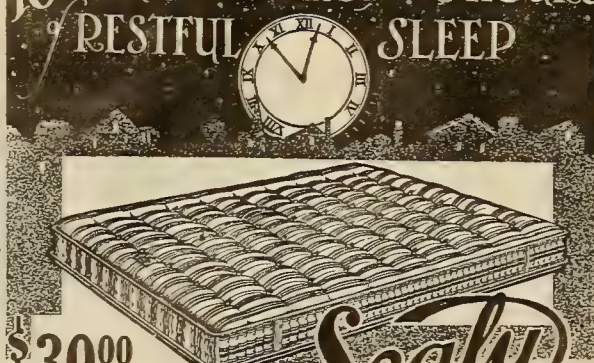

This is a deplorable record, and one for which the authorities, particularly the courts, are largely responsible! Some of the deaths were unquestionably the result of unavoidable accidents, but a great majority of them resulted from reckless driving by drunken auto-operators.

Most of those "birds," both male and female, listed as "prominent," "influential" or "wealthy," if ever brought to trial and convicted are let off with inconsequential fines or suspended prison sentences. If the law's penalty were impartially administered by the courts, the number of auto-killings in California would be materially reduced.

One of the best things the voters of California ever did was to ratify at the November election the measure providing for the collection of an annual polltax from non-taxpayers.

Two years hence, there should be submitted to the electors a proposition that would repeal the bit of fool-legislation which exempts church property from taxation.

AUTHOR OF "THE PRIDE OF PALOMAR," "THE VALLEY OF THE GIANTS," ETC.

(COPYRIGHT, BY THE AUTHOR.)

PRIOR TO THE NIGHT HE MET THE shabby little man in the alley leading to the stage entrance and was offered the lead in an unwritten drama of domestic life, Murray Boland frequently had felt that, of all the parts he had played in his time, few had been really great and none had quite measured up to the pinnacle of his artistic ability. While he was, of necessity, temperamental, he was not capricious; he reserved his temperament for his work and spared his associates, with a courteous and sportsman-like appreciation of the playwright's art and feelings; he never used his power to change a script in order to "hog" a scene for himself; what changes he did insist upon always were with a view to harmonizing the play as a whole. However, even with these changes, the personality of the author remained, and often Murray Boland had been tempted to extemporize. Consequently, when the shabby little man offered him the contract for the lead in the unwritten domestic drama, that latent yearning to extemporize—to play a part that would be real in every sense of the word—moved him to accept.

What mattered it that he had not attended a single rehearsal and that the play was to be given its premiere promptly on the stroke of midnight Christmas Eve, now scarcely more than twenty-four hours distant! Even had his new manager not been so wistful—assuring him he had to have a great character actor to play the part, and that of all the character actors in the world Murray Boland was the only one who could play it to please such a critical audience—the star could not have found it in his heart to refuse. The billing and advertising had already been attended to, the stage set, the props all arranged for, and the house sold out; to deny the shabby little man after all his trouble would have been too inhuman.

It was the latter's tribute of appreciation of the actor's art which really had aroused Murray Boland's interest, for after the dramatic critics have praised one for a decade in the language of the intellectually elect, it is good to meet a poor little nobody and hear him say: "You're the greatest character actor that ever lit on this earth, Mr. Boland, an' I'll bang the eye o' the man that says you ain't." For that is praise indeed, and long since Murray Boland had grown indifferent to praise of the hothouse variety. Consequently this tribute, fresh from the truck patch, as it were, and smelling slightly stronger than spring onions, coordinated with his ideas of realism and offered a welcome break in the monotony of a too-successful existence, for, after all, one may get a surfeit of culture and correct phrasing and long for a good honest oath! And I regret to state that the shabby little man swore for emphasis.

Nearly ten years had passed since the most eminent dramatic critics and a considerable portion of the public had commenced to agree with old man Silverman's press agent that Murray Boland was the greatest character actor in the United States, and a recently completed London engagement had lent support to the shabby little man's contention that he, Murray Boland, was the greatest character actor on earth. He had starred in plays which had succeeded, not because of the critics, but in spite of them; and, since in such plays the star's ability looms up like the spars of a ship in a low-lying fog, it followed that, no matter how vigorously the critics whetted their knives to kill the play, the bloody work was never completed without several kind words for Murray Boland.

There was more of a reason for this than the actor's art, for art minus personality is a frigid thing and the public will have none of it. There were six generations of Bolands in the private cemetery on the old home farm in Kentucky, but the roots of the family tree had been Irish, and from those forgotten forbears Murray Boland had inherited imagination and perfect understanding. It had been ordained that, in heart at least, he should never grow old; at forty he looked thirty, and could still read "Huckleberry Finn" and feel all queer and choky as he conjured up the picture of Huck bending over little Buck Sheppard, killed in the feud. His was the great gift of personal charm, and the instant he made his entrance that charm was projected over the footlights and found a haven in the hearts of his audience. It is quite probable that the shabby little man selected Murray Boland for the part because, instinctively, he realized that the actor was kind.

His friends, who knew Murray Boland for a cultured, college-bred gentleman, born with the proverbial silver spoon in his mouth, often wondered why he had elected to be an actor when he owned a stock farm down in Kentucky and paid a man $5,000 a year and five percent of the purses won to manage a racing stable for him. The reason lay in the fact that Murray Boland was a genius, and genius has a habit of asserting itself. He delighted in acting; to score, night after night, to bring laughter and tears—that was the fascination the profession held for him—and the sporting blood of his hard-riding, hard-drinking, fox-hunting ancestors bade him play the game for the game's sake.

However, this is not altogether the story of Murray Boland. The shabby little man is in the cast also; and now follows the manner of his entry into the drama.

A new and promising play had been found. The star had read it, enthused over it, and persuaded Silverman to give it a tryout in a small Connecticut city. The results had been flattering. The play had been running two weeks now, was eager, enthusiastic, lacking the professional whine of the panhandler. Murray Boland paused and looked down at him.

"All right, old horse," he said gravely. "Anything to make you happy. But suppose we walk. Remember this is Christmas weather and it's mighty cold standing in this damp alley."

"Thank you, Mr. Boland— if a stake horse like you ain't ashamed to be seen walkin' along with a sellin'-plater like me."

"Apparently you haven't won a race this year," the star replied, falling quickly into the other's vernacular.

"The devil's the handicapper an' I'm carryin' weight for age in the Christmas stakes. I'm lookin' to engage the best actor in the world for a little job tomorrow night, an' you're him. You're the greatest character actor that ever lit on this earth, Mr. Boland, and I'll bang the eye o' the man that says you ain't."

"Suppose we drop into some quiet little restaurant and talk it over," the actor suggested kindly. "We'd both be better for a cup of coffee this cold night."

"Geet!" murmured his companion aloud and, addressing himself: "I knew he was a gentleman." He shuffled along by Murray Boland's side until they reached a chophouse on a side street. The latter led the way to a booth and gave the order.

"Now, then, Bill," he said briskly, "out with it. I think you said you wanted to hire an actor."

"No sir, I'm lookin' to hire an artist. I could get a hamfat down from New York to do the trick for a tenth o' what you're worth, but when I'm out to do a job I do it right, an' the best ain't none too good in this particular case. Mr.

to a nice little business, and on the closing night Murray Boland had been called to the footlights and commanded by his subjects to make a speech. Forthwith he had made it, thus agreeably closing the successful tryout. And that night, in the alley, he met the shabby little man.

Boland had anticipated the meeting, for on his way out the doorman had informed him that a little bum had just been there asking for him. "He's a panhandler, sir," the doorman warned. "I think he's layin' for yuh."

"Thank you. I think he'll be easy to dispose of," Boland answered, and swung down the alley, while he felt in his pocket for half a dollar. As he approached the alley entrance a wizened, undersized man darted toward him; a pale, weak, ineffectual face looked eagerly up from under the rim of an old black derby hat much too large for the head it covered; a dirty hand came up and touched the hat respectfully.

"Mr Boland, will you stop and let me speak to you just a minute? I'm not a beggar. I—I— please, sir, I wish you would." The man's voice Boland, I want you to star in a little private sketch that ain't written yet. You'll be the whole company an' get all the applause."

"But I am already under contract, my dear man," Boland began, thinking his good nature had led him into contact with a lunatic.

"This won't interfere, sir. You'll only show one night an' after your regular performance. Besides, this show closed tonight, didn't it?"

"When do you want me to play this part?"

"At midnight tomorrow night."

"Huh! And what is the part?"

The shabby little man looked around, leaned across the table, and said softly: "I want you to be a real Santa Claus to my little girl—that is, she ain't my little girl no more, but I'm her father, all right, all right. As I said before, I could get a hamfat to do it, only I'm afraid he'd take a run-off at the last minute—an' I just couldn't stand to have her disappointed, Mr. Boland. I sent word I've fixed it up with Santa Claus to call at midnight, so's she can see him an' have a talk with him—an', my God, sir, I can't afford no four-flusher. My Santa Claus has got to be real. He's got to be on to his job."

"I'm afraid I will be unable to take the part, Bill," Boland replied seriously. "You see, they pay me about five hundred dollars a night for acting, and I couldn't work for less. You didn't know that, of course, so I think you'd better engage a hamfatter after all."

The shabby little man looked grieved. "Why, sir, you don't suppose I'd have the crust to ask a man o' your standin' to do a job like this for nothin'?" he queried. "No, sir-ee. Of course I ain't got that much ready cash, but I can dig up the collateral," and he rolled something across the table to Boland.

The latter picked it up. It was a ring set in sapphires and diamonds and worth probably a thousand dollars, and as the actor looked at it he started in amazement. It was his own ring, given him years before by old man Silverman after Murray had scored his first great success. Two nights previous his apartment had been burglarized and among other things this ring had been taken. Now the burglar sat before him pleading with him to play the part of a real Santa Claus. It occurred to Murray Boland that he had already played the part, and it was on the tip of his tongue to tell the shabby little man as much, only his sense of humor restrained him. He could not, however, conceal the start of surprise occasioned by this curious coincidence.

The shabby little man noticed it, but attributed it to another motive. "Some bright little sparkler, eh?" he said. "I s'pose you're surprised to see a down-and-outer like me pull a rock like that."

"Rather, Bill, rather. Where did you get it?" "Never mind where I got it. Slip it on your finger an' see if it fits."

It fitted perfectly—of course. Together they admired it. The shabby little man broke the silence presently:

"It's worth more'n five hundred, ain't it, Mr. Boland?"

"I think so, Bill. About a thousand, I should say."

"Good enough. I'll be under a little extra expense on top o' your fee, but as I ain't got the cash I'm goin' to ask you to put it up for me. The ring'll cover everythin', with some to spare. There'll be a Santa Claus suit, wig an' whiskers, an' a big pack o' toys, an' the doll, an' I thought we'd slip the night watchman about half a century"—

"What night watchman?"

"Out at the winter quarters o' the circus. I'm goin' to steal the four trottin' reindeer"—

"The what?"

"The four trottin' reindeer. Say, them four deer'll handle like four horses. An' there's a sleigh an' sleighbells—why, you couldn't be a real Santa Claus without the reindeer an' the sleighbells, could you, Mr. Boland?"

"I dare say I could not. And yet I hesitate to drive four stolen reindeer. Can't we hire them or borrow them with the permission of the owner of the circus?"

"There ain't time enough to reach him. He's in Europe. Besides, they're the only trottin' reindeer in this country, an' we couldn't hire 'em or borrow 'em for love or money. We've just naturally got to steal 'em."

"But how about the night watchman? I'm not anxious to be shot, Bill."

The shabby little man had evidently considered this point, however, for he answered readily: "We'll have to poke a gun in his ribs first, Mr. Boland. Then we'll bind him an' gag him an' set him in a warm place, while we make our getaway with the reindeer. When we're through with 'em we'll bring 'em back, turn the night watchman loose, an' slip him the fifty for his trouble. Then he won't say nothin'."

MORELAND TRUCKS and BUSES

Have Demonstrated California's Superior Manufacturing Possibilities

Fourteen years ago when the Moreland Trucks were first made, many people scoffed at the idea that quality manufactured products could be made in California.

In 1923, over $4,000,000 worth of Moreland Trucks and Buses were sold in direct competition with the leading makes in the United States.

The Moreland Company has demonstrated California's manufacturing possibilities by building trucks and buses of a quality unexcelled by any produced anywhere in this country.

"That seems to be a reasonable program," Murray Boland found himself saying, "but before I consider the proposition further, suppose you tell me why you're so set on the reindeer. I must confess your fidelity to detail, your insistence on realism, interests me."

"Could I have a beefsteak?" the stranger queried. "I ain't had a square meal in three days. I had a little cash, but I needed it for somethin' else, an' I didn't dare hock that ring because they'd only give me a couple o' hundred on it an' that wouldn't be enough for your fee, an' maybe they'd think I stole it an'—"

"Yes, yes, I understand," Boland interrupted. Already he liked the shabby little man sufficiently to entertain an aversion to hearing him lie. "Waiter, bring the gentleman a tenderloin smothered in onions and some French-fried potatoes, a cup of coffee and a piece of hot mince pie."

"Thank you, sir. It's this way with me," Boland's strange guest began as soon as the waiter had departed for the kitchen. "I don't amount to much, but o' course you can see that for yourself without me tellin' you. But I was somebody once. I was a premier jockey. I'll skip most o' my life up to the time I met Millie, because I don't know very much about it anyhow, an' I have to think back pretty far to remember a time when I wasn't sleepin' in back rooms or walkin' horses up an' down, coolin' 'em out. I suppose, before I was sixteen years old, I'd exercised horses on every race track in America an' Canada—yes, an' once we went down into old Mexico. Then I become a 'prentice jock an' the old man took to givin' me the leg-up on the two-year-olds an' skates he wasn't bettin' on in the sellin' races. I done so well he let me take out old Grandee in the Thanksgivin' handicap at Tanforan—that's out near San Francisco. I was up against the best of 'em that day, but there's folks who'll never forget the ride I gave Grandee."

"I remember him well," Murray Boland interrupted. "My uncle bred him, and he was the only white horse I ever saw that could get out of his own way."

"Yes, an' he was eighteen years old when I nosed out Majestic in that Thanksgivin' handicap."

"Bill," said Murray Boland impressively, "are you the Hand-riding Kid?"

"I was the Hand-ridin' Kid," the shabby little man answered, with a slight emphasis on the verb. "So you knew me in them days?"

"I knew of you. I owned Ballantrae—own him still for that matter—and you won the sweepstakes with him at New Orleans. What became of you?"

Unconsciously he was addressing the Hand-riding Kid and speaking of him in the past tense.

"I went to hell," said the Hand-riding Kid simply. "An' so you're the Starlight tables, eh? Lord, how I booted Ballantrae home in front o' that field. We stepped the mile in thirty-eight. But it was that race on old Grandee that made me. I went to Europe the followin' summer, an' rode for the royalty."

"Get along with your story, Kid," his host warned him. "If you and I start talking horses, we'll never get around to reindeer. You were the Hand-riding Kid and you met Millie and married her. Who and what was Millie?"

"Millie was—Millie is—the greatest female bareback rider that ever showed under canvas."

She's the star of the profesh—been ten years with Bell & Tierney's circus an' don't show no signs o' stiffenin' up yet. But then we was both under twenty when we married. Naturally, both bein' topnotchers in our line an' both bein' interested in horses—say, do you know anythin' about circus people?"

"No, I never trooped with a circus," Boland admitted.

"Neither did I," said the Hand-riding Kid, "but you can't marry a bareback rider without findin' out somethin' about the circus. The lowest o' the low with a circus is the razorback that sets up the big top, an' the highest o' the high is the bareback riders. They're the 'ristocrats o' the business. Generally they're descended from a family o' riders; they marry among themselves an' the family works together. It ain't very often bareback riders marry outside the circus, an' it ain't often they marry outside their class in the circus. They're decent people, with a savin' instinct; most of 'em have fine homes an' all of 'em are prouder'n a ten-time winner—that is, if there's any class at all to them or the show they're with. Anybody that thinks just because a circus woman wears tights and spangles she's in the Broadway show-girl class has sure got an awful awakenin' comin' to him if he takes a chance an' gets fresh. Well, there was a lot o' class to me in them days. I was a premier race rider, an' Millie married me, but for all that her people an' her friends considered she'd married outside her class."

"That was the little rift within the lute that made Mendelssohn's 'Wedding March' mute, eh?"

"It was mistake No. 1, Mr. Boland—an' Millie made it. There's been a good many mistakes made since then, but I guess I'm responsible for all them."

"You made money too fast, I suppose. Your head swelled a little when fame came your way, didn't it?" Murray Boland suggested.

"I don't know as I got the swelled head, sir, but I did make money fast. The trouble was I didn't make it fast enough. I was some spender, never thinkin' o' the day when I'd get heavy an' be out o' the runnin'—an' bimeby I noticed I had to sweat out a whole lot to make the weight. There was months that I didn't eat a square meal, an' if I as much as looked at a steak I'd take on a couple of ounces. About this time I commenced to worry about never havin' saved any money—an' that was a bad frame o' mind for me to be in, with all them pirates o' bookmakers an' crooked owners lookin' for the main chance. I might as well own up, Mr. Boland, I took to ridin' to the post with a couple o' tickets on another horse down my bootleg."

"I understand. And one bright day the judges asked you to step up into the pagoda and pull off your boots, eh?"

The Hand-riding Kid nodded sorrowfully. Considering his youth and the environment of a lifetime, there was much that he might have said in his defense, yet he forebore saying it. Murray Boland observed this and set it down to the Hand-riding Kid's credit.

"They ruled me off for life," the derelict continued drearily. "The papers was full of it, an' to make it worse Millie was with me at the time. She'd been out with the circus all summer, bein' under contract when I married her, but when the season closed she come out to California to join me at the winter meetin'."

The unhappy little wretch clasped his head in his hands and gazed at the table. There was a long and painful silence, broken at last by Murray Boland: "Of course, you wouldn't admit to yourself in those days that it was the occasional little drink that was putting the weight on you. And when you were ruled off you went on a grand spree to drown the disgrace of it, eh Kid?"

The Hand-riding Kid nodded. "I was smashed. I didn't know nothin' except horses, but, Lord bless you, sir, I could tell what they were thinkin' about; I could talk to them an' they understood my language. I never used a bat on a horse in my life, Mr. Boland. I just rode 'em with my hands an' talked to 'em an' encouraged 'em, an' when the field spread out on the turn an' swept into the home stretch, the horses I rode always had somethin' left for the little ol' Hand-riding Kid, an' they give it with a free heart. Mr. Boland, sir, a horse that won't run for the love of a race ain't a horse but a goat, an' I—I—I could make the weight now, but there's nobody that'd trust me with a mount, even if they could. When they broke me, the only thing I knew was horses, an' the only job I could get was groom to somebody that didn't know me. Just think of it, sir. Me—the Hand-riding Kid—swipe around a polo stable!" He spat in his disgust, and Murray Boland waited for him to go on.

"A swipe can't support a wife, Mr. Boland, an' a circus 'ristocrat can't have a swipe for a husband. You see the position Millie was in, don't you, sir? She'd gone out of her class to marry; everybody'd been sayin': 'Millie'll regret marryin' that Hand-riding Kid. He ain't a man. He's a rabbit'; an' now she knew they'd all be sayin': 'I told you so.'"

"So she left you, did she?" Boland queried sympathetically.

"She did not. I'd done her dirt enough—so I left her. It was the least I could do after disgracin' her. An' besides I wasn't leavin' her broke. She'd been ridin' since she was sixteen, drawin' big money, an' she was wiser'n me. She'd saved hers, an' I couldn't lay around an' have her support me. It most broke my heart to give up her an' the baby, though, but I done it."

"Where are Millie and the baby now, Kid?"

"Right here in this town. The circus winters here, an' Millie likes to live close by, so's she can run out a couple o' times a week an' practice. She got a divorce from me for desertion out there in California, an' now she's married again—in the profession. Him an' her works together, an' he's good to my baby."

"And you want the little girl to see a real Santa Claus, eh?"

"Well, it's this way, Mr. Boland. Of course I don't blame Millie a bit for feelin' sore at what

I went an' done to her, but she ought to let me see my baby. The last time I tried to see Aileen, Millie called her in. 'Aileen,' she says, 'you've often asked me about your daddy. See that man there. That's your daddy. He's wearin' a suit o' clothes somebody give him—provided he didn't steal 'em—an' he needs a shave an' a bath. Do you want that kind of a daddy, Aileen?'

The Hand-riding Kid's eyes filled; the lump in his throat choked him. It was horrible.

"Millie's set my baby against me," he resumed presently. "I don't blame her for feelin' sore the way I went an' disgraced her, but she oughtn'ter tell my baby. I'd never pester her an' Aileen; I just want to see the baby once in a while. I can't help lovin' my baby, can I? She's my own flesh an' blood—an' Millie's settin' her against me."

He choked again, but apparently from sorrow rather than rage. Boland doubted if in that wretched body there was sufficient vitality or stability of character to enable the Hand-riding Kid to attain to the dignity of a man's fury.

"An' so I wanted to do somethin'," the little man went on drearily—"somethin' that would make her remember her daddy an' think well o' him as long as she lived. She's just eight years old now—just old enough to know all about Santa Claus an' believe in him an' watch for him on Christmas Eve. Maybe you know how it is with kids, sir. They go to bed Christmas Eve—so fellers tells me that's had 'em—after hangin' up their little socks near the fireplace; an' they have their little minds all made up to stay awake an' listen for Santa Claus. When he comes they're goin' to sneak downstairs an' have a good, long look at him. Me, I never believed in Santa Claus, because nobody ever took the trouble to tell me about him, but I sorter got a hunch that there never was a kid that did believe in him that didn't figger on surprisin' Santa Claus at work an' gettin' a good square look at him. But the doggone trouble is they always fall asleep! Poor little codgers! You know, Mr. Boland, a kid can't stay awake. He thinks he'll do it, but he just can't—an' while he's asleep Santa Claus comes or he doesn't come, dependin' on the size o' the family bank roll. It's pretty tough on the kids, ain't it?"

"Indeed it is," Murray Boland agreed most heartily. "I've been through it myself and I know."

"Well, I figgered out my scheme an' who I'd get to work it out for me. I've been settin' up in nigger heaven night after night watchin' you work, Mr. Boland, an' it seemed to me that if I went to you an' tole you how it was with me, an' did business on a businesslike basis, you'd understand. I was so sure of it I went ahead an' made all the arrangements."

"In these days it is a compliment to be considered as human as all that. I thank you, Kid. However, go on with your story. I'm profoundly interested."

"I hung around Millie's neighborhood all day yesterday, hopin' I'd see her go out, so's I could go up to the house an' see Aileen. But I didn't have no luck until after supper, when I see Aileen's nurse headin' for the motion-picture show. At the corner I stopped her an' asked her if she was Miss Aileen's nurse, an' lifted my hat, polite-like, an' she said she was, an' I handed her a ten-case note—the last I had in the world. I says to her: 'That's yours an' another like it if you'll do me a favor. I'm Aileen's father, an' I've figgered it out to give her a merry Christmas if I can—one that she'll remember as long as she lives. On Christmas Eve I want you to set up an' listen for the sound o' sleighbells around about midnight. If you hear 'em, look out, an' if you see Santa Claus comin' down the avenoo behind four trottin' reindeer, you wake up Aileen an' let her have a look. Remember, now, if Santa Claus tells me he's seen Aileen at the window, you'll get another ten-case note by mail next day. An' don't you mention nothin' of this to Aileen's mother. Just go to Aileen on Christmas Eve an' tell her you've had a telephone message from Santa Claus, sayin' that her real daddy has been up to the North Pole to see him an' ask him if he wouldn't make it a point to arrive at Aileen's house just at midnight, so she could know he was comin' an' get a look at him. You tell her, I says, 'that Santa Claus says this is a most unusual procedure an' absolutely against the rules, but on account o' his great personal friendship for her real daddy he'll do it, an' for her to be waitin'.'"

"She'll want a doll that can go to sleep," says the nurse. "Then you tell her Santa Claus asked what she wanted, an' you told him, an' he said: 'All right, I'll bring her the doll.'" So the nurse took the ten-case note an' said she'd set up all night if I wanted her to, an' I took her name, an' told her not to say anythin' to Aileen until I telephoned an' told her it was all right. You see, sir, when I telephone she'll wake Aileen up—they sleep in the same room—an' Aileen'll think I'm Santa Claus telephonin'. Of course, sir, I couldn't take a chance an' have the little one all worked up—an' then have somethin' slip at the last minute so we couldn't get the reindeer."

"Quite right, quite right," murmured Murray Boland.

"You see what I'm drivin' at, don't you, sir? Millie tells my baby her daddy's a tramp an' that she must forget all about him an' never recognize him if he comes up to her on the street an' tries to speak to her. But if Aileen thinks I've got pull enough with Santa Claus to get him to telephone ahead o' time when he's comin', just so's she can get a peak at him—why, it's goin' to take a whole lot to convince that kid her daddy's as big a bum as she's been told he is. Anyhow, I figger it'll make an impression on her mind, an' as long as she lives she'll never forget the sight o' Santa Claus an' them four trottin' reindeer, an' the big pack o' toys in back o' the sleigh an' the sleighbells an' the snow on the deserted avenoo an' the roofs o' the houses, just like the pictures in the books. She'll wonder about it an' keep her little secret until she's big enough to know there ain't no Santa Claus, an' then she'll keep on wonderin' until she's a young lady—an' then she'll understand. She'll think

CHRISTMAS FIFTY YEARS AGO

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

Our thoughts go back to Christmas times,
With all their cold and snow,
The ones we used to have back East,
Some fifty years ago.
The sleighbells jingled on the air,
We'd skating parties, too,
While turkey dinners were the thing,
And famous mince pies grew.
We'd ginger cakes and popcorn balls,
And molasses taffy, oh!
It sets our mouths to watering yet,
Like fifty years ago.

At night we'd hang our stockings up,
And set our caps about,—
Us children hustled off to bed
With a frolic and a shout.
And in the morning how we'd yell
And holler, "Christmas gift!"
Then scamper all about the place,
Till the roof would almost lift.
We'd search the caps, and stockings too,
All hanging in a row,
While saying, "Now I got yours first,"
Some fifty years ago.

This happened when our hearts were young,
In a very different clime,
But it seemed the best in all the world
In that far-off Christmas time.
But here in California fair,
With its sunshine and its flowers,
We do not mind some things to loose
That seemed once so great as ours.
But the Christmas joys that come today
Are the very best, we know,—
More filled with wonders strange and new,
Than fifty years ago.

With fond delight we hail the day,
With its happiness so complete,
And gladly welcome it each year,
For the world is just as sweet.
We like to smile and make a wish,
"Merry Christmas!" to you all,
And get the blessings in return
That come to great and small.
For Christmas means as much today,
Where flowers and holly grow,
As in the time when we were young,
Some fifty years ago.

it was pretty nice of her tramp of a father to go to all that trouble to make her happy, don't you think she will, Mr. Boland? She'll say to herself what you said in your speech tonight, sir: 'There is a chord in every human heart; if it can be touched, it will bring forth sweet music.' That's what she'll say, an' she'll figger that maybe after all there was a chord in the heart o' the Hand-ridin' Kid, an' if somebody'd only took the trouble to touch it—but here's that tenderloin steak!"

"Put it under your belt, old man," his host advised, "and tomorrow night we'll see if we can't bring forth some sweet music. But I hardly think we'll have to steal the reindeer. I'll find out Tierney's address in Europe and cable him.

He has bought out Bell's interest, and he'll do anything for me. Why, didn't I sell him those four bays he used in the Roman chariot race last summer, and wasn't he a swipe for my father when he came over from Ireland forty years ago? Don't talk to me of Pat Tierney! I'll have his eyeteeth, if I desire them."

It was midnight before Murray Boland succeeded in locating the manager of Bell & Tierney's circus—one Larry Donovan. They had awakened the night watchman at the circus quarters out of a sound sleep to locate Mr. Donovan, and they now awakened Mr. Donovan in order to locate Pat Tierney, somewhere in Europe. Mr. Donovan came to his front door in dressing gown and a very ill humor which was dissipated the instant Murray Boland introduced himself and explained his errand.

"An' where might Tierney be, say you? Sorra wan av me know, but ye might ask the divil that never loses sight av his own. Was it 'somethin' private an' confidential ye wanted to cable him about?"

"I desire to lease, steal or otherwise acquire for use tomorrow night Bell & Tierney's celebrated trotting reindeer, together with a sleigh, sleighbells!"

"Wirra, but 'tis the grand little press agent ye are, Misther Boland, playin' Santa Claus to the populace." Nobody ever had to kick Larry Donovan. A hint was always sufficient. "The divil scoort Pat Tierney. I'm his manager, so take the reindeer wit' Pat's compliments an' my blessin', an' see to it (an' sure I needn't mention it) that Bell & Tierney get the binifit av a brief mention."

"Nothing doing, Mr. Donovan. This is not a publicity stunt, but strictly a private affair. I could murder the man that gives it out. I'm going to play Santa Claus to one little girl!"

"You're not. You're goin' to play it to three little girls an' wan boy. Take the reindeer tomorrow night, but see to it that ye come by my house, an' telephone before ye come. As for the reindeer, they'll be the better for a bit av a run in the snow, an' they're as gintle as Shetland ponies. Sure a child could dhrove thim. Whin do ye want thim?"

"At one o'clock Christmas morning, thank you."

"I'll have thim ready for you. And now good-night to you, Misther Boland. If I shtay here a minute longer, I'll have me death o' cold—may the divil fly away wit' you, if he only carried you a mile a day."

The door banged in Murray Boland's face, and he returned to the taxicab to impart the tidings of great joy to his companion. "And now, Hand-rider," he continued, "I'm going to ask you to get the remainder of the props. All the pictures of Santa Claus I've ever seen picture the old gentleman with a great knapsack on his back, and it's just bulging with toys. Now, Hand-rider, here are two hundred dollars on account of the change due you on that ring. Right after breakfast you go to a harness maker and give him a rush order for a large knapsack made from white buckskin. My coat being bright red, white buckskin will make a nice contrast when the pack is on my back. After ordering it, drop around to a department store and buy the big sleeping doll; and if I were you I'd buy it dressed, full and fancy. Then buy two more dolls just like it, a drum, an air rifle, an assortment of bugles, games, and other gimcracks and a coaster to lash on the rear of the sleigh and give tone to the outfit. Get Aileen a complete set of doll furniture, cook stove—the whole works—understand? We've got to fill that pack to overflowing, so don't skimp on the props. When you've finished your shopping rent a taxicab and bring everything out to Bell & Tierney's. Don't trust to have them delivered; if you do, you'll get them about New Year. In the meantime I'll wire a costumer in New York to send a man down here with a Santa Claus suit for me."

When Murray Boland reached the winter quarters of the Bell & Tierney circus at one o'clock on Christmas morning, it was not Murray Boland that stepped out of the taxicab, but Saint Nicholas himself. Had he entertained any doubt on the subject himself it would quickly have been dissipated, for the night watchman and two circus attendants having harnessed the reindeer and hitched them to the sleigh, were standing by with itching palms and expectant faces. Santa Claus looked the equipment over, saw that everything was as it should be, and distributed largess accordingly. The Hand-riding Kid, fairly exuding the spirit of merry Christmas, sat in the seat holding the reins; only his profound appreciation of the dignity that attaches to a celebrity kept him from swatting Murray Boland on the back or prodding him familiarly in the short ribs. He contented himself with an admiring glance at his leading man's patent-leather jackboots, his scarlet coat trimmed with ermine, his little round fur-trimmed red turban, and the silvery hair and whiskers framing a face as ruddy as a winter apple. "By Judas," he said, "you're some Santa Claus!"

It was just the kind of Christmas Eve on which one would expect to encounter Santa Claus. There was almost a foot of snow on the ground, and a recent cold snap had crusted it nicely; a full moon cast a silver light over the white landscape, causing the snow crystals to sparkle until the world resembled a fairyland. As Murray Boland sent the four reindeer scampering down the white road leading to the city he forgot that he was the greatest character actor in the world and became inwardly what he already was externally—the merriest, the rosiest, the kindest old Santa Claus that ever clucked to a reindeer.

The team traveled fast, their long, tireless trot taking them over the ground at better than twelve miles an hour. Twice they were halted by policemen, these being the only living creatures that the lateness of the hour and the zero weather permitted abroad, but the halts were merely for the purpose of enabling the guardians of the sleeping city to shake hands with Santa Claus and congratulate him on his originality.

"Everybody gets kind o' human around Christmas time," the Hand-riding Kid observed, apropos of this evidence of the yuletide spirit in the hearts of his hereditary enemies.

Presently they turned into a broad avenue in the best residential section of the city. "We'll run down past the house an' I'll show it to you, sir," the Hand-riding Kid announced, and a few minutes later he pointed out Millie's home. Santa Claus marked it by the elm tree that stood in front of it, and they continued on for three more blocks before pausing.

"Now, sir," the Hand-riding Kid announced, "I'm goin' to sneak around the next block to the fire-house. That's always open, an' I can telephone to Aileen's nurse from there. She told me she'd be downstairs waitin', an' I see a light as we passed by. You wait here until you hear me whistle—this way," and he thrust thumb and forefinger into his mouth and blew a shrill whistle; "an' that'll be your cue to come on. An', listen. When you come, come like you've been wired for but was delayed in startin', an' before you start hang them sleighbells around the necks o' the leaders. Then just imagine you're turnin' into the home stretch, an' if them reindeer have anything left just speak to 'em an' ask 'em to give it to you. You know how it is with Santa Claus. He's got a whale of a route to cover in a night, an' when he travels he don't let the grass grow under his feet. When you pull up in front o' the house, tie the leaders to the elm tree; there's a couple o' snap ropes in the bottom o' the sleigh."

He darted away, his grotesque figure casting shadows equally grotesque on the moonlit snow, his run-over heels crunching it as he ran. Ten minutes passed; then down the avenue floated the Hand-riding Kid's shrill signal. Santa Claus, standing at the heads of the leaders, slipped the bell collars around their necks, climbed back into the sleigh, and started down the avenue. He left it presently and circled a block before coming back, and then he came as the Hand-riding Kid used to come when "beating the barrier." Around the corner he swung on one runner; then as he straightened out he laid the lash smartly across the flanks of his team, and from the long, swift trot they broke presently into a gallop. The snow flew from the runners; the peal of the bells, the thud of hoofs on the crisp surface of the snow, the cracking of the whip, and the hearty exhortations of Santa Claus aroused the echoes in the silent street, and a window here and there was raised as the wild spectacle flew by in the moonlight.

It was glorious, and for the first time in his career as an actor Murray Boland felt that he was playing a part that called for the expression of his greatest art. As he glimpsed the light upstairs in Millie's house and saw a little white figure at the open window, it came to him suddenly that he was starring in an unwritten drama, and that at last he could extemporize without hurting the author's feelings.

"What an entrance!" he exulted. "And there's the audience on its feet already, dancing in ecstasy. Why, this is my greatest part—Christmas morning, and Murray Boland playing to the innocent heart of a child. And now for some acting!"

He stood up in his sleigh and cracked his whip furiously. "Ho, Dancer!" he shouted. "Ho, Prancer! Ho, Blitzen! Ho, Stamper!" He turned his back on the audience and scanned the opposite side of the street as if looking for a house number. Two jumps more and he would have been into the next block, when clear above the uproar of his passing he heard the acclaim of his audience: "Santa! Santa! I'm he-e-e-r! This is Ailee-e-en!"

Santa Claus turned. He saw her. To prove it he waved his hand at her, and then sat down and commenced to saw at his reindeer, the while the shrill cries in his rear encouraged him. He continued on for a block before he could bring the excited animals under control; then he swung them and came back at a fine fast trot, pulled up under the elm tree, sprang out, tied the leaders to the tree, shouldered his great pack and with exactly the right kind of a Santa Claus waddle started up the steps. As he reached the landing the door flew open and all that the

Distinction

THE SAME QUALITIES that give pre-eminence to a rare print or an old master are to be found in the Rola Re★Creator—beauty and harmony in line and workmanship, individuality, creative skill.

The Rola Re★Creator is a radical departure in construction and in performance from the commonly known type of reproducer or "loud-speaker." It achieves results which have long been considered impossible in the radio world. A Rola demonstration carries convincing proof. You may hear it at your dealers.

MIGHTY TREE FALLS IN NATIVE SON FOREST

PAST GRAND PRESIDENT MAURICE T. DOOLING PASSES ON

MAURICE TIMOTHY DOOLING, United States Judge for the Northern District of California, Past Grand President and most beloved member of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, died at San Francisco, November 4, survived by his wife, Mrs. Ida Dooling, two sons, Maurice T. Jr. and Charles W. Dooling, and three sisters, Miss Anna Dooling, Mrs. John O'Connell and Sister Gertrude Dooling of Mary's Help Hospital, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Judge Dooling was born at Nevada City, Nevada County, October 12 1860, but spent most of his life at Hollister, San Benito County. He was a member of the State Assembly in 1814, subsequently served two terms as district attorney of San Benito County, and from 1896 until 1913 served continuously as judge of the Superior Court of that county. July 13 1913 he was appointed Federal Judge by the late President Woodrow Wilson.

Past Grand President Dooling's association with the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West dates from June 18 1895, when he affiliated with Fremont Parlor No. 44 at Hollister. He represented that Parlor in the Grand Parlor continuously, with the exception of the Twenty-eighth Session, from the Twentieth Session, held at Redwood City in 1897, through the Forty-seventh Session, at Sacramento in May of this year.

At the Twenty-second Session, Salinas 1899, he was elected Grand Trustee, which position he occupied until the Twenty-seventh Session, Vallejo 1904, when he was chosen Grand Third Vice-president. At the Thirtieth, Napa 1907, Session he was elevated to the Grand Presidency, and presided at the Thirty-first Session, held in the Yosemite Valley in 1908. Of recent years, Past Grand President Dooling's activity in the Order was centered about the homeless children work of the Native Sons and Native Daughters, he being at the time of his passing, and for several years previous, the chairman of the Central Homeless Children Committee.

Funeral services were conducted in Hollister, where Judge Dooling's remains were laid to rest in the Catholic cemetery. There was an immense outpouring of deceased's friends, and Rev. Father Gleason of Palo Alto, a member of Palo Alto Parlor No. 216 N.S.G.W., paid such a tribute to the worth of Judge Dooling that there was not a dry eye in the immense assemblage.

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West was represented at the burial obsequies by the following, who escorted Past Grand President Dooling's remains from the church to the cemetery: Grand President Edward J. Lynch, Junior

MAURICE TIMOTHY DOOLING,
Past Grand President N.S.G.W.

William I. Traeger, the membership of Fremont Parlor No. 44, County Clerk Harry I. Mulerevy and Supervisors Ralph McEran, Angelo J. Rossi and J. Emmet Hayden of San Francisco, Federal Judge John Partridge, Percy V. Long, John P. Coughlin, Charles J. Heggarty, James B. Hallohan and Judge Benjamin K. Knight.

A TRIBUTE

(DANIEL A. RYAN,
Past Grand President N.S.G.W.)

"A mighty tree hath fallen in the fraternal forest of the Native Sons of the Golden West! A sequoia gigantea is prone to mother earth. Maurice T. Dooling is dead. Past Grand President Dooling is gone. Judge Dooling is no more. He was born when the State of California was in its infancy and, like it, grew to distinction and fame.

"Brother Dooling was a distinguished lawyer, a great judge, and a noted scholar. His decisions gave evidence of a fundamental knowledge of law, and he never permitted the exigencies of a particular case to outweigh the basic structure of law. He increased the power and reduced the form of law.

"His keenness of mind, clarity of vision and great integrity, enabled him to carry with comparative ease and to expeditiously discharge the burdens and duties of a federal judge.

"No man loved California better than did Judge Dooling! No man was more loyal to the Order of the Native Sons than that distinguished brother. His name is written in the constitution, by-laws and ritual of the Order, and is enshrined in the heart of every member.

"One of his traits, and which is one of the distinguishing marks of great men, was his modesty. As slightly illustrative of that virtue, after he had been appointed by President Wilson he told us at a banquet given him by the Past Grand Presidents that, on the first day he assumed the federal bench, immediately upon adjournment the bailiff of the court came to the bench and took his notebook, which he indicated to be not much larger than the menu card, and preceded him to his chambers. The judge said: 'I tell you, we made a solemn procession, but it never happened again.'

"We will miss him greatly, brothers! We shall miss the sound of his gentle voice and the elegance of his classical tongue. We shall miss his forceful, convincing, and yet almost poetical, oratory. We will feel the loss of his counsel, and of the pleasure that came of his magnetic, though quiet, presence."

"To know, to esteem, to love,—and then to part, makes up life's tale to many a feeling heart."—Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

PEACE ON EARTH, GOOD WILL TO MEN

EDWARD J. LYNCH OF SAN FRANCISCO, Grand President of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, under date of November 20 sent the following letter of Christmas greetings to the officers and members of all the Subordinate Parlors of the Order:

"On the eve of the approaching Christmastide, when the hearts of men are softened and their spirits thrilled in anticipation of the joys and gladness which accompany the holiday season, it is natural that we should respond more tenderly to that beautiful sentiment expressed in the immortal words sung out by the heralds on the morn that Christ was born:

"Peace on Earth—Good Will to Men."

"This sentiment, scorned by the powerful, but conveying hope and inspiration to the humble folk of the time, has become the most dominant force for the betterment of mankind; it has changed the course of history and builded up great free and just governments of men, where formerly tyrants ruled and injustice, greed and human slavery prevailed.

"It is the essence of our form of government and of the principles of our Order—handed down to us by our pioneer men and women who, of their own free will and by their own efforts, organized and put into successful operation this great and prosperous commonwealth—our beloved California!

"Christmas is the season which appeals most to all that is spiritual in our nature and prompts us to express our feelings in happy greetings, hospitality and brotherly love.

"During this sacred season we should aspire to fulfill the noblest ideals of good citizenship. We should make every effort to heal all the wounds of controversy and misunderstanding—of strife and intolerance—and work together in harmony, as true brothers, to the end that good will, generosity and true loyalty shall prevail, for the greater glory of our state and our nation.

"As Californians, living in a land of plenty, we must not forget that there may be some who, by reason of unfortunate circumstances, may not experience the joys of the coming holidays. Let us, therefore, see to it that the homeless ones and all those in need of assistance are remembered and are permitted to share with us some of the joy and happiness which prevail during this season of gifts and good cheer.

"May I, as your Grand President, thank you for your splendid co-operation in the work of our beloved Order, and extend to you my most cordial greetings and best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year."

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

CHRISTMAS DAY 1874 CAME ON A Thursday. The weather during the week was clear and cold in California and nothing atmospheric interfered with the merry time. Peace and plenty prevailed, and it was one of the best holiday seasons people of the state had yet enjoyed.

One cause, especially in San Francisco, was the development of the great Con. Virginia bonanza on the Comstock Lode and the boom in mining-stock prices. Vendors and investors were profiting. Investors, with their sudden and easily-acquired wealth, were liberal spenders and everyone catering to their wants, whether for luxuries or necessities, was benefitting thereby.

A new flock of millionaires and multi-millionaires began to rise above the financial horizon. Mackay and Fair, mining men, Flood, O'Brien and "Lucky" Baldwin, business men, loomed large in the public eye, and numerous others were transferred from humble pursuits to the capitalist and investor classes as prices of stocks advanced to unprecedented values.

Con. Virginia jumped from $200 to $800, California from $80 to $800, Ophir from $90 to $260 a share and their satellites went up in proportion. California street swarmed with rich and optimistic investors. Locations several miles from Con. Virginia sold on the stock board at bonanza values. The writer, in a telegraph office in Sacramento, copied the quotations during a board session for a heavy operator sitting by his side, and saw his holdings increase in value $20,000 in less than fifteen minutes!

Prices went near their top by Christmas Day, and San Francisco never experienced a wealthier and more optimistic and care-free spending holiday season.

Alvinza Hayward, the multi-millionaire mining man in San Francisco, closed out his holdings on the Comstock Lode, it was reported, for $1,600,000. He gave as a Christmas gift $20,000 to the orphan asylum and other charitable institutions.

The Pioneer Association of Sacramento had a reunion the evening of December 28. There were addresses, songs and recitations, followed by a social dance. James B. Cooper, a 77-year-old Pioneer of Amador County, danced the sailor's hornpipe and other jigs in a surprising manner.

Celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the arrival in San Francisco Bay of the steamer "Oregon," December 1 1849, twelve of the 1,200 passengers—all of the survivors in San Francisco December 1—sat down to a dinner.

Starr's flour mill, Vallejo, Solano County, was working to its full capacity and turning out 625 barrels of flour daily.

San Bernardino Crowded With Miners.

F. A. Howig of Santa Clara was making raisins by dipping bunches of grapes into a chemical solution. He intended to establish an extensive industry in that business in Los Angeles.

The Bald Mountain gravel mine in Sierra County cleaned up $40,000 from 8,000 cars of gravel.

There was an excitement created by rich ore discoveries in the Coso district of Inyo County. A rich strike of ore was made in the Winston silver mine on the San Gabriel River near Los Angeles.

The Duryea hydraulic mine, near Mokelumne Hill, Calaveras County, cleaned up $21,000 this month.

The railroad from Los Angeles City to Anaheim, Orange County, was completed December 29.

The directors of the Nevada County Narrow Gauge Railroad accepted December 4 the bid of W. F. Beatty to build and equip the road for $500,000 within one year, from Colfax, Placer County, to Nevada City, Nevada County.

A man named Nyland, representing a company of Eastern investors, leased an acreage on Brannan Island in the Sacramento River and was proceeding to cultivate cranberries.

Shipments of honey to the East from San Diego this season totaled 450,000 pounds.

A cloudburst occurred near the summit of Mount Tamalpais, Marin County. It scooped out a channel 200 feet wide and 10 to 50 feet deep clean to the bottom, where it piled redwood trees and boulders high in great profusion.

San Bernardino was crowded with transients going to and coming from the Holcombe Valley mines. Hotel guests were compelled to sit up until 2 a. m. awaiting the departure, by stages, of those who had rooms and thereby made beds vacant for them to occupy.

A meteor passed over Oakland the night of December 5 that was described as an unusual and beautiful sight. It exploded near the horizon, and variegated lights, with purple predominating, illuminated the sky.

Richard Ballis was fishing at Point San Pedro for sharks to supply the San Francisco market. December 5 he caught one sixteen feet long.

John Becker and Eben Wright of Nevada City, out deer hunting December 7, came upon two bucks fighting for supremacy with horns interlocked and unable to separate, while a doe was contentedly browsing a short distance away. They slaughtered both bucks and each was over 150 pounds in weight.

S. Dedman, in Plumas County, killed a buck that weighed 210 pounds.

Albert Piedro, a vaquero in San Luis Obispo County, lassoed a grizzly on Steele Brothers' rancho. It weighed 700 pounds after being killed and dressed.

John B. Bescre of Fresno County, bear hunting with a rifle, came upon three grizzlies and killed them with three shots.

Charles P. Duane, the handsomest man in San Francisco, commenced suit for $100,000 against A. B. McCreery, Samuel M. Wilson and others for injuries received by being shot in a lot squatting fracas in 1873.

Merced Citizens Aroused by Killing.

Lyman Burrill, a 75-year-old citizen of Santa Cruz, walked to Hollister, San Benito County, thirty-five miles away, bought a goat and returned afoot, using two days for the round trip and making a stamina reputation.

The residence of L. L. Robinson at Belmont, San Mateo County, burned December 10 with a $60,000 loss. This was the third time an incendiary had set it on fire in three years. It was one of the finest residences in California, and was evidently burned by some one down on the rich.

Dan Cole's sawmill, in Sierra County, burned December 27, causing a $15,000 loss.

The Brown Chapel, a school for boys at Chico, Butte County, burned and a 14-year-old boy was arrested for the arson. He had a grievance against a teacher that he was intent on squaring.

The Von Villa, a resort for German people near San Francisco, burned December 5 and $12,000 in schnapps and lager beer was lost.

Bremer Brothers' cigar store burned in Sacramento December 22 with a $15,000 loss.

At Merced, Edward Madden, editor of the "Tribune," and Robert J. Steele, editor of the "Argus," had for some time been abusing each other in the columns of their respective papers, using vituperative language and applying opprobrious terms toward each other. December 7 Harry Granice, a stepson of Steele's, stepped out of a store and as Madden was passing by shot him five times, killing him instantly. Madden was only 23 years old and a very popular young man.

An organized posse of citizens prepared to lynch Granice. He was taken to a ranch about a mile from town by the sheriff who, it was said, allowed him to escape on horseback. A dense fog prevailed and the posse failed to find Granice. In the meantime a committee of citizens gave Steele orders to leave Merced inside of twenty-four hours and then wrecked the "Argus" office. Granice subsequently gave himself up in an adjoining county and was held for trial.

The oldest member of the Sacramento Pioneer Association, John C. Hedenberg, died December 31, aged 83 years. He came from New Jersey in 1849.

Dr. John F. Morse died in San Francisco December 30. He arrived there on the steamer "Humboldt" in 1849 from Vermont and established the first hospital in Sacramento in that year. He was the first editor of the "Sacramento Union," in 1851.

Christmas Turkey Wrecked.

Dr. Frank Spaulding, a Pioneer of Colusa County who had held a number of county offices and was one of the most prominent citizens, died December 2, aged 50 years.

A masked highwayman met a drummer named S. B. Miller, driving a team between West Point and Mokelumne Hill in Calaveras County, December 26 and, after shooting at him twice with a rifle, brought him to a stop. He then robbed him of $260, his hat and buggy whip.

Near Boca, Nevada County, December 8 a Central Pacific passenger train hit the side of a freight train taking a siding. It knocked an emigrant car, filled with passengers, down an embankment, killing two passengers and fatally injuring Conductor Bennett.

Billy Pollard, well-known pioneer miner of Plumas County, was caved upon at Sawpit Flat December 14 and killed. He was covered by a cave once before, but was dug out and rescued. A prominent doctor of Sacramento was an enthusiastic duck hunter. He became so excited over the numerous flocks of ducks flying over his stand on Putah Creek sink that he dropped his ramrod in the tules in his haste to take a shot, and was unable to find it when he again wanted it. He tramped around in circles about an hour in the vicinity of where he believed he had dropped it and lost the opportunity of a score of splendid shots as he could not reload his gun without it. At last he gave up in despair and reaching into his hip pocket drew out a flask and proceeded to drown his disappointment in a "spiritual" way. After taking a big gurgle and replacing the flask in his hip pocket he looked down and there, close by his feet, was the missing ramrod. He advised all hunters to use his good luck brand thereafter.

A French woman in Oakland decided to have a turkey dinner Christmas day. Her servant girl was a late arrival from Ireland. Neither had ever cooked a turkey. Together they fixed a gobbler and put it in the oven to roast. It finally exploded, blew off the oven door, and was a wrecked bird. They had neglected to draw it and the gas caused the explosion.

A crowd of good fellows imbibed so much eggnog Christmas Day they gathered on Fourth street, Sacramento, and enjoyed themselves knocking off every "plug" hat from the head of its wearer that attempted to pass. At the close of the afternoon of sport the gutter was filled with dilapidated "stove pipe" hats. They paid the owners for the broken headpieces.

It is seldom the editor of a newspaper is robbed or cheated. An exception to the rule was the publisher of the "Panamint News." He complained that a party named Carr, associated with him, had collected in advance subscription and advertising bills from nearly all who would pay and, taking an $18 pair of boots, had decamped, leaving his board and washing bills unpaid.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

MAY PEACE RULE THE HEART

AND DIRECT THE FOOTSTEPS.
LTURAS (MODOC COUNTY)—MISS
 Catherine E. Gloster, Grand President of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, under date of December 1 directed the following letter of Christmas greetings to the officers and members of all the Subordinate Parlors of the Order:

"Oh, hallowed day when Christ was born,
 Bring sweetest peace to every one;
 From land of snow to land of sun
 Let love prevail on Christmas morn."

"Once more the sweet-toned bells peal out the self-same message with which they have glad-dened the hearts of mankind for over nineteen hundred years—the joyous message of Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men."

"There is a constant craving in the heart of man for peace. War and strife, long continued, ruin the life of a nation. Peace, long-lasting peace, makes the land blossom with plenty."

"The whole world is hopefully looking forward to a time when Peace will spread its wings over the great universe, and all peoples will enjoy its blessings."

MRS. MARY DARLING, PIONEER.
 Entertained by Sierraville Native Daughters.

"As its people are, so is the Nation. If its people have not in their hearts the fear and love of God, their lives are selfish, and Peace has no abode in a selfish heart. A nation peopled with such is ever subject to strife."

"It is my earnest wish, at this Christmas tide, that each member of the Native Daughters of the Golden West will establish in her heart a suitable nesting-place for the white-winged Dove of Peace, that it may abide with her throughout the years, leading her and her associates to better fraternal understandings, and influencing to better citizenship all those with whom she may come in contact."

"May the peace which surpasses all understanding, the peace announced by the angels when they brought the good tidings of the birth of the Savior, rule in your hearts and minds and direct you in the ways of fraternity and patriotism."

History Study Club Organized.

Daly City—El Carmelo 181 initiated a large class of candidates November 5, among the number being Miss Dolores, daughter of George Barron, curator of Golden Gate Park Museum, San Francisco. In the absence of the president, Recording Secretary Josephine T. Johnson presided. A delicious banquet was served, and during the evening Grand Trustee Lillian Beguhl spoke in praise of the Parlor's activities, Miss Alice Mathias recited an original poem by Curator Barron, entitled "Mission Dolores," dedicated to the Pioneer women of California, and Mrs. Annie
 C. Henley gave an interesting account of her recent trip. Among the visitors were D.D.G.P.
 Agnes Troy, Miss Lillian Troy and Mrs. C. Keller. A whist party and dance were given November 19; the Golden West orchestra furnished the music.

El Carmelo California History Club was organized November 12 at the home of Mrs. Ellis
 C. Johnson. The lives of the discoverers and adventurers connected with the state's early history were discussed, and will be studied. Some interesting relics were shown, and a program of music and dancing was presented. A delicious midnight supper was served. The following officers of the club were elected: Mrs. Josephine Johnson, president; Miss Alice Mathias, secretary; Mrs. Madeline Fellows, treasurer.

Big Crowd at Benefit.

Oakland—More than 4,000 attended the annual mask ball for the benefit of the homeless children given by the joint Alameda County Parlors of Native Daughters and Native Sons, October 23. When all ticket returns are in there will be an excess of $3,500, it is predicted.

Pioneers Guests.

Lincoln—At tables tastefully decorated with flowers and autumn leaves, Placer 138 entertained the following Pioneers at a chicken dinner
 October 25: Mrs. Mary B. Sanders, Mrs. Nannie
 Kennedy, James Landis, William Findley. Otis
 Allen was unable to be present, but his dinner was sent to him.

Under the direction of Mrs. Walter Jansen a musical program was presented, and Mrs. Bertha Landis, toastmistress, called on the following for remarks: the honor-guests, Mrs. Mary Pinney, Miss Alice Finney, Miss Carrie Parlin, Miss Florence Clark, Miss Viola Lasswell.

Children Entertained.

Elk Grove—The homeless children benefited to the extent of $225 through the highway ball given by Liberty 213 and Elk Grove 41 N.S.G.W.

The Parlors' Hallowe'en party for the children of Elk Grove, October 31, was a wonderful success. The guests enjoyed games and then were delighted with impersonations of Mother Goose rhymes by their elders. The lodge-room and the banquet-hall, where refreshments were served, were elaborately decorated. In active charge of the affair was the following committee: Mary Waterman, Hazel Stewart, Myrtle Martin, Bonnie Kimball, Florence Markofer, Birdie Mitchell.

Thirty-six Miles of Poppies Planted.

Grass Valley—Members of Manzanita 29 recently spent a delightful Sunday planting poppy seeds on roads leading into this city. The bulk of the work was done on the eighteen-mile Grass Valley-Auburn highway; seeds were planted on both sides of the roadway, a total distance of thirty-six miles. In an open space at one point along the road the figure 29, the Parlor's number, was laid out and planted to California's state flower. What a sight is promised the traveler, when the poppies bloom in the springtime.

Pioneer Entertained on Birthday.

Sierraville—Imogen 134 entertained November 1 at a birthday dinner in honor of Mrs. Mary Darling. A delicious chicken dinner was served, the feature of the "spread" being a beautiful cake graced by eighty-nine tiny candles. Most of those present had a few after-dinner words of congratulation and love to offer. Past Grand President Emma W. Humphrey of Reno, Nevada State, spoke of the privilege of honoring the lives of the few remaining Pioneers of California.

In 1856 Mrs. Darling first came to Downie-ville, Sierra County, where she married C. C.

Darling in 1859. In 1875 they made their home in Sierraville, where Mrs. Darling has resided since the death of her husband nineteen years ago. Those present were the Misses Elizabeth Peterson, Emma Perry, Sarah Johnson, Emma Nichols, Mary Liechty, Elizabeth Berry, Callie Banks, Ella Webber, Jennie Copren, Nonie Dearwater, Harriet Humphrey, Emma W. Humphrey, Misses Margaret Copren, Addie Webber, Oneta Webber, Thelma Banks, Myra Banks, Dorothy E. Otis.

Anniversaries Celebrated.

Mountain View El Monte 265 has become a leading spirit here, and is relied upon in all civic affairs. In the recent Prune and Apricot Exposition parade, the Parlor's float won second prize. A chest of linens was disposed of, netting a splendid sum. An arrangement has been entered into with the local paper, the "Register-Leader," through which the committee—Eldora McCarty, Clara M. King, Eileen Garliepp—expects to raise considerable money for the Parlor's welfare work.

November 15, the twenty-second anniversary of Mountain View 215 N.S.G.W. and the eleventh of El Monte, were celebrated with a turkey banquet. Among the speakers were Grand Trustee James A. Wilson and D.D.G.P. Stanley of the Native Sons and D.D.G.P. Eldora McCarty and Emaline McDonald of the Native Daughters. Beautiful were the decorations, and clever were the novelties. The committee in charge was: Harriette McPheters, Maybelle Hobbs, Celia Anzini, Isabelle White, Hilda Campbell. Under the supervision of Eldora McCarty, assisted by Margaret Malone, Lenora Snyder, Laura Mirkel, Marion Snell, Eleanor True, a vaudeville show was presented for the pleasure of the boys at the Palo Alto Base Hospital, November 25.

Brides Showered.

Oroville—November 1 a double shower was given in honor of Gold of Ophir's most recent brides, Vivian Sharkey-Scherienberg and Harriett Newman-James, at the home of Mrs. Stella Sharkey. Both received many beautiful and useful gifts. Contests and games were featured, and delicious refreshments were served. Alta Baldwin and Margaret Gilbert were in charge of the evening for the Parlor.

Gold of Ophir and Argonaut 8 N.S.G.W. joined forces in entering a float in the Armistice Day parade, November 11.

Grand President at Home Parlor.

Alturas—Grand President Catherine E. Gloster made an official visit to her home-Parlor, Alturas 159, November 6, and was graciously welcomed by President Edna Householder. Elaborate preparations were made by the officers and members to make the meeting both pleasurable and instructive. Besides the guest of honor, the Parlor entertained guests from Mount Lassen Parlor of Bieber and Annie K. Bidwell Parlor of Chico. In exemplifying the ritual, seven candidates were initiated. Under the supervision of the very efficient D.D.G.P. Irma Laird, the work was faultlessly executed.

The Grand President, in her address, commended the officers and members for their efficiency and expressed appreciation of the efforts made to do her honor. To the initiates she explained in detail the aims and objects of the Order, and recommended methods for attaining those aims. On behalf of the Parlor, D.D.G.P. Laird presented Grand President Gloster with a beautiful wrist watch, wrought in white gold and set with diamonds and sapphires. As a mark of appreciation, the Parlor presented bouquets of chrysanthemums to D.D.G.P. Laird and President Householder, the presentation being made by Recording Secretary Dorothy V. Gloster.

At the close of the Parlor, about seventy friends of the members assembled, and a social hour was given over to music, cards and dancing. One feature of the social entertainment was a Modoc Indian war dance, staged by some of the members and their friends. The concluding feature of the evening was a sumptuous banquet, served in a flower-bedecked banquet-hall.

Benefit Decided Success.

Hollister—The card party and grocery shower given for the benefit of the homeless children October 25 by Copa de Oro 105 and Fremont 44 N.S.G.W. was a decided success, socially and financially. Over $250 was realized. Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs was chairman of the benefit, and was assisted by an energetic committee.

The hall was prettily decorated in Hallowe'en colors, and refreshments were served. Preceding the party the baskets of groceries were attractively displayed in a show-window, decor-

In Memoriam

SARAH LAWRENCE.

To the Officers and Members of Forrest Parlor No. 86 N.O.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed sister, Sarah Lawrence, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, has called to her home our high and beloved sister, Sarah Lawrence, and whereas, the members of this Parlor, while bowing humbly to the will of our Heavenly Father, feel most deeply the loss of an esteemed sister, be it

Resolved, That in token of our sympathy for the bereaved family and our sense of the Order's loss, a copy of this memorial be sent to the family of our departed sister; that a copy be inserted upon the minutes of our Parlor, and that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
MARGUERITE DAVIS,
HANNA G. WESTON,
Committee.

Plymouth, November 5, 1924.

THOMAS P. SUTTON.

Whereas, In the passing of our beloved brother, Thomas P. Sutton, our Order has suffered the loss of a true and loyal member and his family a beloved husband and father; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Mount Tamalpais Parlor No. 64 N.S.G.W. stand in silence for one minute out of respect to our late brother, and be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be spread on the minutes of the meeting.

Respectfully submitted,
CHAS. H. LOCATTI,
W. MCK. CRONE,
WALTER E. GRADY,
Resolution Committee.
H. B. HOCK,
Recording Secretary.

San Rafael, November 10, 1924.

LENA WEISHEIMER.

The Angel of Death has again entered our sacred portals and taken from our midst our dearly beloved sister, Lena

Landscaping—

Older residents of California are familiar with the fact that Howard & Smith have created many of the most beautiful gardens in the State. With the vast development which has recently taken place in Southern California, however, it may be that some of the newer residents are not aware of the fact that Howard & Smith have a landscape department capable of rendering the very highest service in the treatment of their grounds. In the development of a property, confidence can only be placed in those having a thorough understanding of landscaping in its entirety. A full comprehension of this subject, from the minutest detail to the placing of the house itself, is essential if beauty and harmony are to be the ultimate result.

If you are contemplating the development of your grounds we will be pleased to have you confer with us.

Landmarks Being Restored.

Marysville—Marysville 162 and Marysville 6 N.S.G.W. have nearly completed repairs on the store and bank in the pioneer town of Timbuc-too. A fair sum was realized from the benefit dance at Smartsville, and it is hoped a sufficient sum to complete the restoration work may be realized from the benefit dance to be given at Browns Valley, December 13.

Grand Inside Sentinel Esther R. Sullivan has received some valuable relics from Mary Covilland, granddaughter and namesake of Mary Murphy-Covilland, a member of the Donner Party and the woman after whom Marysville was named. In the collection are a letter dated 1849, written by General Sutter at Hock Farm, Sutter County, to Charles Covilland; receipts from Stephen J. Field; "The Placer," published in San Francisco in 1854; "The Herald," published in Marysville in 1851.

Through the influence of the Native Daughters, more local pioneer history is to be taught in the schools of Yuba County. "Mary," a pretty doll from 162, is to be sold for the benefit of the homeless children.

Baby Is Growing.

Palo Alto—Palo Alto 229, the baby Parlor, is making a steady and healthy growth, having almost doubled in membership. The charter was closed in October with much pomp and glory. There was a big attendance of visitors, and eleven candidates were initiated, the work being beautifully exemplified, reflecting much credit on D.D.G.P. Eldora McCarty, who has been faithful to and untiring with her new charge.

November 4 the Parlor had its first card party, which was a complete success, reflecting much credit on President Rena Trimble and the following committee: Zita Waterman (chairman), Janet Thain, Dorothy Crippen, Genevieve Commerford, Margaret Curran. Other social affairs are being planned.

Public Reception.

San Juan Bautista—Miss Blanche J. Taix, a popular member of San Juan Bautista 179, was tendered a public reception October 18, prior to her departure on a visit to European countries which will extend through June. Following dancing refreshments were served at prettily-decorated tables.

As the guest of honor was seated she was surprised to find the centerpiece on her table a trim ship, resting amid billows of blue tissue paper, bearing the name "De Grasse," in representation of the liner on which she sailed November 8. The ship was cleverly designed and presented by Ed. P. Gleason.

Delightful Party.

Stockton—A large crowd enjoyed the hospitality of Joaquin 5 at a delightful party October 30. The decorations were elaborate, and beautiful prizes were awarded. The evening's success was due to the work of the following committee: President Manuelita Aldecoa, Mary Ricker, Belle Aldecoa, Anna Ruggles, Lottie Boyd, Virginia Hill, Bertha Fischbacker, Octavia Lang, Bertha George, Lillian Quereilo, Adella Campodonico, Elsie Krenz, Katherine Alvas, Virginia Starkey, Irene Teft, Lucy Marino, Edna Walleson, Olive Aldecoa, Camille Heineman, Josephine Pengilly, Amy Clegg.

Many Gifts for Bride.

Downieville—Naomi 36 gave a surprise shower November 12 to one of its popular members, Mrs. George Devon, a recent bride. Many gifts were presented, and refreshments were served.

Community Christmas Tree.

Byron—The grand ball of Donner 193 drew a good crowd. Fifteen tables were in operation at the November 5 card party, when $5 was cleared. The hope-chest, long in preparation, will be disposed of December 3.

December 22 the Parlor, assisted by Byron 170 N.S.G.W., will have a community Christmas tree, to which all, especially the children, are invited. Committees at work on the plans guarantee a good time.

Stork Visits.

Galt—The stork recently made welcome calls on members of Chabolla 171, leaving native daughters at the homes of Mrs. Gertrude Peter-son and Mrs. Alice Carpenter.

Nineteenth Annual Mask Ball.

Pittsburg—Stirling 146 and Diamond 246 N.S.G.W. gave a "hard times" dance October 22, the proceeds of which, $46, were given to the homeless children. The joint arrangements committee was made up of: Past Grand President Amy V. McAvoy, President Alpha M. Barnes, Hanna McVay, Margaret Abrams, of the Native Daughters, John Williamson, Elliott Clement, Adrian Clement of the Native Sons.

The nineteenth annual mask ball of Stirling, November 8, drew a record-breaking crowd. Many beautiful and original costumes were in evidence. The committee in charge was: Bertilda Wright (chairman), Rhoda Roelling, Olive Burris, Past Grand President Amy V. McAvoy, Margaret Delf, President Alpha M. Barnes, Mrs. G. B. Arentz.

N.D. PAST GRAND'S BROTHER DEAD.

Lodi (San Joaquin County)—Dr. James B. F. Millar of Dixon, Solano County, died October 24. He was a brother of Mrs. Mary E. Bell of Dixon, Past Grand President N.D.G.W.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY R. H. TAYLOR

HOW TO PREVENT TOMATO BLIGHT

WESTERN BLIGHT IS ONE OF THE most destructive diseases of the tomato plant in California. In some years it has surpassed in vastness of injury to the tomato crop its closest rivals, the root-knot nematode and mosaic disease. This injury consists either of rapid killing of the whole plant before it can set fruit, or of weakening it so that non-production follows in some plants and small production of unmarketable fruit in others. Taking the results of such injury as a whole throughout the commercial fields of the state, the percentage of loss to the grower is high enough to make the disease an important factor in the production of both canning and shipping tomatoes.

In the years 1918 to 1922 inclusive, the estimated total loss in the state due to Western blight ranged from 2 to 15 percent. The greatest loss during that period occurred in 1921, while in 1923 the disease appeared to have given the crop a slight respite. In 1921 the estimated loss in individual fields ranged from 2 to 100 percent. In the current year, 1924, observations in the field by State Department of Agriculture officials and from specimens received at the laboratory furnish ample evidence that the disease was again abundant.

The first distinct and visible symptoms appear when the tomato plant is ready to set fruit. In other words, the tomato plant is quite well advanced in its development before the disease can be observed. The leaves at that time turn yellow and roll upward at the margins. The lateral branches are rigid and twisted from an angle of 90 degrees or more with the main stem to which they are attached. Normally this angle is less than 60 degrees. With continuation of the leaf-rolling the whole plant takes on a defoliated aspect.

The root system is greatly distorted in the sense that the roots have not traveled downward, but in a position parallel to the soil surface. The tomato is normally a deep and prolific rooter. These natural propensities can be made inoperative by physical conditions of the soil. Such physical conditions consist of shallow soil resulting from the presence of plow-sole, compact, impenetrable sub-soil or hard-pan. When the roots come in contact with the surface of such hard soils, they are diverted in their path and confined to the upper, shallow layer of soil which has been tilled. On irrigation the plant responds readily to moisture and produces numerous new roots, but as this shallow surface soil dries out the evaporation from the leaves is much greater than the in-take by the roots. The result is the condition which we call Western blight. All of these symptoms described as yellowing, leaf-rolling, drooping of the branches and distortion of the roots, can be seen very readily on digging up a plant in the field.

It follows, naturally, that the prevention of this trouble is deep rooting. In order to be able to root deeply, that is six or eight inches at least, deep plowing is necessary. The fundamental idea underlying this is production of conditions which allow the roots to go down deep into the soil to obtain a more uniform and adequate supply of moisture.

COLOR OF EGGSHELL IN RE QUALITY.

Although the color of an eggshell is no indication of the chemical composition of its content, people in different cities and in different parts of the country have rather decided preferences for either white or brown eggs. The wise producer considers the likes and dislikes of his prospective customers, even though they may be based on a mistaken notion. A brown egg is just as nutritious as a white egg, and a white one is just as full of meat as a brown one. If a person's color idiosyncrasy is satisfied, however, he may get a little more good out of the egg he eats.

The color of an egg is largely, or almost entirely, dependent upon the breed of bird that laid it. In general the American breeds—Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and Wyandottes—lay brown eggs. As all these breeds have red ear lobes, it may be said that red lobes mean brown eggs. The brown egg is popular in New England and brings a premium on the Boston and Providence markets. Although the content of this egg is the same as that of the white one, there is a difference in the covering. The shells of brown eggs are harder and the skin just underneath the shell is tougher. In hatching, the chicks have a little harder work getting out than those that happen to develop in shells of lighter hue.

In New York the white egg brings a premium of 7c to 10c a dozen at some seasons, but it is probable that the New Yorker gets no more nourishment nor enjoyment out of his breakfast than the Bostonian, who pays a similar premium for the brown eggs. Owners of poultry farms are well aware of this preference in the metropolis, and as a result the commercial poultry farms in New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania keep fowls, mostly Leghorns, that produce white eggs. The white egg breeds, in addition to the Leghorns, are the Black Spanish, the Minorca and all the Mediterranean breeds. All of these have white ear lobes.

In Philadelphia the preference is largely for the white eggs, and this market draws largely from the same territory as New York for its highest grade eggs. Chicago gets farm eggs from all parts of the Middle West that are sorted and graded by those who pack them. There is no pronounced preference in that city. The Pacific Coast prefers white eggs, and all of the large poultry plants, for which California is famous, keep Leghorns.

The Asiatic fowls, meat breeds that are kept only in small numbers, have red lobes and lay good-sized brown eggs. The red-lobe-brown-egg and the white-lobe-white-egg rule held good until the United States Department of Agriculture developed a new breed. This, the Lamona, is large enough to satisfy the farmer, the backyard poultryman and the packer, and still is attractive to the egg producer. One of its most striking peculiarities is that it has a red ear lobe and lays a white egg. With so many big markets preferring the white egg, this breed, with the additional advantages of size, good quality of meat, yellow skin and legs, ought to be popular.

FEED SCREENINGS TO LIVESTOCK.

There are a dozen reasons why screenings should be separated on the farm and fed to the livestock. Screenings are an undesirable farm product, consisting principally of weed seeds, cracked and shrunken kernels of grain, chaff, broken stems and straws, dirt and other foreign material, and often constitute 10 to 20 percent of the grain as it comes from the thrasher. They should not, however, be regarded as a waste, but should be turned to valuable account by feeding them to livestock.

When screenings are sold with the grain they are classed as dockage, and the grain farmer actually gives them away, because his grain is docked according to the proportion of screenings it contains. This loss to the grain farmer mounts to huge figures when large sections are considered. In 1923, for example, nearly 12,000,000 bushels of screenings were produced, threshed and marketed as dockage in the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Montana. No estimate is available on amount of dockage for California grains but it is undoubtedly comparable with the figures given. The sum of $675,000 was paid by the farmers of those states for threshing their screenings or dockage, and $800,000 was paid to the railroads for hauling to the terminal markets. Millions of dollars' worth of good feed was thus given away. The grain farmer was the loser.

The average screenings are more nearly equal to oats in composition than any other common feed. Heavy screenings from which the chaffy material has been removed are nearly equal to corn, wheat or barley in the percentages of the various nutrients. More than 3,500,000 lambs could have been fed with the wheat screenings that were wasted in the four spring-wheat states in 1923 forming the entire grain ration. The resulting increase in weight of the lambs, at 12c per pound, would have brought $8,500,000 to the farmers. The spring-wheat farmers who cleaned their market wheat on the farm in 1923 gained over 5c per bushel as a result of the cleaning.

When a farmer who grows little or no grain wants to feed screenings, he must pay high prices for them in a ready-mixed feed, or must purchase them of the elevator or mill that has separated them. The grain farmer, on the other hand, can separate them at the thrasher or granary and feed them as a by-product of his farm. He pays no freight or middlemen's commission. By means of a cleaning machine, the screenings can be removed from wheat or rye at a cost of 2c or 3c per bushel.

THE MULE ON THE FARM.

The ability of the mule to endure hardship and perform sterling service under adverse conditions has established him as a real asset in American agriculture, and his importance and popularity as a work animal is attested by his rapidly-increasing use.

While the mule is essentially a draft animal, it is widely used for utility purposes. Mules vary in height from 12 hands to 17½ hands, and in weight from 600 pounds to 1,600 pounds. They are divided into five general market classes: draft, farm, sugar, cotton, mining. Each of these classes again is graded according to conformation, soundness, quality, condition, action, and classified as choice, good, medium, common, inferior.

The general form and appearance of the mule should resemble closely that of a horse, and in judging mules the same general points of perfection are to be looked for. The nearer the mule approaches the ideal desired in a draft horse the more valuable he is from a market standpoint. The form of the mule should be compact, with a deep body, broad chest, full flanks, short back, well-sprung ribs. The loins should be broad, short, thickly muscled; the croup long and level; the hips long, level, muscular; the thighs thick, long, well muscled; and the hind legs well set, with broad, clean-cut hocks and flat, dense bone. The mule should stand on good feet that are well shaped. While style and action may not be so important in a mule as they are in the lighter breeds of horses, these qualities add materially to its value. A smart, alert mule with a long, free stride at the walk and a snappy, balanced trot is highly desired.

KEEP STOCK GROWING CONTINUOUSLY.

One of the principal problems connected with the production of beef has been to determine the best and most economical method of wintering the cattle and the one that will enable them to make the best possible use of the pasture the following summer when the cheapest gains are made.

In substance, the results of many tests show that cattle that were fed so as to maintain their gains throughout the winter made more economical gains during the summer pasture feeding period, while those that made only slight gains or losses never caught up with the others.

HISTORY MAKING EVENT IS PROMISED BY ALDER GLEN.

FORT BRAGG—ALDER GLEN 200 WILL, it is promised by Deputy Grand President Neuman Cohn, December 6 initiate the largest class of candidates ever brought into a single Parlor in the Order's history. "The number will be better than 200," says Cohn who, in twelve days, secured 150 applications. The grand officers will exemplify the ritual, and so proud is Alder Glen that it has sent letters to all Subordinate Parlors requesting that they have representatives at the history-making event.

An elaborate banquet is being arranged for by a committee of the Parlor headed by Leonard Stone. He has been told that the sky is the limit, and every Native Son knows Stone! The following day, Sunday, December 7, the grand officers will dedicate the Noya school, to which the Parlor will present a set of flags—American and State (Bear).

Alder Glen and Fort Bragg 210 N.D.G.W. gave a "krazy" party for the benefit of the homeless children November 14, about $75 being netted. The hall was crowded with dancers, costumed in all sorts of outlandish and odd creations. The affair was a complete success in every particular.

BOARD GRAND OFFICERS MEETS.

San Francisco—The Board of Grand Officers met in Native Sons' Building November 1, the following being in attendance: Grand President Edward J. Lynch, who presided, Grand First Vice-president Fletcher A. Cutler, Grand Third Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees James A. Wilson, Charles L. Dodge, Richard M. Hamb, Seth Millington Jr., John S. Ramsay, John T. Newell, Alfred H. McKnew.

Charles L. McEnerney (James Lick 242) tendered his resignation as Grand Director, and the same was accepted.

A bill of $475 for repairs to the Pioneer monument at Donner Lake, in Nevada County, was ordered paid.

The Grand Secretary was ordered to exchange Proceedings with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

It was reported that new parlors are in prospect for Pomona, San Pedro and Glendale, in Los Angeles County, Santa Ana, in Orange County, and Taft, in Kern County.

A charter was granted to Vaquero Parlor No. 262, formally instituted at Los Angeles City, November 11.

Grand President Lynch reported the grand officers would participate in initiations at San Diego November 10, Los Angeles November 11, San Bernardino November 12, San Jose November 29, Fort Bragg December 6 and Santa Rosa December 13, and in school dedication ceremonies at Fort Bragg December 7.

An arrangement was made whereby members of the former Los Osos Parlor No. 61 (San Luis Obispo) may affiliate with San Miguel Parlor No. 150.

Grand Secretary Regan was directed to protest to the State Agricultural Society against the proposal to make September 9 (Admission Day) California Day at the State Fair.

Inspect Proposed University Site.

San Diego—Thirteen candidates were initiated into San Diego 108 November 10, the ritual being exemplified by the following: Grand President Edward J. Lynch, P.; Junior Past Grand President William J. Hayes, Jr. P.P.; Past Grand President William I. Traeger, 1V.P.; Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge, 2V.P.; Grand Third Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, 3V.P.; Grand Secretary John T. Regan, M.; Grand Trustee John T. Newell, O.S.; Julius W. Krause (Ramona 109), O. At the banquet which followed the ceremonies, Eugene Daney Jr. was the toastmaster, and addresses were made by Grand President Lynch and Past Grand President Traeger.

On their return trip from San Diego to Los Angeles, the grand officers, along with Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer and Secretary Dan E. Shaffer of San Diego Parlor, stopped at Fullerton, Orange County, where they were the luncheon guests of the Chamber of Commerce and inspected the proposed site for the Southern Branch, University of California.

Christmas Tree for Children.

Livermore—Las Positas 96 celebrated with a banquet November 20 the thirty-eighth anniversary of its institution. In charge of the event was the following committee: Chester M. Beck, M. Victor, Peter Perata, F. Florio, J. J. Kelly. The Parlor attended the Education Week exercises at the Livermore grammar-school, when Past Grand President William J. Hayes presented the Native Sons' cup to the winner in the California history essay contest.

December 23, Las Positas will entertain the children of the Livermore Valley at a Christmas tree party. Walter Block is in general charge of the arrangements, and chairmen of the many sub-committees include: H. W. Hupers, Chester Beck, Edward Brendlin, J. V. Sweeney, William Medau, J. P. Gardella, C. E. Bosworth, William Silva, Harry Johnson, H. Borgman, J. W. Beazell, Carl Clarke, Charles Turner, R. Ruetz.

Membership Going Up.

Sebastopol—Sebastopol 143, through the efforts of Deputy Grand President Neuman Cohn, added forty members to its rolls October 24. The ritual was exemplified by a splendid team from Mount Tamalpais 64, which was accompanied from San Rafael by a large delegation of that Parlor's members.

After the initiation there was a banquet, with W. S. Borba as toastmaster. Among the speakers were Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew, Deputy Grand President Cohn, Charles Locatti, Robert Curry, George Peterson, Captain T. V. Butts, L. Stanford Lewis, Walter Grady, John W. Murphy. December 13, at the Sonoma County initiation in Santa Rosa, Sebastopol will have another large class of candidates for initiation.

Annual Ball Elaborate Affair.

Sacramento—The annual Thanksgiving ball of Sacramento 3, held in the auditorium of Native Sons' Building November 21, was an elaborate affair and a complete success. The committee in charge was: Z. C. Pressy (chairman), A. S. Drennon, J. J. Longshore, E. C. Taylor, H. E. Williams.

The Parlor has already commenced to arrange for participating in the big Admission Day celebration in San Francisco next year, $500 having been put in the festival fund. A class of candidates were initiated October 23.

Grand Parlor Plans Discussed.

San Bernardino—Nine new members were added to the rolls of Arrowhead 119 November 12, when the following visitors exemplified the ritual: Grand President Edward J. Lynch, Junior Past Grand President William J. Hayes, Past Grand President William I. Traeger, Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge, Grand Third Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Secretary Regan, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Julius W. Krause (Ramona 109). An entertainment program was provided under the direction of Monte Weeks, and "Chef" John Andreson Jr. provided a "feed."

Jerome B. Kavanaugh presided over the talkfest, and among the speakers were Grand President Lynch, Grand Trustee Dodge, Past Grand President Hayes, Grand Third Vice-president Thompson, Past Grand President Traeger, A. A. Burcham, J. E. Rich, Emory Tyler, the latter three charter members of the Parlor. Plans for the Grand Parlor, which meets in San Bernardino in May as the guest of Arrowhead, were discussed, and it was promised that the entertainment will surpass any heretofore provided. Prior to the Parlor meeting the visitors were guests of Arrowhead at a supper.

Native Scouts Win Prize.

Arcata—November 13, Arcata 20 initiated two candidates and donated $20 to the fund being raised to purchase uniforms for the high-school band. The Native Son Troop of Boy Scouts won the prize for getting out the largest percentage of voters at the November election.

Native Sons of Humboldt County will be guests of Arcata December 4. Supper will be served, and among the matters that will be discussed will be the proposal to invite the 1926 Grand Parlor to meet in Humboldt County.

Glee Club Delights.

Crockett—Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb paid an official visit November 5 to Carquinez 205. He was accompanied by the glee club of his home-Parlor, Piedmont 120 (Oakland), which delighted the assemblage with several numbers, and representatives of other Alameda County Parlors.

A banquet was served at the close of the meeting, Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge, a member of Carquinez, presiding as toastmaster. The Parlor plans a dance for the benefit of the homeless children in the near-future.

Annual Industrial Show.

Hayward—The annual two-day industrial show of Eden 113 opened November 7 with a parade, led by the Parlor's drum-corps. Household utilities and radio outfits were featured, and attractive programs of entertainment were presented. There were many exhibitors. Profits derived from the sale of space will be used to purchase Christmas presents for the homeless children.

Grand Trustee Visits.

Lincoln—Grand Trustee John T. Newell paid an official visit November 3 to Silver Star 63,

Passing of the California Pioneer

(Confined to Brief Notices of the Demise of Those Men and Women Who Came to California Prior to 1860.)

SENATOR CORNELIUS COLE, NATIVE OF New York, 102; came across the plains to California in 1849, arriving at Sutter Fort (Sacramento), July 24 of that year; died at Los Angeles City, survived by seven children. Senator Cole worked in the mines and became a prominent figure in the political affairs of California; he served Sacramento County as district attorney, 1859-61, was elected to the National House of Representatives in 1863, and in 1866 was chosen to represent the state in the United States Senate; as a member of Congress, his efforts were devoted largely to the development of the West; he was also identified with the publication of newspapers in Sacramento, and was one of the group of men who organized, in the Capital City, the Central Pacific Railroad Company; in 1881 he became a resident of Los Angeles, purchasing a 500-acre tract of land in what is now the heart of the Hollywood district. Deceased was one of the very few surviving members of the Society of California Pioneers, San Francisco.

Mrs. Mary McDonald-Faires, 82; with her parents crossed the plains in 1849 and resided in Sonoma and Mendocino Counties; died at Ukiah.

John McWilliams Sr., native of Ohio, 93; came across the plains in 1849 and mined in Shasta County; died at Pasadena, Los Angeles County, survived by a wife and four children.

John Marion Null, native of Missouri, 92; came in 1849; died at Dunsmuir, Siskiyou County, survived by eight children.

Homer Wheeler Judson, native of Illinois, 77; came with his parents via the Horn in 1852 and after several years' residence in Petaluma, Sonoma County, settled in Los Angeles County; died at Glendale, survived by a wife and six children.

Thomas W. Sturgis, native of Massachusetts, 79; came in 1854; died at Sonora, Tuolumne County, survived by a wife and two sons.

Mrs. Ann Marshall, native of Missouri, 87; crossed the plains in 1856 and settled in Solano County; died at Suisun Valley, survived by a daughter.

Isaac Schoonmaker, native of New York, 94; crossed the plains in 1850 and settled in Amador County; died near Pine Grove, survived by six children. Amapola Parlor No. 80 N.D.G.W. (Sutter Creek) escorted the remains of deceased to their last resting-place.

William J. Hanna, 85; came in 1854 and settled in Eureka, Humboldt County, where he died. Deceased was sergeant-major of the First Battalion of California Mountaineers, which saw active service during the early-day Indian troubles.

William Jones, 88; came in 1854 and for many years farmed in Marin County; died at Petaluma, Sonoma County, survived by ten children.

Mrs. Margaret Kelly, native of Ireland; since 1857 a resident of Sacramento County; died at Fair Oaks, survived by three children.

John J. Ash, native of Michigan, 72; crossed

NEW CREATIONS AT THE

LOS ANGELES MOTOR SHOW.

At the Los Angeles Motor Show last month one of the new creations was a Moreland drop frame chassis provided with a new type of closed garbage body. By its means, garbage can be collected and transported in one-half the time now required for this work. On account of the low chassis the men can easily empty garbage cans into it when standing on the ground. The provision of keeping the garbage in a closed body is a sanitary measure, preventing the odor from permeating the streets through which the garbage truck travels. It is the last word in sanitary garbage moving, and will be appreciated by cities and communities which are looking for efficiency, cleanliness and hygiene.

Another Moreland exhibit which attracted considerable attention was a six-wheel bus in operation. It demonstrated the principle of the Moreland six-wheel construction and the reason for its superb riding comfort. It is predicted that six-wheel buses will soon supersede the ordinary four-wheelers for long-distance travel, for heavy duty buses and smaller coaches where special comfort is required. This bus represents the acme of luxury in finish, riding comfort, safety and service.

Important — Motor car dealers, owners and traffic officers have been advised by Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, that hereafter no transfers of registration of motor vehicles will be made or new licenses issued by the division except on the presentation of certificates of ownership, properly endorsed, as provided under section 45 of the California Motor Vehicle Act.

Look To Your Headlight—Every headlight device, not approved by the State Division of Motor Vehicles since September 1 1923, when the Breed motor vehicle act became effective, will be excluded from all state highways after December 31; 164 of these devices have been condemned by the division. After December 31 traffic officers will be given instructions to arrest any person driving with condemned equipment.

ARM AND HAND SIGNALS.

California motorists are scored for their carelessness in giving arm signals while driving and their lack of knowledge of the proper signals in a bulletin recently issued to traffic officers by Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, who blames this alleged carelessness for a large percentage of accidents at intersections and crossings.

The bulletin summarizes the requirements of section 130 of the Motor Vehicle Act, with reference to arm and hand signals, as follows:

To stop or slow down—Hand and arm downward on left side.

Pink Certificate Required—California motorists will be required to present the pink certificate of ownership in renewing their automobile licenses for 1925, instead of the white certificates of registration as has hitherto been the custom, according to an announcement of Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. The division will begin receiving applications for license renewals through the mails about December 15.

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"OUR PRESIDENTS."

By James Morgan; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.50.

"Our Presidents," we proudly call the thirty-two men who, during the nation's short life, have piloted the ship of state. Yet, how unworthy are we, who so casually accept their loyalty, to call them ours. The average American can scarcely give the roll-call of the thirty-two. But America is the land of opportunity, and the author has made it possible for all to know these patriots.

In the book, Morgan writes of them as men—men of the highest caliber, men in the full sense of the word. Each president's biography contains many intimate glimpses of his private life. They are not the offensively titled anecdotes which are so commonly current—the cherry-tree episode is, happily, missing. It seems unbelievably ideal that these sketches are not formal, full-dress poses; rather, they are simple, modest pictures of beloved friends.

An inspiration to the youth of America, a realization to the citizen, hats off, to "Our Presidents"!

"UNCENSORED RECOLLECTIONS."

Anonymous; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $4.50.

Picture a group of satirical bachelors gossiping of court, on a rainy afternoon, before a snapping wood fire. Thus may "Uncensored Recollections" be catalogued.

All the spicy scandals, the whispered intrigues and the shrouded mysteries are aired. The closet-skeletons are pitilessly dragged forth into the limelight of ridicule. Even the haughty royal bones rattle in the expose. Among the rare tid-bits enumerated are audacious tales of Queen Victoria, Empress Eugenie, Lord Randolph, the Rothschilds, the Vanderbilts and Disraeli.

Written in an informal conversational tone, the chapters amble on, going nowhere in particular, as an honest gossip should. The whimsical vein in which the book is written, enhanced by the clever wielding of a skilled pen, rescue it from being merely wickedly malicious. It is apparent that the author knows whereof he speaks, so for safety's sake may he remain "Anonymous."

"TINKERING WITH TOOLS."

By Henry H. Saylor; Little, Brown & Company, Publishers, Boston; Price, $2.00.

"To know the joy of edged tools, to be able, confidently, to set one's hand to a mechanical task and leave it well done, to experience the quiet triumph of a skilled craftsman,"—these are the reasons which Saylor gives for writing "Tinkering With Tools." It is an "attempt to bring back something of the self-reliant craftsmanship of early America."

As former editor of "The Architectural Review," "Country Life" and "House and Garden," Saylor is an authority on many and varied subjects, besides being a skilled craftsman himself. He is also an extremely interesting writer. The illustrations of the book are photographs of his own collection of tools.

Here are a few of the alluring topics "Tinkering With Tools" deals with: "Operations on Wood Carving," "Wood Joinery," "Exterior Painting," "Varnishing and Enamelling." The work has an appeal which few books offer—excellent instructive reading and information delightfully expounded.

"SEEING CANADA."

By John T. Faris; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $6.50.

It is not a fabrication nor yet a new invention which enables a man to see Canada from his own home. "Seeing Canada" through the trained eyes of John T. Faris offers many distinct advantages:

First, the entire trip is guaranteed to be dustless, rainless, grainless and tipless. Second, no time schedule need be followed; trains leave at any and at all times; travel at your leisure. Third, skipping from Cape Breton, on the Atlantic Coast, over rolling prairies and lofty mountains to Vancouver, on the Pacific, may be accomplished in a few minutes, providing you care to skip. Fourth, the entire voyage may be made for $6.50!

With the above recommendations, plus 150 illustrations and a beautifully-colored frontispiece, what investment could be more profitable for the money?

"THE STORY OF A GREAT SCHOOLMASTER."
By H. G. Wells; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $1.50.

Anyone can write a biography, but it takes a skilled penman to make one as keenly interesting as is "The Story of a Great Schoolmaster." The life story of F. W. Sanderson, schoolmaster of Oundle, England, is an inspiring one. It is the tale of a man who clung tenaciously to advanced ideals of living and teaching and who, untiringly, made most of them practicable. Undaunted by criticism, antagonism and misunderstanding, Sanderson strove to achieve his vision. That he did not, in his own mind, wholly achieve that vision was no fault of his endeavor. He had expanding ideals which grew with his development.

The author, as a personal friend of Sanderson, is able to give intimate sketches of this great man. He writes the biography with such a kindred sympathy, with an esteem so glowing, that the book is transformed into a memorable tribute to a great man.

"THE ENCHANTED HILL."
By Peter B. Kyne; Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

Up-to-date cowboy fiction, featuring a 1924 model hero, a high-powered duplex-dyed villain, a light, snappy, two-tone heroine, the whole finished off with a thick veneer of thrills—and a dull polish—is offered in "The Enchanted Hill." The tale centers around Lee Purdy, owner of a vast cattle ranch in New Mexico, a half-dozen aeroplanes, a machine-gun and a strong, resourceful will. His plucky fight against a gang of unscrupulous cowmen, and his subsequent surrender to Gail Ormsby, amateur "rancheress," form the theme of the story. Besides the many horrible murders and terrific thrills, there are a few good descriptive bits of native Western scenery.

While the flapper will deplore, the average boy will rejoice in the lack of love scenes and clinches. For good, clean fiction, an active plot and two eye-arresting illustrations by Dean Cornwell, "The Enchanted Hill" is recommended.

"LOW BRIDGE AND PUNK PUNGS."
By Sam Hellman; Little, Brown & Company, Publishers, Boston; Price, $1.25.

"Low bridge," shouts Sam Hellman, and then knocks us flat with "eight clubs, doubled." It took genius to filch the terror from bridge and crown it with a fool's cap. Sam did, and got away with the scalp, too. He even scores a hit with that austere gossip "Mah-Jongg"—Pa-Jongg was out.

There are but 112 pages to "Low Bridge and Punk Pungs," but each is a laugh, every sentence a grin punctuated with periods to chuckle in.

Read the history of "the greatest of American indoor sports," as it evolves from the mildly simple to the terrifyingly complex. Tony Sarg's illustrations point the lessons home. Three cheers to Sam Hellman, who makes a bridge safe for the amateurs and the clowns.

"POLITICS: THE CITIZEN'S BUSINESS."
By William Allen White; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

At last, someone has come to the relief of the weary voter. William Allen White, in "Politics: The Citizen's Business," administers a stimulating panacea to the overfed public, namely, a non-partisan insight into American politics. Nor is the dose dry; rather, one licks the spoon and asks for more.

In brief, journalistic style, the author relates of the recent national conventions. Graphic word-pictures describe the great political scenes staged. Given the setting, the plot thickens as the party-actors play their roles. The platforms, the nominating speeches, the debates and both national and international issues are absorbingly presented.

Voter, if you wish to get the point of view of an ordinary spectator, a star reporter, a keen critic and a witty humorist on politics and a national convention, read this versatile treatise.

THE MEXICAN YEAR BOOK

(DR. OWEN C. COY, Director

California State Historical Association.)

IN HIS "MEXICAN YEAR BOOK, 1922-24," Dr. Robert Gless Cleland of Occidental College, Los Angeles, has performed a distinct service for the reader of English in preparing a volume, in English, dealing with our neighbor to the south. This volume is the second of a series of the same title, the first being in the nature of a survey and carrying the story up to 1921.

Although the two volumes are published under the same general title, this new one is not merely the earlier book enlarged by additional pages; for, as the editor points out in his preface, the earlier volume devoted much space to the history, government, geography, educational system and problems of Mexico which were considered necessary as an informational background. Having considered these topics fully in that edition, more space is devoted in the present volume to statistical and other matters of a current nature, making this second number of the series more essentially a year book.

One of the first questions arising in the mind of the reader, is whether or not statistics regarding Mexico can be accepted as reliable. The editor frankly admits that on this point "absolute accuracy is an ideal to be striven for, but one never likely to be attained." He has, however, shown skill in the assembling of his statistics, and by checking one set of official figures against another and by the use of independent data has compiled a mass of very useful information.

Dr. Cleland has for a number of years directed his attention to Mexican affairs, and is an authority in his line. He has been able to draw upon the wealth of material in the collection of the Doheny Foundation; and he has used excellent judgment in associating with him as contributors to the present work men who, through scholarship or official position, have been able to add materially to the value of the publication. This volume should be welcomed by all who desire to know more of our nearest Latin American neighbor.

CALIFORNIA CITIES FORGING AHEAD IN POPULATION.

Estimates of 1924 population for cities having between 25,000 and 100,000 inhabitants, made public by the Federal Census Bureau November 20, show that California's population is steadily increasing.

In four years, since the 1920 census, the bureau reports, Long Beach's population has increased 27,513, now being placed at 83,106.

San Diego is credited with a gain of 21,762, its population now being given as 96,445.

Fresno's population increased 11,639, now numbering 56,725.

Pasadena made a gain of 9,556, its population figures going up to 55,110.

Population figures for other California cities listed in the report include: Sacramento, 71,105; Berkeley, 64,602; Stockton, 46,692; San Jose, 42,654; Alameda, 31,317.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CHRISTMAS

SINCE EVERYONE REALLY LIKES TO give Christmas gifts, the selection of them should prove the most interesting shopping of the year. The stores offer many suggestions which will add to pleasure in giving, simplify shopping, and aid in choosing just the right things, at prices one wishes to pay.

Linens, with cut-work, mosaic, filet or Normandy lace, are smart for gifts. Doilies of fine Normandy lace, for a breakfast or tea tray, are exquisitely delicate and make lovely gifts. These are oval or oblong, and in several patterns. A luncheon set of heavy Italian linen, in drawn work, is always in good taste. French hand-made linen filet scarfs with fringed ends come in bold handsome designs and are suitable for dining-room tables and consoles.

Such favored gifts as handkerchiefs and linens need only the fresh touch of this season's smartness to perfect their appeal as gifts, or for one's personal use. Those who receive guest towels will be happy to accept any of the hand-embroidered ones with lace inserts, linen ones with Venetian lace, or some of Italian linen with drawn-work or cut-work border.

Embroidery on linen is another Italian art and a table set with Italian linen and pottery is always beautiful. A centerpiece of fruit in an Italian pottery bowl is one of the most decorative arrangements that can be made for a table.

Much of the gaiety of Christmas depends on the tree—the realization of the brightest dream of childhood—a Christmas tree all shimmering in loveliness, trimmed in beauty that is tempting alike to the eye and to the palate, with a shining star away up at the top and small candy bells that all but tinkle. Glistening varicolored festoons, without which no "goody" Christmas tree would be complete, and spiced gum-drop festoons are by all odds the most colorful trimmings.

To use the assorted gumdrops, string them as you would beads, on a darning needle threaded with a piece of cord. Sugared almonds make delectable pendants to hang from tiny end branches, and if a comic mood is desired small candy figures or animals may be made from gumdrops. Nuts, shelled or unshelled, may be hung on the tree, covered or uncovered. One inspiration will follow another quickly from the moment you begin planning your tree, and even the simplest of trees makes a novel decoration for a holiday party.

Gifts from the scrap-bag are not hard to make, even for those who do not sew. Everyone has some beautiful pieces of material tucked away, each too small to make a large article and too large to throw away. With a little ingenuity and a tube of glue one can easily convert them into exquisite gifts.

Some short lengths of ribbon and a bit of glue transform a candy jar into a vase that might well have found its origin in France. Pretty-colored plisse ribbon, contrasted with deep shades of garnet velvet ribbon, is used in this way. Glue is applied directly to the ribbon, rather than on the glass itself. Book ends, work baskets and shades can be made at home. A ten-cent wire frame and some glue bring the art of making lamp shades into every home, and the product is as durable and often more deft than the purchased one.

In the realm of intimate gifts, there is none more charming than a negligee. The coat dress effect which has run the gamut of our wardrobes is found even in negligees. One is made of crepe-de-chine, trimmed with tiny frills of lace and applique flowers of ribbon. A two-toned negligee has almost the lines of an informal dinner frock, made of finely pleated georgette crepe over contrasting crepe-de-chine. Velvet and taffeta ribbons, in pastel tones, make a rosette finish at side. Great ingenuity is shown in the use of unusual color combinations.

There is a feeling of tremendous luxury in either giving or owning a quilted satin bathrobe, coat dress effect, trimmed with bands of marabou. The temptation to keep it for one's self will be almost irresistible. For winter mornings a corduroy negligee is the first consideration of the thoughtful giver. One may be made of soft shades, lined with matched silk or dotted mull with a shirred roll trimming in contrasting color. Its great charm lies in the fact that it is warm without being bulky.

A gift that is thoroughly satisfying to every-one concerned is a Spanish shawl. These can be had in a bewildering and delightful variety of colors.

The newest necklaces combine steel-colored pearls with white baroque finished ones, completed by a long pendant. Imitation jewelry is so cleverly wrought today that very smart women wear bracelets of mock pearls and sapphires. The three-strand necklace of pearls graduated in size, with clasp of colored stones, is very smart.

Pillows are never too many, so you are sure to please the home-loving friend by giving a taffeta or satin pillow.

A cedar-lined cigarette-box for an end table should be the smart contents of at least one Christmas package. Those covered with an interesting design of gold leaf pressed on leather are very attractive, and others are trimmed with fancy materials.

Correct luggage is the pride of every smart woman. A case with fitted dressing tray can always be listed among the successful gifts. The virtues of folding trays are almost too many to mention. They lift out and snap shut to form a small and neat-looking case to use separately. The woman who finds it necessary to travel much by railroad can fully understand all the advantages of the folding tray case.

For the man who travels often there is the bag of sturdy leather in the most practical shape for quick packing. Its size is just that of a freshly-laundered shirt. A fitted dressing case makes such a present complete.

We have long cherished the unnecessary delusion that a man must be a traveler before he may be given luxuries so necessary to his personal grooming. A cloth-and-hat-brush set is just as useful at home as abroad.

If you would really please a man, be sure to choose a gift in harmony with his tastes. Give him handkerchiefs and, if you would flatter him, have his signature or monogram in one corner. Gloves are always in order. Mocha and buck are most popular.

There is a noticeable fancy for stripes in men's ties, both regimental and variegated. If these do not please, one can always resort to the plain-color tie that is favored by distinguished men everywhere. It is fairly safe to guess that when a man wears silk hose, he will wear them clocked, and it might be suggested that the embroidered clocks be in contrasting colors.

Perfumes are always pleasing, and are charming gifts because they hold one of the secrets of charm, and sometimes a fragrance as gay as the spirit of carnival, created to emphasize a lovely personality.

The ribbon novelties are made into hair bandeaux, doll lamp shades, silk bags, boudoir lamps for bed, garters, pin trays, powder boxes, slippers, girdles, corsages for powder puffs and sachets.

New furs are just as much a part of Christmas, as are the mistletoe and holly. No Christmas is really so successful as that which includes the gift of furs. The luxurious silver fox is the season's smartest fur. In its less-expensive varieties, pointed fox and white fox dyed beige, platinum, blue or cocoa are, in every sense, the flattering gift. There is no feeling more gratifying than that of luxury, and it is induced by furs as by no other thing we possess.

For the children, there are the dolls which always please. The baby doll is sure to be the favorite in the doll family. It has qualities that fit it for nursery life and the violent affection of youth.

Jointed animals and clowns are made of solid wood and painted in bright colors. The glamor of the ring hangs about them. Just imagine these fierce animals and clowns set up under the branches of a Christmas tree. Of course, the festivities begin with the choosing of toys, and of course the furnishing of a dollhouse is a delight for the small girl and probably give more pleasure than any other toy.

Chairs, tables, beds, stoves, fireplaces and bath tubs double their charm for us in real life.

THE ORIGINAL SANTA.
 The original Santa Claus is believed to have been Saint Nicholas, a bishop in the year 300. He was famous for his kindness to children. It is said that one night, wishing to help a nobleman who was so poor that he had no money for his daughter's dowry, the good bishop looked in at the old man's window and saw him asleep by the fire.

He then climbed upon the roof and dropped a gold piece down the chimney, thinking it would fall upon the hearth. But it fell, instead, in one of the man's stockings, which his daughter had hung up to dry beside the fire.

This started the custom of hanging stockings over the fireplace and the legend of Santa coming down the chimney.

when we buy them in miniature. Working out a color scheme in a room twelve by twenty inches can be just as much fun as if measured by feet, and making dollhouse curtains, rugs and furnishings is an amusement that is limited only by one's own imagination.

Who could live without music, and flowers, and dogs, the three relaxations that never fail, even in dollhouse. Furniture can be painted; and all sorts of charming little accessories—lamps, candlesticks and flowers—can be arranged as they would be in a real house, and a personal touch given.

I believe in extravagance at Christmas-time, not of money, but of pleasure. So, the sooner one goes to bed on Christmas Eve the sooner Christmas morning arrives, to the serene enjoyment of one's possessions. All good wishes for a Merry Xmas and Happy New Year.

TURNING A LIABILITY INTO A GREAT CIVIC ASSET

(LESLIE S. HOAGLAND.)

PROBABLY FEW BUSINESS ENTERPRISES have shown greater development of recent years than those connected with the care of the remains of loved ones who have gone beyond.

The graveyard of our boyhood days was the place past which we ran whistling, as children, and which none of us, growing older, ever thought of visiting except when following a friend or relative to his last resting-place. In those days there was a minimum of care given to the walks, the shrubs and the strips of lawn between a forest of headstones, few of which had any individual beauty and none of which conformed to any well-conceived plan for even the orderly development of the whole, much less any attempt at artistic effect.

Located just half way between Los Angeles and Pasadena, at Glendale, is Forest Lawn Memorial Park. Seven years ago the property consisted of about fifty acres when it was purchased by the present organization. At that time a few acres out of the fifty were in use as an ordinary cemetery, the balance of the property being undeveloped. In 1917 this property was purchased by an organization comprising several of the most prominent and progressive men of Los Angeles and Pasadena, whose interest in the highest type of civic development has been shown

H. Flint, Erasmus Wilson, Dr. R. B. Von Klein-Smid, Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe. This company has added to the property, until it now comprises a total of two hundred and twenty acres, embracing hills and valley land.

A very active construction policy has been followed by this company upon lines embracing the finest features shown in the largest cemetery undertakings both in this country and abroad. Within the very short space of seven years Forest Lawn Memorial Park has become recognized not only as among the largest and most beautiful, but also among the most completely equipped with the most permanent of buildings, of any similar property in this country.

Transforming into a civic asset of very high community value, what is too often permitted to drag along as a civic liability, this company has consistently followed the policy it first announced to make its memorial park a real park of great natural charm for the public. To the beauty of particularly extensive landscape work with trees, shrubs, flowers and lawn, the company is steadily adding art treasures in marble and bronze, each one of which is chosen to typify the finest of human instincts and, being richly and appropriately set, is resulting in the creation of a great open-air museum of art. The result of this policy is seen in the records of the entrance gates to the park, which show the passage of widely varied type, in all except the original few acres of cemetery only grass-level markers are used to mark the graves of those who lie among the trees and flowers. But it is not only in its memorial park that the management has shown its spirit of progress and its policy of providing the most permanent, most artistic and the best of facilities for the care of the mortal remains of those who have run their course on this planet.

Patterned after the famous Campo Santo of Genoa, Italy, the first units of the great mausoleum-columbarium have been built into the rock of one of the hills in Forest Lawn Memorial Park. Designed in exquisite taste and of the most permanent type of construction, this great mausoleum is being reared terrace upon terrace up the side of this hill and has already reached nearly to the crest of the hill, upon which will now be built its final unit with a colonaded front. Each unit can be approached by the grand stairway from the lower level, and entrances also are arranged at the sides. To the top level of the final unit a sweeping driveway will circle the hill for an entrance at the rear. This entrance will open into the grand memorial court, rich in marble and statuary, and lighted through the finest of stained-glass windows and dome.

Forming, in reality, a giant monolith with its compartments and vaults hollowed out of solid concrete stone the Forest Lawn mausoleum is constructed to provide, with all its beauty of form and richness of material, a maximum of permanence. The ancient burial places of Biblical times, cut into solid rock, were not more permanent or more secure than is this. The entire building has double walls with an air space between. The inner wall of concrete and steel is tied everlastingly into the rock of the side hill which forms its foundation. The outer wall is of granite, and the interior throughout is lined with marble. The metal, where such is needed, is of bronze. Each unit or section of the mausoleum has its compartments and vaults formed out of solid concrete stone and the construction is such as to provide against all decaying moisture.

The corridors, with their private family vaults and crypts in their recesses, are lighted with some of the finest examples of stained-glass window work used in the entire West. To meet the future needs for stained-glass work in the extension of this great mausoleum, arrangements have been made by the management for the work to be done in an Italian studio, where generation after generation of the same family of artists have become recognized as among the leaders of this class of work for the great churches of Italy.

Close to the great mausoleum is the much-admired Little Church of the Flowers, exactly reproduced from the church of Stoke Pogis, England, in the churchyard of which Gray wrote his immortal "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard." The charm of the Little Church of the Flowers has been fully realized by the community which it serves, as is evidenced by the scores of weddings for which it has been used. Again instancing the policy of the management of Forest Lawn for the development of its property to the maximum benefit of the community, this church is constantly used for Sunday afternoon music recitals by the best-known of the Southland's artists. The popularity of many thousands of visitors monthly. The great majority of these people visit Forest Lawn not as a cemetery but as a public park whose beauty they find refreshing and restful and in whose statuary they find uplift and inspiration.

these recitals is seen in the fact that, regardless of the liberal seating capacity of the church, it is frequently found necessary to arrange for three or four separate sittings for each recital, in order that those who come to enjoy the music may have an opportunity to hear it.

A complete modern crematory stands as part of the equipment of this property and a handsome, newly-completed administration building, conforming in architecture with the Little Church of the Flowers, is set in near proximity to it, close to the entrance.

In addition to the art treasures which already embellish the grounds and the great mausoleum of this property, Hubert L. Eaton, chairman of the advisory board of Forest Lawn, recently went to Europe to arrange for the purchase of certain original pieces of statuary and also for the making of full-sized copies of other masterpieces, such as the "Moses" of Michael Angelo. This latter is now being made by leading sculptors in Italy out of marble hewn in the Carara quarries. The work is being supervised by Professor Armando Vene of the Ministry of Arts of Rome and is expected to arrive for appropriate placement during the coming spring. Another piece, which is now being completed in Italian studios, is a full-sized reproduction of Canova's famous "The Three Graces" which, when finished, will be shipped to Los Angeles and placed on a huge richly-carved marble sarcophagus at the head of the grand stairway leading from the third to the fourth unit of the mausoleum.

Several exceptional pieces of statuary, by American sculptors, already adorn the grounds at Forest Lawn or ornament the stairways and corridors of its mausoleum. Among these may be noted Edna Parson's "Duck Baby," originally secured for the San Francisco Exposition; Randolph Rodger's "Lost Pleiad"; Romanelli's "Bronze Baby," which was created by him from the model of his own child and now stands at the point of the heartlike babyland section of the cemetery; and the famous statue, "Mother Love."

Overlooking all of the park and property and serving as a landmark for the country round, is the "Tower of Legends," built on the highest hill of Forest Lawn. This tower encloses the great water tower of the property and, in accordance with the policy of the management, it has been made into an object of great artistic value. Based on Norse mythology, colossal reliefs depicting Progress, Religion and Genius have been deep-cut into it by Finn Froelich.

Unique among institutions of this kind, Forest Lawn Memorial Park is operated throughout by the same organization which, under one head, provides every known mortuary necessity of the highest type. Each unit of the institution contributes pro-rata to the perpetual care-fund, but through the centralization of management of cemetery for outdoor burial, mausoleum-columbarium for permanent indoor crypts and vaults, and of crematory, the highest type of service is guaranteed.

"THE THREE GRACES."

The perpetual care of cemetery and mausoleum is provided through the Forest Lawn Memorial Park Association, of which John W. Kemp is president. The fund for perpetual care in the hands of this association is built up through endowment and payments made from lot, crypt and vault sales. The scale of payments to this fund by the original owners and developers of the property is set on a most liberal basis, to generously provide against every need for care and protection for all time to come. The fund is administered under the laws of the State of California.

WHEN BODIE WAS "WILD"

"BODIE IN 1879," WAS THE SUBJECT of a talk by Grant H. Smith before the California Historical Society October 28. The speaker gave a racy account of the killings and excitements in California's highest and fastest city. Bodie was more than 8,200 feet above sealevel, and at one time contained 10,000 inhabitants, many of whom were gamblers, gun-fighters, stage-robbers and other enterprising personages. It is reported that only three old men live there now, although whole streets of houses stand, just as they did forty-five years ago.

Cook Brothers of San Francisco bought the Standard Mine for $67,500 and the first month's millrun netted them enough to pay for the mine, the mill and all expenses up to that date. The ore carried a great deal of silver with the gold, and was so rich that the raw metal clogged the stamps, making it necessary to shut down the machinery and shovel the bullion from under the stamps in the battery. Two mines, the Standard and the Bodie, yielded more than $21,000,000, and assessments in the entire district aggregated about the same amount.

Chairman Henry R. Wagner announced that the recent exhibit of pioneer literature, maps, pictures, etc., held at the Bohemian Club proved to be a great success and that another exhibit of Californiana will be given next year in honor of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the admission of California as a state.

BENEFIT FOR HOMELESS.

The San Francisco Native Sons' and Native Daughters' Committee on Homeless Children has been meeting weekly for some time formulating plans for the annual benefit prize masquerade ball, which will be held at Exposition Auditorium, December 6, and which promises to excel all previous benefits for the homeless children. Officers of the committee are: James A. Wilson, chairman; Bessie Peters, Helen Mann, May R. Barry, vice-chairmen; Mae L. Edwards, secretary; Walter P. Garfield, treasurer; John T. Regan, comptroller.

December 5 a monster auto parade will tour the principal streets to advertise the benefit; Grand Marshal Herbert de la Rosa will be in charge. As an added attraction for the benefit, Mrs. May R. Barry has arranged for a grand pageant, to be participated in exclusively by kiddies. There will also be a spirited contest for supremacy by the San Francisco Native Daughter drill-teams. Louis F. Erb will be the floor manager, and the merry-making will continue until 1 a. m.

ART MUSEUM DEDICATED.

The feature of the Armistice Day celebration in San Francisco was the formal opening and dedication of the California Palace of the Legion of Honor, a handsome $2,000,000 art museum presented the city by the late A. B. Spreckels and Mrs. Alma de Bretteville Spreckels in memory of the California men and women who gave their lives in the world-war.

STATE FLAG FOR SCHOOLS.

The rules of the San Francisco Board of Education have been so amended that, in future, the State (Bear) Flag will be presented each school, along with the American Flag.

BANK CLEARINGS—BUILDING PERMITS.

Figures reported by the California Development Association:

For the period from October 23 to November 20, both dates inclusive, San Francisco's bank clearings totaled $657,500,000 and those of Oakland $63,938,610.

Building permits for October: San Francisco, $6,116,113 (1924), $3,793,374 (1923). Oakland, $2,619,703 (1924), $2,759,208 (1923).

PRE-HISTORIC CALIFORNIA.

At the November 5 meeting of the San Francisco Native Sons' Luncheon Club, Supervisor Ralph McLeran of California Parlor No. 1 spoke on the finances of the club.

Past Grand President Daniel A. Ryan eulogized Past Grand President Maurice T. Dooling, lately deceased, and adjournment was taken in respect to his memory.

November 19, Supreme Court Justice John E. Richards of Observatory Parlor No. 177, San Jose, spoke on "Pre-Historic California." This proved one of the most interesting addresses delivered before the club.

EUROPEAN TRIP DESCRIBED.

Bay City Parlor No. 104 N.S.G.W. enjoyed a red-letter night October 22. In addition to the official visit of Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge, the feature was a reception in honor of Grand Organist Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, past president of the Parlor, celebrating his return from a trip to Europe, where he went with the American Bar Association.

The "old guard" had charge for the evening. Among those in attendance were Grand President Edward J. Lynch, Grand Trustees James A. Wilson and Alfred H. McKnew, Past Grand Presidents Dr. Charles W. Decker, Lewis F. Byington, Judge John F. Davis and William J. Hayes.

TELEPHONE INDUSTRY REPRESENTS IMMENSE INVESTMENTS

THE average American takes his telephone service as a matter of course, and is this not true of the benefits and conveniences which are constantly being added, through research and experiment, for his use and enjoyment? Communication may be said to take its place, in importance, after production and transportation. The transmission of intelligence from one individual to another has been a most necessary factor in life. Looking back through the ages, we see the runner, the signal fire, the courier, semaphore, the hollow logs and tom-toms of the jungle, the stagecoach, the mail, the telegraph, the telephone, and last, the radio.

Without doubt the telephone has been the agency of greatest and most valuable use. 57,000,000 calls per day in the United States testify to its importance in the social and business life of our country. In the great Bell System alone there are over 10,000,000 Bell owned telephones which connect with 5,000,000 others operated by independent companies and individuals. The United States, with 6% of the world's population, has 63% of its telephones, and the point of saturation is not in sight.

Invented but forty-nine years ago, at that time the telephone equipment of the world could have been carried in the arms of a child. Today, in the United States alone, the telephone industry represents an investment of two and one-half billion dollars. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the "parent company" of the Bell System, has now the largest number of stockholders of any corporation in the world—316,000 on June 10th, 1924. Over one-half of these are women. 225,000 hold 25 shares or less, 95,000 hold 5 shares or less. The average number of shares per stockholder is 26. The Bell System has over 320,000 employees—again leading in this respect. It is said that over one-half a million persons in the United States own the securities of the affiliated companies of the Bell System.

Telephone equipment is not simple. The little instrument of metal and rubber at your elbow is composed of 201 separate parts. The wires go out to distant switchboards of the most complicated and delicate construction. You hear the voice of your operator and many may have the idea that she, in some way, ties your wire with that of the person you wish to talk with and that finishes the mechanical transaction. It would be just as reasonable to say that the hands of one's watch give him the time of day. Behind the two connected telephones there are the "works", relatively as complicated as the "works" of the watch. All this apparatus is delicately adjusted and balanced and requires constant watchfulness to see that it fulfills the functions for which it is maintained.

Perhaps no industry has sought and secured, to such an extent, the benefits of applied science as the telephone organization. Dozens of types of transmitters and receivers have been developed in the last half century. Cables, switchboards, appliances, and operating methods have constantly been improved. Today in New York City there is maintained a research department. It occupies a ten-story building with thirteen acres of floor space. Here 3,000 young men and women of skilled and technical training are devoting their energies to the advance of the telephone art. A high official of the Bell System is authority for a recent statement to the effect that while it is not possible to "key" the value of the various improvements, in certain items where this valuation was possible, a saving of $500,000,000 has been shown in the last twenty years. In other words, the telephone installation of the country, without this research work, would have cost that much more.

The telephone service of the Pacific Coast is furnished by The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, a Bell subsidiary. It now operates over a million telephones in the states of Washington, Oregon, California and Nevada. The number of its employees is approaching the 30,000 mark. A fact worthy of consideration is the value of such an organization to the community in an economic sense as well as in the commodity it furnishes. Last year its labor payroll was $35,000,000, and as such payrolls are distributed and redistributed through the channels of trade to that extent it means the welfare and prosperity of all. Those payrolls fortify other payrolls and create employment for those outside of the telephone business.

The telephone brings us closer in every business and social activity. It saves time, money and effort. It has made us a nation of neighbors.

Grand Organist Dinkelspiel gave a resume of his travels through England, Wales, Scotland, France, Switzerland, Italy and Germany which was greatly enjoyed by his auditors, and there were several felicitating speeches. An interesting program was presented, too, and refreshments were served.

PAST PRESIDENTS HONORED.

Orinda Parlor No. 56 N.D.G.W. will give a bazar the evening of December 12 in Native Sons' Building. Dainty and useful articles will be offered for sale.

The Parlor has adopted a metal badge to be worn by past presidents attending the meetings. It is the idea of President Mae Joseph Shea, who felt that former presiding officers should be distinguished from other members. The initial decoration took place November 14, when the following past presidents were in attendance: Past Grand President Emma Gruber-Foley, Hannah Mack Peterson, Anna Gruber-Loser, Alma Reimers, Mary J. Ansbro, Mary Vogt, Blanche H. Foppiano, Madeline Carr King, Verena Britschgi Friede.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED.

James Lick Parlor No. 220 N.D.G.W. celebrated its third institution anniversary November 12. Jointly with Yerba Buena Parlor No. 84 N.S.G.W., a Hallowe'en social was held October 29.

Mrs. Rochmann Kennard and Mrs. Elvis Toplo Cooney, brides of the Parlor, were given a surprise household shower November 5. A bouncing baby boy has arrived at the home of Mrs. Ralpha Zgraggin, a member of the Parlor.

Good Return—Fruits and vegetables brought Lodi, San Joaquin County, growers $1,000,000 this year.

THE WORLD'S PLAYGROUND

Warren Eccles

(CHAIRMAN PUBLICITY COMMITTEE, LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

LONG BEACH HAS FEW EQUALS IN living conditions or recreational facilities. It is, indeed, a city beautiful, a city of homes, and the "Atlantic City of the Pacific" in recreation. It is the mecca of tourists—all roads lead to Long Beach. From this city one may travel by wonderful concrete highways to any part of the wonder state of these United States—California!

There is no city in the world offering the tourists what Long Beach does—climate rendered mild by the southern exposure (mountains being to the north) and by the warm Japanese ocean current flowing northward close to the coast, the city experiencing no severe storms, and the variation of temperature summer and winter is but partake of the salt water baths. One may be bathing in the morning, take lunch at a mountain resort at noon, be snow-balling in the afternoon and be back in Long Beach for dinner. Where else can one find such diversified climate?

Long Beach realizes that the tourists must be entertained at all times, and has provided amusement of every sort, so that both young and old may have enjoyment during their stay here. The city has set aside a certain portion of its central beach as an amusement zone, known all over the world as the "Pike." Nearly ten million dollars have been spent in this amusement zone in providing all that is good and clean in amusements. The Silver Spray Pier, one of the largest pleasure piers in the country, occupies over six acres of ten degrees—in summer 65 degrees and in winter 55 degrees. Added to the unexcelled climate, Long Beach has more than five miles of broad, sandy and gently sloping beach where bathing may be enjoyed every day in the year. Sea bathing is augmented by a $1,000,000 bathhouse, the largest indoor plunge on the Pacific, where from early in the morning until late evening thousands each day enjoy indoor swimming or decking on which may be found the largest racing coaster in the world, the largest and most costly dodg'em in America, a scenic mill chutes, over the falls, Apache trail, and many other high-class attractions. This pier leads the nation in point of financial gain during the past year.

About a mile from the beach will be found a finely equipped aviation field, with Earl Daugherty, one of America's leading aviators, in charge. Here one may enjoy all the pleasure of flying or the sport of stunting. In the vicinity of this field is located the Long Beach Circus Zoo, equipped at a cost exceeding $100,000 and containing every specie of wild animal from every part of the globe. The management gives three shows daily, depicting all circus acts, exhibiting some of the best-trained animals in captivity.

Long Beach recently secured Herbert L. Clarke, the greatest solo cornetist in America according to Philip Sousa, to be the director of the Long Beach Municipal band. This musical organization of thirty-five members, under the able leadership of Clarke, is conceded to be one of the very finest bands in America and is one of the latest and greatest assets the city has. The band plays two free public concerts daily to thousands of visitors. Clarke, in addition to being a virtuoso of the cornet, has had wide experience in directing bands. He began his musical career with Gilmore's band and remained with that organization until the death of the leader. When Sousa left the Marine band and organized one of his own, Clarke joined Sousa and remained under his leadership off and on for years. In 1893 Clarke played with Sousa at the opening of the Chicago World's Fair. The band went on tour and on one occasion came to Long Beach, which in those days was but a small town.

Not only has Clarke been associated with Sousa, but he also played in the Victor Herbert band and the Philharmonic orchestra of New York City. In 1901 he took charge of a band in Providence, R. I. Shortly after the war he left this work and went to Ontario, Canada, and built up a musical organization which came to be known as the Anglo-Canadian concert band. For the personnel of his band he took the employees of the Anglo-Canadian Leather Company and trained them. The band became known all through Canada and played every year at the Canadian Exposition. He resigned there to come to California and was going to start a professional band in Los Angeles, but Long Beach made different plans for him. Clarke has played in every civilized country on the globe and, in his opinion, the only place he ever saw that might be compared with the charm of Southern California was South Africa. He says that Southern California is the finest place of all, not only in climate and beauty, but the fact that it is easier to play in low altitudes and near the ocean appeals to him.

The tourists, knowing that California has much to give them in the way of scenic travel, etc., naturally wish to make their headquarters in a city accessible to all points of interest. There is no city in California better located for the tourist in this respect than Long Beach. One may motor in his own car or travel by Pullman-built motor coaches to any part of the Pacific Coast. Over these paved highways one may travel as much as three or four hundred miles a day without discomfort.

has been planned by the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, and with a hundred persons already enrolled and the possibility of Mayor Clark and members of the City Council becoming members of the party, plans for the island jaunt are rapidly shaping themselves into definite grooves that are expected to make the trip one of the most pleasant and profitable affairs that the Chamber of Commerce has yet undertaken. Herbert G. Middleditch is the chairman and J. Oliver Brison, Publicity Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, is secretary of the committee on arrangements. Middleditch lived for a number of years in Hawaii, and will probably personally conduct the excursion over the islands. Hotels are an outstanding feature in Long

THE MESSAGE OF THE BELLS

(LUELLA C. POOLE.)

Ring, ring, O bells of Christmas-tide,
Your joyful message far and wide;
Through all the land proclaim
This is the blessed day of days
When here, to walk earth's troubled ways,
The Lord our Savior came!

O not with pomp and splendor fine,
But 'mongst the lowly sheep and kine,
And cradled in the straw,
He came, and low the path He trod
Always—the greatest gift from God
An erring world e'er saw.

As in the dawning eastern skies
The Wise Men watched the Star arise
That heralded His birth,
Thus we await God's Kingdom come,
When man and all God's creatures dumb
Shall dwell upon this earth.

Fling out your message, O ye bells!
Your cadence silvery foretells
The gracious times to be
When sweet Compassion, angel fair,
O'er this our land and everywhere
Shall brood perpetually!

golf courses within its city limits, one located at the Virginia Country Club and the other the municipal links at Recreation Park. Both courses are open every day in the year, and the average attendance at each of the links is 250.

Santa Catalina Island, world famous "Magic Isle," is but twenty-two miles from Long Beach. Palatial steamers operate daily between the Los Angeles-Long Beach Harbor and the island. The Catalina trip is an ideal one- or two-day trip for the tourist, for the island holds many points of interest.

There are, in addition to forms of entertainment, other important items for the tourists to consider when selecting a city for their sojourn. Possibly the main one is the matter of schools, for the children must continue their education wherever they may be. The public-school system of Long Beach enjoys a national reputation. The valuation of school property is over $6,000,000, over 700 teachers are employed, and the attendance is between 20,000 and 25,000.

Long Beach today is a metropolitan city of 140,000 people, located twenty miles from Los Angeles, the metropolis of the West, with three great transcontinental railroads—Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Santa Fe. The wonderful Pacific Electric system, covering all parts of Southern California, has a terminal here. There are sixty churches, representing every faith and creed, a $750,000 Y. M. C. A. and a $500,000 Y. W. C. A. (under construction).

Long Beach holds out to those seeking a permanent home many wonderful opportunities, for it is a city of homes. More than that, there are over 300 industries located here, with an investment close to $50,000,000 and a monthly payroll of over a million dollars. Signal Hill, the wonder oil field, is located to the north of Long Beach and produces one-fourth of California's oil output. There are ten banks with fifteen branches in the city, having total resources of $265,000,000, $175,000,000 in clearings and $65,000,000 in deposits. Building permits for the first ten months of 1924 were over $18,500,000. Postal receipts for 1923 were $473,000 and during the first half of 1924 exceeded the same period of 1923 by over twelve percent, which gives a conservative estimate of the city's growth.

IN NEW QUARTERS.

Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. has changed its meeting-place to the new Moose Hall, 1320 Elm avenue, near Anaheim, where splendid quarters, with most modern equipment, have been secured. Meetings will be held the first and third Wednesdays of each month. A donation of $10 has been made to the homeless children fund. A goodly delegation, headed by President Harold Leedom, attended the county initiation at Los Angeles City November 11.

There was a fine attendance at the November 19 meeting, thanks to the efforts of Howard Norwood, chairman of the attendance committee. Among the visitors, and speakers, were D.D.G.P. John Holmes of Corona Parlor, President Edward E. Ayers and Sid. Neighbours of Vaquero Parlor, "Billy" Newell of Los Angeles Parlor and Gus Alvarez of Vaquero Parlor. Harold Oliver was welcomed home, after a several months' visit in Palomar Mountains, San Diego County. The Parlor looked favorably on the proposal of Dr. S. T. Luce that the annual Carnival of States be featured in Long Beach during September, to include Admission Day, instead of November.

The Parlor's growing membership has been divided into two teams, captained by William B. Sweizer and Gus Walker, who will conduct a membership campaign. A homeless children committee, consisting of Percy Hight, Edgar McFadyen and Dr. S. T. Luce, has been appointed. E. C. Crowell has been made chairman of the good of the order committee, with authority to name his assistants; he will prepare the "feeds" that follow the meetings.

N.D. PARLOR FOR SAN PEDRO PROMISED.

In the Carnival of States parade, November 20, Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. had a beautiful float, typical of California. In preparing the float, the Parlor had the assistance of the Native Sons.

The Parlor has changed its meeting-place to the new Moose Hall, 1320 Elm avenue, where meetings are held the second and fourth Wednesdays. D.D.G.P. Carrie Lenhouse, a member of the Parlor, is at work on the organization of a parlor in San Pedro. She plans to have it instituted in April, when Grand President Catherine E. Gloster of Alturas, Modoc County, will visit Long Beach.

Several members of the Parlor paid a visit to Los Angeles Parlor November 6, when Mrs. Kate McFadyen, on behalf of Long Beach's Thimble Club, presented a box of beautiful baby clothes to Mrs. Annie L. Adair, to be used in the homeless children work.

WANTS STATE'S FORESTS SAVED

THE ORDER OF NATIVE SONS OF THE Golden West is now affiliated with the American Reforestation Association, the Board of Grand Officers having adopted the recommendation of the Grand Parlor's Reforestation Committee, Harvey M. Toy chairman, to that effect and appropriated $50 for the yearly dues.

The Board also approved the following resolution, adopted by the Reforestation Committee at a recent conference:

"Resolved, That the Reforestation Committee of the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West, urges in the coming session of the California State Legislature the passage of laws as follows:

"1. The appropriation of a sum of money sufficient to complete in the next two years a survey of the resources of the state along scenic and recreational lines and to determine wherein conservation and reforestation effort is necessary and feasible, this information to be tabulated and presented in the form of a report to the following session of the California State Legislature as the basis of a comprehensive state park plan for California.

"2. Legislation widening the powers of the State Highway Commission in the matter of acquiring strips of land adjacent to rights-of-way along the state highway system and giving greater powers of condemnation to the commission to be utilized when necessary for the protection of the public interest in preserving scenic and recreational features along the highways of California."

FIRST STATE BALANCE SHEET COMPLETED BY CONTROLLER.

For the first time in the history of the State of California, State Controller Ray L. Riley has just recently completed the first balance sheet showing the resources and liabilities of the state.

It was taken from the new general fund control ledger, established at the close of the last session of the State Legislature, and the state controller is now in position to furnish, at short notice, reliable information.

The first balance sheet, as of approximately November 1, shows that the state will close with a surplus at the end of the fiscal years 1923-4 and 1924-5 of approximately $6,000,000. The assets are listed as $113,858,420.35 and the liabilities (including all 1923 Legislature appropriations) as $107,790,446.04.

None of the figures include the money impounded in the litigation over the rates of the King Tax Bill, which sum has reached a figure approximately $11,000,000, and which will revert to the general fund in case of a decision of the United States Supreme Court favorable to the State of California.

COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

An examination for assistant scientific aid (museum history) will be held throughout the country January 7. It is to fill vacancies in the Division of History, United States National Museum, Washington, D. C., at an entrance salary of $1,500 a year. Advancement in pay may be made without change in assignment up to $1,860 a year.

Competitors will be rated on practical questions, education, training and experience. Full information and application blanks may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., or the secretary of the board of United States civil-service examiners at the postoffice or customhouse in any city.

VAQUERO PARLOR NATIVE SONS INSTITUTED

ONE HUNDRED AND FIVE CANDIDATES affiliated with the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West at the initiation for the Los Angeles County Parlors, November 11—fifty-three for Vaquero No. 262, twenty-four for Los Angeles No. 45, twenty-two for Ramona No. 109, three for Corona No. 196 and three for Pasadena No. 259. All Parlors were well represented in the assemblage.

The gathering was under the auspices of Co-

At the conclusion of the initiatory ceremonies an extraordinary session of the Grand Parlor was convened, and Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. was formally instituted. D.D.G.P. Ronald H. Ross installed the officers, as follows: Sidney W. Neighbours, junior past president; Edward E. Ayers, president; Herbert Ford, first vice-president; Milton Wicks, second vice-president; G. Johnson, third vice-president; J. Botiller, marshal; David Jones, inside sentinel; John Foster, outside sentinel; Harry Gutsh, treasurer; George Hickson, financial secretary; J. Smith Jr., recording secretary; Manuel Micaroli, Arthur Mailhan, Joseph Rico, trustees. On behalf of Los Angeles Parlor, Eugene Biscalluz presented the Holy Bible to the new Parlor, and Joe Sproul, on Corona Parlor's behalf, presented an American Flag.

Grand President Lynch and President Ayers of Vaquero addressed the assemblage, the former saying that the institution of the Parlor and the initiation of a large class of candidates at the same time was a history-making event in the Order. In concluding his remarks, in which he referred to the organization of Vaquero Parlor and the selection of its name, Ayers said: "In this life of turmoil and strife the motives of human action are often misunderstood, and I quote from the immortal lines of Thomas Bracken:

"Not understood—we move along asunder;
Our paths grow wider as the seasons creep
Along the years; we marvel and we wonder
Why life is life; and then we fall asleep,
Not understood!"

"Not understood—we gather false impressions,
And hug them closer as the years go by,
'Till virtues often seem to us transgressions;
And thus men rise and fall, and live and die,
Not understood!"

"Not understood—poor souls with stunted vision
Oft measure giants by their narrow gauge;
The poisoned shafts of falsehood and derision
Are oft impelled 'gainst those who mould the age,
Not understood!"

"Not understood—the secret springs of action,
Which lie beneath the surface and the show,
Are disregarded; with self-satisfaction
We judge our neighbors, and they often go,
Not understood!"

"Oh, God! that men would see a little clearer,
Or judge less harshly where they cannot see;
Oh, God! that men would draw a little nearer
To one another: They'd be nearer Thee,
And understood!"

REMARKABLE POPULATION GAIN.

"In the last four years the City of Los Angeles alone has to its credit more than one-fifteenth of the gain in population credited to the entire United States in the same period," says November "Southern California Business," the official publication of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. "This is a broad statement and if the figures on which the statement is based had not been compiled by the Federal Census Bureau, they might be questioned.

"Still more interesting is the fact that Southern California alone during the past four years has scored nearly one-tenth of the total gain in population credited to the entire United States.

"The figures as given out by the Census Bureau show that the average annual gain in population for the past four years in the United States has been 1,778,750 or a total for the four years of 7,115,000.

"Now, the interesting feature of it is, that Los Angeles alone since the census report of 1920, which showed 576,673 inhabitants in the city, has grown in four years to at least 1,075,000, or a gain of 498,327. In almost doubling its population in four years Los Angeles, as the figures will show, has gained more than one-fifteenth of the entire increase in population in the United States."

RESPOND LIBERALLY.

The homeless children benefit ball at Native Sons' Hall November 18 under the auspices of the Native Sons' and Native Daughters' Homeless Children Committee, was a gratifying success, both socially and financially. The auditorium was prettily decorated with baskets of flowers, and pictures of several of the children who have found good homes through the activities of the committee were displayed.

The Homeless Children Committee has changed its meeting-night to the second Friday in each month, at Ramona Hall. Mary K. Corcoran has been elected secretary of the business meeting, but Annie L. Adair remains in active charge of the home-finding work. Irving Baxter is chairman and James B. Coffey treasurer of the committee, which is meeting with wonderful success.

Every Native Son and Native Daughter in Los Angeles will receive from the committee a letter soliciting a Christmas donation to the homeless children fund. The responses should be prompt and generous, for no funds for this commendable work will be derived through the Community Chest, and the financial needs are many.

TRIBUTES TO PIONEER.

At the November 11 meeting of the Historical Society of Southern California, Mrs. Matilda
Sager Delaney recounted "Pioneer Days With Dr. Whitman," and John J. Wilson spoke on "California Under the Old Regime."

Tributes were paid to Senator Cornelius Cole, deceased Pioneer of 1849, by Dr. Rockwell D.
Hunt, president of the society, and others.

PAST GRAND SURPRISED.

At the November 6 meeting of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. visitors were in attendance from Long Beach, Cambria, Santa Barbara and San Jose, and a class of nine candidates were initiated. In a pretty address, Grace Culbert Yarwood presented an enlarged picture of Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, a member of the Parlor, to hang in the meeting-place.
Miss Stoermer was completely surprised, but responded feelingly, and in the course of her remarks told of her recent Eastern trip. D.D.G.P.
Carrie Lenhouse, who was present on an official visit, complimented Los Angeles on its progress and attainments. It was voted to meet in future the first and third Fridays in the Catholic Women's Clubhouse, 924 Menlo street.

At the November 20 meeting Mrs. Alice Magill spoke on the "Women's Police Court," and on behalf of the Parlor was presented with flowers by Past Grand President Stoermer. Adjournment was taken to the house-warming party of Corona Parlor N.S.G.W. The dance at Jinnistian Grotto November 25 was heartily enjoyed by the large number in attendance.

Los Angeles will have a Christmas tree and dance December 12—a house-warming of its new quarters. An elaborate affair is promised by the committee in charge of the arrangements: Grace Norton, Lillian Estes, Marvel Thomas, Annie L.
Adair, H. Adele White, Grace Stoermer, Mary K.
Cochran, Bertha Marshall, Rita Dumaway, Dolores Malin, Doris I. Willis, Lucille Duncan, Jessie Sanders, Louise Robinson, Anna Roeder, Inez
O'Shea, Grace Yarwood, Ella Blue, Josephine
Jones, Sherie Garrison, Viola McKenzie, Kathryn Ronan, Lyla Neche, Carolyn Wetzel, Rose Gault.

CHRISTMAS PARTY, DECEMBER 18.

The fortieth anniversary of the institution of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. was observed November 13 with an Italian supper served at Native Sons' Hall under the supervision of Charles E. Lloyd and Harry Pendell. Addresses were made by Past Grand Presidents
William J. Hayes and William I. Traeger, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustee John T.

Newell, and several of the Parlor's old guard, among them Phil Alexander, Henry Brodek, Al Metz, George Perdue, Eugene Biscailuz. At the election of officers November 20, Ronald H. Ross was chosen president for the January-July term.

Los Angeles' December program includes the initiation of a class of candidates the 11th, the ceremonies to be followed by a "spread." The annual Christmas tree festivities will be held the 18th. There will be a Christmas tree, loaded with all sorts of gifts. This function will be an open one, the families of the members of the Parlor being particularly invited. The 25th being Christmas Day, there will be no meeting, and following meeting-night, January 1, being New Year Day there will be no session of the Parlor. The good of the order committee has several social functions lined up for the early months of 1925.

CHRISTMAS HIGH JINKS.

The attendants at the October dance of Ramona No. 109 N.S.G.W. were delighted with the appearance of Charles Schmalz and his California quartet, who favored with several selections. A "dandy" entertainment was provided by the good of the order committee November 13. Andy Vaughn and a friend, a Mr. Burns who entertained the boys overseas during the world-war, were roundly applauded for their readings. The Thanksgiving dance of November 28 was greatly enjoyed.

Officers of Ramona for the January-July term will be selected December 5. Two classes of candidates will be initiated during the month, on the 12th and 26th; refreshments will be served on both occasions. December 19 will be given over to the annual Christmas high-jinks, and an exceptionally pleasing program is promised by the entertainment committee. Ramona still continues the topnotch Parlor of the Order in membership, having on November 20 1,330 members, and the number will be considerably augmented, President Eastin says, before January 1.

GREAT RESULTS ANTICIPATED.

Corona Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. warmed its new quarters in the Catholic Women's Clubhouse with an enjoyable card party November 20 at which the womenfolks were special guests. During the evening a large delegation from Los Angeles Parlor of Native Daughters paid their respects. A series of feature nights is being planned by the Parlor.

December 11, Corona will initiate a large class of candidates. The other Parlors of the city will be asked to bring up any candidates they may have. Deputy Grand President Albert Mayrhofer, an important factor in the institution of Vaquero Parlor, is to devote some of his membership-increasing activities to Corona, and great results are anticipated.

BEAR FLAG UNFURLED.

Flag-raising ceremonies at the Rose Bowl featured the observance of Armistice Day in Pasadena. There was a parade of Native Sons, Elks and members of the American Legion. The Stars and Stripes was unfurled by the Legion, and Pasadena Parlor No. 259 N.S.G.W. hoisted the State (Bear) Flag. Grand President Edward J. Lynch of San Francisco delivered a short address, telling the history of the state emblem. In the evening a big delegation from the Parlor, headed by President George Cavell, attended the county initiation in Los Angeles.

Pasadena has two teams engaged in a friendly competition for new members, and considerable success is being met with. During December several of the candidates will be initiated. Charles Carmody heads a committee which will endeavor to organize among the Parlor membership bowling and baseball teams. Plans are being made by a committee, of which Will S. Laurie is chairman, for a dance during January.

HISTORIANS GATHER.

Members of the Pacific Coast Branch of the American Historical Association from seven Western states attended the twentieth annual meeting in Los Angeles, November 28 and 29. Dr. Robert G. Cleland, president of the branch association, presided.

The speakers included many well-known historians, and the discussions were participated in

NEW N.S. PARLOR ENTERTAINS.

Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W., instituted November 11, will meet Tuesdays in Native Sons' Hall, 134 West Seventeenth street. The Parlor's initial social function was a barbecue the 16th at "Vaquero Park," in Hollywood. The occasion was greatly enjoyed by the many in attendance. Among the speakers were Past Grand President William I. Traeger and Joseph A. Adair Sr.

At its meeting November 25, Vaquero initiated a class of ten candidates, the officers of Los Angeles Parlor exemplifying the ritual. Several applications are on file, and another class of candidates will be received in December. By May, when the Grand Parlor meets in San Bernardino, Vaquero will have, it is promised, a membership of at least 150. Grand Trustee John T. Newell and Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer were among the speakers of the evening.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Robert P. Rivera, affiliated with Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W., died October 22, at the age of 48. Among the surviving relatives is a brother, Adolph V. Rivera (Ramona N.S.).

Mrs. Katharine M. Breslin, wife of George M. Breslin (Corona N.S.), passed away October 29. She was a native of this city, aged 78.

Mrs. Isidore Talamantes de Machado, sister of F. J. Talamantes (Ramona N.S.), passed away October 26. She was an old-time resident of the Palms district.

Louis Didier, father of Louis H. Didier (Los Angeles N.S.), died November 12 at Puente, at the age of 58.

William P. Dorety, affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., died November 2, survived by a wife. He was a native of San Jose, aged 49.

PERSONAL MENTION.

A native son has arrived at the Pasadena home of Rudolph Alpi (Pasadena N.S.).

Chancellor K. Grady (Pacific N.S.) of San Francisco was a visitor last month.

Roy Jackson (Ramona N.S.) is home from a three months' tour of Eastern states.

Palmer A. Johnson (Ramona N.S.) has returned from a hunting trip to Mexico.

A native daughter has arrived at the Bakersfield home of Louis J. Bayer (Ramona N.S.).

A native daughter arrived November 9 at the home of Chester H. Leonard (Los Angeles N.S.).

Edgar A. Bayley (Ramona N.S.) recently enjoyed a four weeks' pleasure trip through Alaska.

Charles L. McEnerney (James Lick N.S.) and wife were among last month's visitors from San Francisco.

Martin L. Haines and Sidney Witkowski (both Los Angeles N.S.) were visitors to San Francisco last month.

Judge Clark Howard (Ramona N.S.) paid a visit last month to his old home-town, Placerville, El Dorado County.

C. E. Mead (Ramona N.S.) has moved his insurance office to the new Hellman Bank building, Seventh and Spring.

Dr. John A. Schwamm (Ramona N.S.) was among the many who witnessed the U.C.-U.S.C. football game at Berkeley last month.

THE REAL SANTA CLAUS

Hand-riding Kid cared for in life stood in the entrance. Santa Claus set down his pack, and they gazed at each other. In flannel dressing gown and slippers the child stood motionless, gazing with wonder-wide eyes, the while her hands pressed her breast as if she would still the wild pounding of her heart at this dream of childhood come true. Then Santa Claus held out his arms and smiled—and with a bound she was at his breast, her arms around his neck, her lips at his.

For several seconds Murray Boland forgot his lines, remembering only that tonight he was the patron saint of childhood. But the thought of possible interruption by Millie or the Hand-riding Kid's successor spurred him to action.

"Bless my frost-bitten old soul," he declared, as with a final squeeze he set her down, "if you aren't even a finer little girl than your daddy said you were! And I almost missed you. If you hadn't called to me, I suppose I'd have been in New York by this time, and after all the trouble your daddy—I mean your real daddy—took to get me to do it, I'm afraid I'd have an awfully hard job explaining things to him. But it's his own fault, Aileen. He gave me the wrong address." He stooped, burrowed in his pack, and brought up the cardboard box in which her sleeping doll reposed. "And there's the dolly he asked me to bring to you. Isn't she a beauty, Aileen? Why, that's the finest doll that's been turned out of my shops in twenty years."

She found her voice at last. "Santa Claus," she queried, "do you know my real daddy?"

"Do I know him?" Santa Claus found that question so funny he had to lean against the alcove wall and laugh. "Oh, my furs and whiskers!" he declared. "I should say I do know him. Yes, indeed, ever since he was a little boy—and let me tell you he was one of the best little boys I ever knew and the best friend I've got on this old earth. Why, when he came all the way up to my factory at the North Pole and asked me, as a special favor to him, to stop in and say 'hello' to you on my trip this year, I didn't have the heart to refuse him—although," he added, "it's strictly against the rules."

She gazed up at him, her little white teeth gleaming in the moonlight as they clamped over her lower lip. "Mamma says he's a bad daddy," she ventured. "He isn't a bad daddy, is he Santa Claus, darling?"

Again Santa Claus was overcome by his mirth. "Oh, my new cap and moleskin socks!" he declared. "This little girl is going to make me laugh myself to death with her foolish questions—that is, provided I don't get stuck in one of these narrow chimneys and smothered before I finish this trip. Your daddy a bad daddy! Oh, no, no, no! He isn't a bad daddy. He's just misunderstood, Aileen. Your mamma just doesn't know how good he is. Why, if he wasn't a good daddy do you suppose he would be a friend of mine? Oh, dearie me, what nonsense! However, I mustn't stand here all night talking, for if I do you're going to catch cold, and I'll have to disappoint a lot of little boys and girls who are waiting for me to come. Bless my soul, I'm not half through my deliveries yet, and here it is almost daylight—and it would never, never do for Santa Claus to be caught out in broad daylight."

"Oh, don't go; please don't go," she pleaded. "Oh, but I must. I'm dreadfully late this year. Kiss me goodby, now, and run along upstairs with your dolly."

As he held her in his arms he said: "You must never tell anybody but your nurse that you've seen Santa Claus and talked with him and kissed him. It's all very, very irregular, so you mustn't tell a soul. And whenever your mamma tells you your daddy is bad, just remember that everybody in this world is entitled to an opinion, but that Santa Claus told you your daddy is a very, very splendid gentleman. Don't you ever forget it, Aileen. He lives in a far country, but he loves his little girl and he told me to tell you he does."

"I love you, Santa Claus," she assured him. "This kiss is for you and this kiss is for my dolly."

He set her gently down in the dimly lighted hall, handed her the sleeping doll, backed out softly, closing the hall door after him, picked up his pack and waddled back to his waiting reindeer, while a wondering little child stood with her ear to the keyhole listening to the chorus of the sleighbells—a chorus that grew fainter and fainter as Santa Claus whirled on down the avenue on his way to bring merry Christmas to the expectant progeny of Larry Donovan.

"Well, Hand-rider, it certainly was a howling success," Murray Boland declared, as he and the Hand-riding Kid sat at breakfast in the former's apartment five hours later.

"You've been awful kind to me, sir," his guest mumbled soberly, and gazed suspiciously around the cozy apartment.

"Oh, nonsense! Have a cigar," and Boland passed one across to the derelict. The Hand-riding Kid's face twitched; again he gazed around the room; he wore about him the air of a sheep-killing dog. Presently he heaved a deep sigh and faced his host.

"Don't play with me, sir, for God's sake," he pleaded wearily. "I know now why you brought me up here to breakfast. Come clean, sir. What's the program?"

Murray Boland took out a pencil and a memorandum book and pretended to figure. "As near as I can figure it, Hand-rider," he announced presently, "the expenses of production were somewhere in the neighborhood of seven hundred and twenty dollars, which includes my salary of five hundred. The appraised value of the ring was a thousand, was it not? Well, I have already given you two hundred and here's the balance of eighty dollars due you. Hand-rider, did you ever hear of the Mossbrae Stock Farm, down in the Blue Grass country?"

"Yes, sir. I was there once as a kid, to try out some two-year-olds my boss was lookin' at."

"Well, I own it, Hand-rider, and you're going to take part of the money I've given you and buy some decent clothes; with the remainder you're to buy a ticket to Mossbrae and when you get there tell Dan Sherry I sent you, that he's to give you a job as trainer at three hundred a month and to not fire you without consulting me. I have a lot of fine yearlings and two-year-olds down at Mossbrae, Hand-rider, and I'll expect you to make race horses out of some of them. And after you've done that and I find you can still make the weight, I might go to the powers that be and get your license restored. At any rate, we can try, and you know, Hand-rider, it never hurts to try anything once, provided it's something on the level."

The Hand-riding Kid stared at Murray Boland with a wide, unbelieving stare. "Don't kid me, Mr. Boland," he quavered. "Don't spoil it all by ridin' me with spurs. After what I done to you I know you don't want me, an' while I'm dog enough to take your food because I'm hungry—or will be pretty soon—I ain't dog enough to take your money or your job under false pretenses. Mr. Boland, I'm a crook."

"I'm sorry you think so. I do not."

"But I—I've been here before, Mr. Boland."

"Yes, I know you were, Hand-rider?"

"But you never said a word when I handed you your ring!" the little man quavered plaintively. "I didn't know I was talkin' to the man I'd robbed an' askin' him to do me a favor. If you'd only said somethin'!"

"Why should I? It would have spoiled all the fun. Besides, Hand-rider, that was just one of your mistakes, and after today you're going to quit making mistakes like that. You can bring back the other stuff or tell me where you pawned it, and then I'll forget your mistake. In fact, I've forgotten it already, for this is Christmas morning, Hand-rider, and I have to thank you for a mighty merry Christmas. So I wish you'd take that trainer's job down at my stock farm. I really need you and, moreover, I trust you."

"No!" The Hand-riding Kid gasped incredulously. "Why, how can you?"

"Why, you see I'm Santa Claus and it pleases me to present you with a merry Christmas, Hand-rider. Experience has taught me that any man who loves a horse is not a brute, and any man who can love a child—well, he's worth a bet. At any rate, I'm going to play you across the board."

The Hand-riding Kid held up his hand. "Boss," he said, "lemme give you a tip. It's direct stable information, an' you can bet the bank roll on it—an' bet it straight. You've entered me in the futurity; play me to win, boss, an', by gee, I'll win pulled up. Listen, boss. Tonight when you was talkin' to the kid I was right below you, hidin' behind a bush in the garden, an' I heard what you said to her. You done somethin' for me last night, Mr. Boland. You knew I was a crook—an' you told my little girl I was a very splendid gentleman. You gave me a reputation—an' I'm goin' to live up to it. You—lied—for me—to my lit-tle girl—an' I'll—I'll!"

He broke down sobbing, for a chord in the heart of the Hand-riding Kid has been touched and was giving forth sweet music.

IRVING H. HELLMAN AIDS IN SOUTHLAND'S DEVELOPMENT

FEW MEN IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA have spent their time more usefully in the last fifteen years in the development of this section's commercial, industrial and financial opportunities and in the advancement of its civic and cultural interests than has Irving H. Hellman, vice-president of the Hellman Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, and a director in some twenty corporations, which are known for their stability and progressiveness.

IRVING H. HELLMAN, Vice-president Hellman Commercial Trust and Savings Bank. Mr. Hellman is a Native Son of Los Angeles, who, since his entry into his active career in 1909, has worked unceasingly in those fields which create wider opportunities for others and which mean a greater and more prosperous community life. Like his father before him, he is essentially a constructive force in Los Angeles and Southern California affairs, and is so recognized by thousands of persons who have had occasion to deal with him in his various banking, civic and cultural activities.

As a director of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and chairman of its Financial Committee, Mr. Hellman has been in the forefront with those men and women engaged in creating a firm foundation under the whole structure of Southern California's development. He has taken an active part in the development of the Los Angeles Harbor, fully appreciating its tremendous importance to the present and future of the entire Southwest.

Recently he was elected a member of the Executive Committee of the Los Angeles Clearing House Association, being the youngest financier to receive this important berth. He has given liberally of his time and great resources to various philanthropic and charitable enterprises, and few worthy causes that have had a public appeal have been without his valuable council and financial assistance.

One of Mr. Hellman's important civic interests, to which he has contributed both time and financial support, is the development of the city's bridle paths. Through the Bridle Path Association, of which he is President, this work is now proceeding rapidly, and the work of the Association is acknowledged to be a big factor both in city beautification and in the promotion of equestrian sports.

Coming from pioneer stock, Mr. Hellman has always sought to uphold the finest traditions of California. He is a graduate of the Los Angeles public schools, and obtained his supplementary education by taking an engineering course at the Armour Institute at Chicago. His banking training was obtained largely under the influence of his father, the late Herman W. Hellman, who was one of the outstanding men in the development of Southern California during his lifetime. The Hellman name, in fact, has been identified with California bank development for more than sixty years. Mr. Hellman is a Thirty-second degree Mason, a member of the Shrine, and holds memberships in the leading clubs and civic organizations. He is an ardent devotee of equestrian sports, and is a director of the Southern California Riding and Driving Club, under whose auspices the annual Los Angeles Horse Shows are given. He is married, has three children, two daughters and a son, and centers his family life at his home, Rosewall, Beverly Hills.

SUGGESTIONS FOR TRIMMING

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

Everybody wants a Christmas tree. It is not a desire that comes like an attack of mumps, but one that annually takes definite form about December 1, and persists until the Christmas tree is in place.

If a change is desired in the usual array of ornaments—gorgeous, to be sure, but whose ensemble causes weird color harmonies—why not try a one- or two-color effect? A red and green tree is brilliant, and because it is a bit different is one which will likely please. The most attractive trimming for such a tree is made from red immortelles (dried life-everlasting flowers dyed red). "Stem" these into bunches, and attach a bunch to the terminal end of each branch of the tree. The effect is truly "Christmasy," and most attractive. The same effect may be had by the use of small red balls, but instead of stringing them, place each ball by itself.

For an entirely different effect, select a tapering tree of spruce or pine. After it is in position wrap the base with white cotton. Then take small pieces of cotton and tie all over the branches, and along the inner portion of the larger branches; close to the main stem of the tree, place irregular pieces of the cotton. Thus you will have, when finished, a realistic snow-laden tree, very cold and silvery—but not to be lighted by candles, for there is danger of the cotton taking fire.

CALIFORNIA'S FIRST SENATE

THREE-QUARTERS OF A CENTURY back—December 15 1849, to be exact,—the first Senate of the State of California convened, in San Jose, Santa Clara County. At the election at which the first State Senators were chosen, but 14,231 votes were cast throughout California. Contrast the number with the registration of 1,822,357 for the November 4 1924 election and the vote of over 1,245,561 cast thereat!

The First Senate was made of twenty representatives, including the lieutenant-governor. The Senate of the Forty-sixth Legislature, to convene at Sacramento early in January next year, will be made up of forty-one representatives, including the lieutenant-governor. Here is a list of the members of the First Senate, together with their places of birth, their occupations, and the districts represented:

John McDougald, Ohio, merchant, lieutenant-governor and president of the senate.

Nathaniel Bennett, New York, lawyer, San Francisco.

David C. Broderick, Washington, D. C., merchant, San Francisco.

John Bidwell, New York, farmer, Sacramento. William R. Bassham, Tennessee, merchant, San Jose.

E. Kirby Chamberlin, Connecticut, physician and surgeon, San Diego and Los Angeles.

Elisha O. Crosby, New York, lawyer, Sacramento.

David F. Douglass, Tennessee, wagoner, San Joaquin and Calaveras.

Pablo de la Guerra, California, rancher, Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo.

William D. Fair, Virginia, lawyer, San Joaquin.

Thomas J. Green, North Carolina, farmer, Sacramento.

Alexander W. Hope, Virginia, mountaineer, Los Angeles and San Diego.

Elcan Heydenfeldt, Louisiana, lawyer, San Francisco.

Benjamin S. Lippincott, New York, merchant, San Joaquin.

G. B. Post, New Jersey, merchant, San Francisco.

Henry E. Robinson, Connecticut, merchant, Sacramento.

Nelson Taylor, Connecticut, merchant, San Joaquin.

Mariano G. Vallejo, California, rancher, Sonoma.

Thomas L. Vermeule, New Jersey, lawyer, San Joaquin.

THE HOUSE OF VALUES

CHRISTMAS IS COMING

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

Christmas is coming, so better prepare,—
You see, I can tell by the feel of the air.
On the hillside the holly is growing so red,
The spruce and the pine have their branches out-spread.
The shops are ablaze with trinkets and toys,
Just the things that will please the girls and the boys.
The carols come echoing to us like a chime,
Bringing songs to the heart of a glad Christmas time.
The children are smiling while tripping along,
And the smile is caught up and passed on by the throng.
Yes, Christmas is coming, and Santa Claus, too,
With his pack of surprises for me and for you.
Oh! the spirit of gladness is felt everywhere,—
There's a feeling of Christmas abroad in the air.

ONE OF CALIFORNIA'S OLDEST NATIVE SONS IS DEAD.

Santa Barbara City—Nicholas A. Covarrubias, born here in 1839, died November 24 at Burlingame, San Mateo County, survived by four children. He was four times sheriff of Santa Barbara County, and was appointed by President Grover Cleveland United States Marshal for Southern California. He was a noted horseman and a picturesque character.

Covarrubias' mother, Marie Carville, was also a native of Santa Barbara City, being born here in 1815, and his father at one time owned Catalina Island, which was granted him by a Spanish governor of California and which he later sold to James Lick for a small sum.

Water Bonds—San Diego City has voted $4,500,000 bonds to develop a further water supply via a huge dam.

In Memoriam

ARTHUR ELTON HAMILTON.

Arthur Elton Hamilton was born at El Monte, California, January 2 1888, and has lived in Pasadena, California, since August 1888. He was graduated from Stanford University in 1911. Finished his law course at University of Southern California. Was initiated a member of Erskine M. Ross Chapter I Chi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity on March 8 1912. Practiced law in Los Angeles.

He entered the army as First Lieutenant, May 19 1917. Was honorably discharged from the service at the Presidio of San Francisco, March 6 1919. Record of service: Presidio of San Francisco, May 19 1917 to August 15 1917; Camp Lewis, August 27 1917 to September 2 1917; Camp Doniphan, September 5 1917 to April 15 1918; foreign service, May 2 1918 to February 13 1919; Camp Merritt, en train, Presidio, San Francisco, February 13 1919 to March 6 1919. Military record: Battles, engagements, skirmishes, Argonne and Meuse offensives, St. Mihiel (support) and Vosges. Medals awarded: Wound chevrons authorized, one; war chevrons authorized, one gold; approved for victory medal with Meuse-Argonne; St. Mihiel defensive sector July 3 1919, silver victory button issued this date. Passed away at 6:40 p. m. Monday October 13 1924, aged 36 years, 9 months, 11 days.

Arthur Elton Hamilton joined Ramona Parlor No. 109 Native Sons of the Golden West on January 2 1914 and served the Parlor as its Worthy President in the year 1920. He exemplified the principles of our Order—Friendship, Loyalty and Charity.

As a lawyer, he possessed a keen mind and was endowed with a high sense of justice. He possessed lofty ideals of the important duties which, as a lawyer, he owed to his profession. These ideals he exemplified in his daily professional life, both by act and precept.

As a friend, he was a most charming companion. The kindly gentleness of all his actions have forever impressed upon the hearts of all those who knew him the consciousness that the world has been made better by his noble life. He was honorable, courteous and kindly; a true and steadfast friend.

As a soldier, he was ever ready to serve his country and he took part in the last war with distinguished courage and gallantry. He participated in some of the most important battles and engagements and was wounded while in action. He returned from the war broken in health, and his end was hastened by disease which he contracted as a result of his service on the fields of battle. It can be truly said of him that, "he died for his country."

We mourn the loss of our brother. Peace be to his ashes, and honor to his memory. And now, as a tribute to his memory, your committee presents the following resolution:

Whereas, In the death of Arthur Elton Hamilton, the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West has lost an honored member and associate, and Ramona Parlor, in the deepest personal sense, a true friend and brother; be it

Resolved, That as an evidence of our esteem and in perpetuation of his memory this memorial be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor, that a copy be presented to the members of his family, and that a copy be given to The Grizzly Bear for publication.

"There are today over 275,000 Japanese in the United States, about 125,000 in Hawaii, over 100,000 in California, and the balance in other states of the union. Most of this population has developed within the past twenty years, and it is increasing now by birth at the rate of 12,000 per year. In the State of California, during the year 1923, one out of every eleven births was Japanese.

"No other English-speaking country has permitted the Japanese, a virile race with other standards of living and constituting therefore an economic and racial menace, to obtain such a foothold within its borders. Australia, New Zealand and the countries of South Africa excluded Japanese from the first. Canada failed to exclude, afterwards restricted, then two years ago further restricted, and now, fully alive to the menace, seeks to exclude."

SUCCESSFUL N.S. ASPIRANTSAT NOVEMBER ELECTION.

At the general election November 4, 479,905 votes, approximately 73 percent of the registration, were cast in Los Angeles County. The following Native Sons were successful aspirants for office:

Jesse William Curtis (Arrowhead 110 San Bernardino), justice District Court Appeal, Division One.

Asa Keyes (Ramona 109 Los Angeles), district attorney.

John M. York (Corona 196 Los Angeles), John L. Fleming (Ramona 109 Los Angeles), Lewis H. Valentine (Ramona 109 Los Angeles), J. Walter Hanby (Ramona 109 N.S.G.W.), Walter S. Gates (Ramona 109 Los Angeles), judges of the Superior Court.

Harry A. Chamberlin (Ramona 109 N.S.G.W.), state senate.

Henry E. Carter (Ramona 109 Los Angeles), Mark A. Pierce (Ramona 109 Los Angeles), state assembly.

NEIGHBORS AT RECEPTION.

Bieber (Lassen County)—November 6 several members of Mount Lassen Parlor No. 215 N.D.G.W., headed by President Anny Mitchell, journeyed to Alturas, Modoc County, to attend the reception given by Alturas Parlor No. 159 in honor of Catherine E. Gloster, Grand President of the Order.

Seven candidates were initiated, and then whist was played until a delicious banquet, enjoyed by all, was served. Dancing followed, and all departed wishing success to the Grand President and the neighbor-Parlor, Alturas.

BOY SCOUTS GUESTS.

Martinez (Contra Costa County)—The Martinez Troop of Boy Scouts of America were guests November 17 of Mount Diablo Parlor No. 101 N.S.G.W., which provided a fine entertainment.

Addresses were made by Grand Trustee James A. Wilson, Assistant Scoutmaster Harry Johnson and others. Refreshments were served. Members of Las Juntas Parlor No. 221 N.D.G.W. of Martinez were also guests of Mount Diablo.

FORTUNATE, INDEED.

Did you ever stop to take an extra breath of this delightful air in California, and feel that it is sure "God's own country?"

We seem to be so busy in our daily routine of work that we fail to realize how fortunate we working people are. There is no climatic condition that will prevent a child from attending school; no weather, no matter what kind of work a man does, that will really hinder him from completing his task if his contract demands it.

We should appreciate this fact, and fully realize how fortunate we folks are who have to toil, that we toil in California.—Daily City Record.

"The great principles of right and wrong are legible to every reader; to pursue them requires not the aid of many counselors. The whole art of government consists in the art of being honest. Only aim to do your duty and mankind will give you credit where you fail."—Thomas Jefferson.

CHRISTMAS TREE ORIGIN

(M. B. PRATT, State Forester.)

THE ANCESTOR OF THE CHRISTMAS tree of today was probably the palm tree of Egypt. Three thousand years before the birth of Christ, the Egyptians held a celebration in the month which we now know as December, in honor of the sun. Palm trees were used in these festivities, since they put out a leaf each month and the tree with its twelve leaves was looked upon as the symbol of the completed year.

Three thousand years later the Romans used a tree in the celebration of the Saturnalia, a December festival, but it was no longer a palm tree, but a conifer, tall and covered with decorations. Roman legions carried this symbolism over the Alps into Gaul, and in about 15 B. C.

ished for a time, together with all other forms of Christmas celebrations, by that Puritan body. This decree was received with rioting in many places, and when the power of the Round Heads waned, the custom was officially restored. Early Puritans in this country were opposed to Christmas festivities and it was not until the writings of Dickens in England and of Irving in America revived the old-time spirit of Christmas that the Christmas tree again became the widespread emblem of that holiday season.

The tinsel decorations which we use on Christmas trees had their origin in pagan times when the sun was worshiped as the giver of light and life. The ancient Teutons decorated the fir tree with glittering material, for they thought of the represents the star that guided the Wise Men to the lowly stable at Bethlehem. The tiny forms of domestic animals and fowls when used as Christmas tree decorations remind us of the lowly birth of the Savior. The green, red and white candles are emblematical of everlasting life, cheerfulness and purity, and symbolize Christ as the light of the world. Tradition tells us that a lighted candle set in the window on Christmas Eve will guide the Babe of Bethlehem to your home, and He will bring you happiness. The brilliant tinsel decorations may be taken as a sign to His people: "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee."

Californians use Christmas red berry during the holiday season as a substitute for the time-honored English holly which has long been taken by Christian symbolists as a mystic foreshadowing of the Passion at the celebration of the Nativity, and the name of this tree, which refers mainly to its pointed leaves, may have suggested something holy. Mistletoe was used by the Kelts as symbolic of the unbroken life of Mother Nature. Its use by Christians was forbidden by the ancient canons of the church because of its close association with the heathen practices of the Druids. The ceremonial use of this plant by early European nations probably gave rise to the Christmas custom of kissing under the mistletoe.

To millions of people the Christmas tree has become the symbol of joy, and without it Christmas would be almost unthinkable. At the same time, many people are concerned as to the effect of the cutting of five million or more Christmas trees every year on our future timber supply. There is no doubt but that many thousands of trees are needlessly wasted every holiday season under present practices, but if good forestry were practiced in their selection, there is no reason why there should be any apprehension regarding a continuance of their use.

From a forestry standpoint it is a mistake to combine Christmas tree production with timber growing. The growing of Christmas trees for the market should be an industry in itself. Good Christmas trees are rarely found in dense forests under crowded conditions. The best trees come from the more open places, and their removal leaves many gaps that are detrimental to the future stand of timber, a full crop of which can only come from fully-stocked land.

At present, most of the trees are either obtained free or are purchased at a small cost from owners of woodlands, but unfortunately many trees are taken without leave and in a destructive manner. In some cases, large trees are felled and the tops cut out. If the Christmas tree vandal could be eliminated and the owner of the land receive proper compensation for Christmas trees and Christmas greens, much of the present feeling against their use would be avoided. Many farmers and timber holders in the Sierra region could profitably grow Christmas trees for the market and keep their lands perpetually productive for this purpose. In this way, the Christmas tree business could be conducted in a legitimate way as far as California trees are concerned, instead of in the present irregular and destructive fashion.

What is needed are stringent laws to prevent vandalism and to assure the protection of the rights of property owners. California has such a law for the Christmas berry and should have one for the Christmas tree. Maryland has a law which makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine or imprisonment, to remove, cut, break, injure or destroy any tree, shrub, vine, flower, moss or turf from the premises of another, without the written consent of the owner, or except under the personal direction of the owner. This law has had a most beneficial effect in reducing Christmas vandalism, and has helped to protect the roadsides from being stripped of trees and foliage for Christmas decorations.

The present tendency of some towns and cities to decorate their electroliners with trees during the Christmas season is to be deplored. Thousands of young trees which might otherwise be the timber producers on which our children will depend for their lumber, are needlessly sacrificed in this way in spite of the fact that the country at large is apprehensive over its future timber supply. Let us confine the use of Christmas trees to our families and institutions, and not make the streets of our cities a forest of slaughtered trees, shortly to go into the dump heap.

"Knowledge is proud that he has learned so much; wisdom is humble that he knows no more."—William Cowper.

the tree was used in Yuletide celebrations of the Germans in connection with the visits of Knecht Rupprecht, the Teutonic Saint Nicholas.

Four or five centuries later, the English church adopted December 25 as the date for the celebration of Christmas, and took over the tree of the German Yuletide, along with the heathen decorations of the Roman Saturnalia, and the holly and mistletoe of the ancient Druids, as symbolic of the birth of the Christ Child.

The Christmas tree later was frowned upon by the Round Head Parliament and was banished for a time, together with all other forms of Christmas celebrations, by that Puritan body. This decree was received with rioting in many places, and when the power of the Round Heads waned, the custom was officially restored. Early Puritans in this country were opposed to Christmas festivities and it was not until the writings of Dickens in England and of Irving in America revived the old-time spirit of Christmas that the Christmas tree again became the widespread emblem of that holiday season.

Christianity adopted the old pagan customs of Christmas tree decoration but their symbolism was changed to tell the story of the nativity of the Christ Child. The star at the top of the tree

NINETEEN HUNDRED TWENTY-FOUR has departed, and all but the good that it brought should be forgotten. True, many things occurred during the year which temporarily retarded California's advancement, and there was a corresponding lull in all fields of activity. On the other hand, the now-departed year was accompanied by much good, and its entire record, when finally compiled, will not be nearly so black and discouraging as many would have it painted. Often are we reminded that the darkest cloud has a silver lining.

The outlook for 1925 is most propitious! The state was blessed, the closing months of 1924, with copious storms, which assure abundant crops. The cultivators of the soil are happy, and all others should be, for from the soil most of our blessings emanate. Early in this new year, too, several immense development projects will be put under way, and there should be few unemployed.

California is a wonderful state, but it has not yet commenced to grow. Here, there is room for millions of additional White people, and the opportunities for investment are unlimited. Industrially, California is a mere infant, but in time manufacturers will come to appreciate the value of the vast quantities of raw materials here to be found, and then the state will assume a record place as a manufacturing state, just as it is now a top-notch in agriculture and mining.

Look to the future, for it holds much of promise! The possibilities are abundant. Eliminate sectionalism and pessimism, labor harmoniously for the state's advancement, and Prosperity will reflect its happy and contented smile over ALL California throughout 1925 and the years to come.

Another hole through which the white- and the yellow-Japs have been evading the California Alien Land Law was plugged, so far as the courts are concerned, when the State Supreme Court, December 8, rendered decisions validating that provision which legislates against "cropping contracts." Opinions in the four cases at bar were written by Justice Seawell, and were concurred in by Chief Justice Myers and Justices Lennon, Shenk, Waste, Richards and Lawlor. Attorney-General U. S. Webb represented the people of California in all the cases, and it was largely due to his presentation of the facts that the findings were favorable. Congratulations, Attorney-General Webb, for your zeal and efficiency in these cases!

"The question presented by the issues," said the court, "are not ordinary cases involving property rights as between individuals merely, but they are questions which affect our relations as a nation with a foreign country. . . . Ineligible aliens are not deprived of any of the treaty rights by reserving the agricultural land of the nation for the use, occupancy, benefit and enjoyment of its citizens or those eligible to become citizens, nor are they denied the rights to engage in ordinary employment or means of earning a livelihood. The ordinary employment and occupation for which a livelihood may be earned remain open to the ineligible alien." Taking a "rap" at the law's evaders, the court continued: "The many and insistent efforts of the land owners and ineligible croppers to frame a contract that will accomplish the obvious purpose of the contracting parties, have thus far been futile and must continue to be so under the Constitution and the Alien Land Act."

So, all the holes that were bored by the "peaceful invasion" yellow-Jap army, with the aid of the white-Japs, now having been plugged by the courts, the boring-pests will no doubt endeavor to create another leak in the Alien Land Law, so that more time may be gained and more land may be acquired.

In the meantime, why not reverse the procedure, and, by enforcing the law, put the Japs, of both complexions, on the defensive? The Alien Land Law has been wilfully violated in numerous instances, and the violators should be compelled to pay the law's penalty. The Japs are in possession of numerous parcels of land, acquired in defiance of the law, which should be escheated to the state.

Patience has ceased to be a virtue, in the Jap-invasion menace, and "compromising" has resulted in no beneficial results to California. In stance, if possible, a single piece of land, to which Japs claim title although acquired in violation of the Alien Land Law, which has been escheated to the state, or any effort put forth by the authorities to have it escheated, as provided for by the law. Their whole course has been to "compromise" and to "wait for court decisions," and the will of the people, who approved the law that the Japs may be lawfully forced out, has been ignored.

Until such time as the Japs indicate, by renouncing title to every foot of unlawfully acquired land, that they will respect and abide by the law, they should be shown no consideration whatever. Until they voluntarily relinquish the land or are ousted from it by the authorities, the menace will continue to grow, day by day in every way, more menacing.

If those who are continually prating about "lasting friendship" with Japan would correctly interpret the handwriting on the wall, they would realize the futility of such a hope until such time as the Japs surrender the land. Japan can best demonstrate its professed "friendship for the United States" by ordering its nationals off the land they are now in unlawful possession of. Every day the Alien Land Law is not made effective, adds fuel to the fire of suspicion and distrust, and eventually there will be a flare of arms for possession of California. The authorities of California, if they will, can pour considerable oil on the troubled waters by doing some effective plugging with the Alien Land Law, and not devoting all their time and ability to defending the law in the courts.

Addressing the southern section of the California Teachers' Association at Los Angeles last month, Will C. Wood, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, said, referring to the textbooks in use in the schools of California:

"Our elementary courses in reading no longer contain well-written biographies of great Americans like Washington and Franklin. They omit those splendid selections of prose and poetry dealing with American life.

"Instead, we find that our children, until they reach the sixth grade, spend most of their time

WELCOME

(JOHN KENDRICK BANGS.)

Good morning, Mr. Glad New Year!
We're very glad you've come,
And truly hope that now you're here
You'll make yourself at home.

We think our Earth's a pretty place,
Our climate, too, is fair,
And nowhere else in all of space
You'll find more bracing air.

It gives us pleasure to extend
A welcome glorious,
To make you glad you've come to spend
A little time with us.

"And again, when we survey the high-school courses in literature, we find that most of them give scant recognition to American literature, nine-tenths of the time being given to the study of English authors."

It is time for the people of California to cease putting up their good money to further the spread of anti-American propaganda through the public-schools. The schools should be supplied exclusively with all-American text-books. Those who object to such a course may send their children elsewhere for education and "inspiration." California must be maintained as a White American commonwealth.

For the year 1874 the cost of running the California State Government was $3,963,965. For 1925, it is estimated the cost will reach $54,175,144.

The bonded indebtedness of the state, fifty years ago, was $3,482,655. Now, it has grown to $91,439,500.

The taxpayer may well ponder over these figures.

One of the first things the California Legislature, which meets at Sacramento January 5, should do, is to approve the proposed child-labor amendment to the Federal Constitution.

The people of this state are in sympathy with such legislation, and the legislators should carry out the wishes of the people, irrespective of personal opinions.

Rev. E. H. Jones of Los Angeles, credited with being for thirty-five years a missionary in Japan, in an illustrated lecture at Sacramento last month said the Federal Exclusion Act and the California Alien Land Law are "contrivances of the devil to prevent missionary work in Japan. The legislation has squelched missionary work, and I hope you will pray to overrule it."

Which, in a nutshell, accounts for the strenuous efforts being made by the Protestant Church Federation to have Congress repeal or modify the recent legislation excluding Japs and all other aliens indelible to citizenship because it "has squelched missionary work in Japan."

The best revenue-producing field of the churches is that of foreign missions. Let the Protestant churches have their way, and the national anthem of the United States will be "Safe in the Arms of Japan." If the American missionaries were kicked out of all foreign countries there would be fewer international tangles, and if the Protestant Church Federation and its numerous auxiliaries would get out of politics

IN RUSH FOR CALIFORNIA GOLD

(THOMAS W. LEWIS,
In Zanesville, Ohio, Times-Signal.)

A MULTITUDE OF LOCAL SUBJECTS and events have been dealt with in this column during the past four years but none of the contributors have told of the effect upon this community of the discovery of gold in California. And indeed we have no data relating at large to that effect, but in the records preserved by the Pioneer and Historical Society of Muskingum County, there is a paper showing how the gold discovery affected one group of local men. The document was read before the society March 3 1911.

This group was made up of Simon Ewing (aged 21), Amos P. Josselyn (29), James McDonald (24), John Carrington (30), Wm. B. Harris (22), Wm. Hobbie (40), Wm. Owens (22), Wm. Gattrell (22), Jeff Mechlin (21), Nelson Williams (20). All were native Buckeyes but McDonald.

The news from California fired these men with a burning desire to get rich quick as gold diggers. The pull was irresistible. They got together and called their body "The South Zanesville Company". The historian declares that the name was adopted because of the fact that the members all lived in that South Zanesville which was long known as Natchez and afterwards as the seventh ward.

At any rate, each of the ten put $200 into a pool for expenses; also each furnished a team of horses and a wagon. Fully equipped with camp utensils, beds, etc., they began in the early summer of 1849 their long and dangerous journey across the continent. They went westward over Ohio's roads to Cincinnati and thence by boat to Independence, Missouri, at which point they struck the North Platte trail. Following this they made a stop at old Fort Kearney, whence the caravan moved on to Salt Lake City, halting there for a few days' rest. On through the Nevada country our Forty-niners made their way. Early in the fall Sacramento, California, was reached, "Without loss or disaster," says the historian.

One cannot but compare the apparently uneventful character of this journey to the Pacific with that of others of the period, especially with some that have been described in books and filmed for the screen. Perhaps the Pioneer Society's historian lacked data concerning the details of the journey. If it was made "without loss or disaster," those ten gold-seekers must have felt that the luck which had gone with them on land and water across deserts and mountains would hang on when they began to wield pick and shovel. But the less optimistic may have felt that in their good beginning there was warning of a bad ending.

At Sacramento all unnecessary possessions were disposed of, the money in hand was apportioned to members of the company, settlements were completed and the company disbanded. From that time forth each man stood on his own legs. Collective action was no more.

What success or failure followed each of these men we do not know. Our historian was silent on the subject. He did not say how many pots of gold our adventurers found at the end of the California rainbow, but he did tell in emotionless terms how and when some of them made their respective trips homeward.

Amos Josselyn returned by way of the Isthmus of Panama in 1852 and died here in 1885; Jas. McDonald returned in '51, but being crossed in love, back-tracked his way to California and won some wealth there; Williams and Harris reached home in safety, Williams passing away here in 1883 and Harris becoming one of Zanesville's pioneer brickmakers.

The departure of these boys must have been an event of tremendous interest to friends, of touching import to their fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers. Did that string of ten wagons pull out westward over the National road or wind its way around Dug road, with a stop long enough to give the horses their last drink from Lovers' Fountain, and thence to the Maysville pike? Too bad some local historian was not in Natchez that day to take notes of the

SINGED,
BUT SAFE

(RANGER BILL, U. S. Forest Service.)

“WAKE ME UP ‘BOUT DAY after tomorrow—and I hope to gosh she rains for a month,” said Ranger Bill, throwing his dripping Stetson into the corner as he slouched down in an easy chair with a grunt of satisfaction and stuck his wet feet in front of the open fire. “Man, but this has been some strenuous fire season, I’ll tell the sun-baked Golden State! I haven’t had a decent night’s sleep since way back in May, and there’s some 999 other Forest Service men in California that’s been in the same boat. Darned if I wouldn’t like to had some of them fellows that think a ranger’s job’s a ‘cinch’, trail me this summer. They’d sure have used up a powerful heap of foot ease and liniment. Me and Buck has been fightin’ fires most all summer in these mountains and then, to add to the season’s pleasure, so to speak, they up and sends me down state to help out on the other big blazes. I’ve eaten off a tin plate and slept on the ground so long I reckon I’ll have to brush up on social etiquette.

“Fire! Why, pardner, I’ve seen so much fire this summer that I wouldn’t be afraid to die tomorrow. Big blazes, too, that swept the mountains as clean as Pete here licks his grub pan when I feed him pork chops. A thousand acres, ten thousand, fifty thousand—all gone up in smoke, just because some fool was careless with a match or cigarette. They ought to cut the fines and give some of these devil-may-care fellows a shift on the fire line. That would teach them to be careful. Say, did you ever help cut a line through brush and timber along a steep slope on a red-hot day, with a fire sweeping up the mountain side toward you like a wild tornado? Two thousand men we had on one blaze this summer—sweating, cursing, grubbing for their lives. You bet they didn’t need no urging either, for they knew if they didn’t ‘head’ her they’d come out of it like the hunter we boys sing about:

“He dropped his match when he lit his cigar,
And it fell in a bunch of grass;
And he went on to shoot his ba’ar
In the distant mountain pass.
And the wind it riz, and the fire it spread,
‘Till it went all over the patch;
And the melted pants buttons they found was his,—
The fellow that dropped the match.”

“Dangerous work? You said it! We had four men killed this season on the fire line and I don’t know how many hundred were treated for burns and cuts and bruises. If there’s one job in the world where you need sturdy muscles, nimble feet and a cool head it’s fighting fire. I came pretty near getting mine this summer, too. Fact is, there was one time when I’d have traded all the pay checks I ever hope to get for a good breath of mountain ozone. I ain’t particularly strong for this Shadrach-Meshach-Abednego stunt, but I bet old Nebuchadnezzar never cooked up a fierier furnace for the boys back in Bible times that the one I went through. I came out all right, but, man, I sure got the singeing of my life.

“No, I ain’t never said much about it, but if you’re interested—this is the way it happened: I was out ‘scouting’ one hot afternoon on a big fire that had been running plumb ‘loco’ in the brush and chaparral. We’d been fighting the ornery critter for three weeks in some of the roughest country this side of the Bad Lands of South Dakota, and had big bunches of men and a dozen fire camps strung out all over the mountains. The fire would run so fast during the day that we had a heck of a time keeping track of it so as to know where to hit it hardest when it died down at night. The brush was so thick that traveling off the trails or fire breaks was a fierce proposition, and I ain’t been able to figure out yet how many shirts and pants I left hanging to the scrub oak and chamisal.

“That day I had one of the ‘straw bosses’ from our camp with me, and as everything was looking quiet down the mountain side, I sent him into Box Canyon to scout out the country, while I went along the ridge to inspect a new fire break, promising to meet him at the head of the canyon. He hadn’t been gone more’n fifteen or twenty minutes when all of a sudden the wind started to perk up and the fire down below boomed to heaven, sweeping straight up the mountain side toward the canyon. I beat it up the trail as fast as my blistered feet would carry me, headed for an old burn, when all of a sudden I thought of the fellow I sent into the canyon. I figured he’d be fighting his way through the brush and wouldn’t see the fire coming, and

LOS ANGELES IN 1857

MORE THAN SIXTY-SEVEN YEARS ago—July 10 1857—B. B. Barker, then residing in Los Angeles City, wrote to his parents a letter, the original of which is still in the possession of his son, Ambrose B. Barker of San Jose. The letter was loaned The Grizzly Bear and, being from a Pioneer of California and of historical importance, is here presented, for preservation:

"Los Angeles, July 10th, 1857.

"Dear Father and Mother: I received your letter a few days since and I now hasten to acknowledge its safe reception. I had almost despaired of ever getting another, but 'circumstances alter cases.' As it is a long way from here to where you live, one could not expect to keep up a regular communication, without taking into consideration the uncertainty of the mail regulations. I have written several letters to you in the course of the last six months, but have not received but the one that I am now answering, and indeed I had feared to receive one, for fear of having some bad news. I almost trembled when I saw that the letter was mailed at Williamsboro, for I very well knew it was from you, but thanks I owe when I read that all were enjoying that blessing which but few appreciate when in possession and so many lament when envied in the meshes and encircled in the coils of disease. But I take pleasure of assuring you that I have been blessed with that priceless blessing since I left you, and indeed all my life, and especially at present, both mentally and physically, body and mind. And indeed how truly thankful I should be for escaping all, not only all epidemics, but more especially those contagious diseases that are so prevalent in California, that ruin and disturb the whole human frame, both to the present as well as to the future generations, and which you have apparently feared of me contracting.

"You spoke of wishing me to visit you next fall, and in reply to you on that point I have to say that it would be utterly impossible for me to comply with your wishes. But saying this frankly to you, I hope you will not for one moment entertain the idea that it is for want of paternal affection that I cannot come and gratify your wishes, nor neither is it for fear of spending a few dollars, for I verily would give every cent that I have under the canopy of heaven to see you and my relatives and friends and start our bonfire new. But do not entertain the idea in the least that I have a great deal of that article to give or to boast of, but I am now doing well, and intend to let do-well alone, at least for awhile.

"But do not take this assertion as true as gospel, for in a year God only knows where I shall be, provided I am in the land of the living, but be assured that wherever I am I shall be sure to take particular care of number one, as usual. But the chances are that I will remain in this country for some time to come, and if I should take a notion to emigrate it will not be on a wild goose chase. I want to go to some country where there is a great deal of government surveying to do, as I understand how to expedite all work of that kind to perfection and can do more than any other man has done in this state, as I have ever heard of yet. Now Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico and several other territories are being surveyed, or will soon be ready to survey, and I want some of these days to get a contract, and if so I have no fears of not making a fortune, or a 'pile' as we say, in a few years. The Gaddens Purchase is not a great ways from here, and as I can talk the Spanish language with some little facility, I think it is most likely at present that I shall make my next break for that section of country.

"California is a first rate country for making money at anything that a man has a mind to go at. I am well satisfied with this state, for many reasons. One is, it is healthy without dispute, never exceptionally hot, nor never too cold, always enjoying a sea breeze, and indeed it is the most pleasant country to live in I have ever seen, both in winter and summer. It generally rains in the months of December, January, February and March, and no other time of the year does it ever rain, except a few showers in April sometimes. To give you a thorough description of this country it would take more space than I have, but as I have the whole day before me I will try to give you a little description of Los Angeles and surrounding country.

"Los Angeles is a small town of some 2,500 inhabitants, divided into different kinds of people, most of which are Mexicans, the balance are French, Germans, Americans and a few Jews. The houses are principally made of adobes or sun-dried bricks, and are about 18 inches long, 4 inches thick and 8 inches wide, and the walls of the houses are made sometimes three feet thick and made with flat tops, which look very strange to a person that never saw any before. There are a few other classes of houses, but these are the principal kind. There is a small river called San Gabriel that runs through the town and from it all the people obtain their water, and it is as good as water can be. From it they water all their vineyards and gardens by means of ditches made in such a manner as to irrigate every foot of tillable land.

"The people cultivate the grape here to perfection and it is the chief occupation of the farmers. In the vicinity of Los Angeles, there are several hundred acres of the grapevines and nothing else, planted some 6 feet apart. It is computed that each of those vines produce one gallon of wine, of a quality which is superior to any other wine in the world, in the beauty of color, and indeed containing every quality in excess that makes wine good and palatable, and of which I am unable to give a true description, but if you had a little you could judge for yourself. Some of these make as high as 80,000 gallons per annum, and it can be readily sold at $1.00 per gallon. By this you see that there are some very rich men here.

"Besides these vineyards, they have fine gardens of the prettiest flowers in the world, and fine orange orchards, and indeed everything grows here, citrons, oranges, English walnuts, pears, apples, peaches, lemons, etc. The surrounding country produces barley, wheat, oats, etc., but very little corn is raised here, and there are a great many ranches, or stock farms, where there are as many as 10,000 head of cattle on one ranch, with a great many hundred of horses. These are principally Mexicans that own the stock farms, as they were the first settlers of the country, and do not understand farming as the Americans do. Thus you see that there is a great deal of wealth here.

"Los Angeles is situated 30 miles from the Pacific Ocean, and at San Pedro there are steamboats that come from San Francisco once in every three weeks, so you see that we have navigation 30 miles from us. Thus I have given you a limited description of this country, which comprises a very little idea of the country, but I

J. Oliver Brison

(PUBLICITY SECRETARY, LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

THE YEAR 1925 WILL BE ONE OF UNPRECEDENTED industrial development in Long Beach, in the judgment of fifty of the leading business and professional men of the city, as shown by a recent survey made by a local newspaper. There seems to be ample proof for this optimistic expression and attitude on the part of the business men, judging from the present plans of the city and private interests to expend upwards of $50,000,000 in completing a number of large undertakings begun in 1924 and a number of new projects of equal magnitude during 1925.

Harbor and industrial development is given first place by a majority of those in a position to of earth, sand and silt at a cost to the city of more than $100,000. These dredges will continue this work for several months in the new year. Approximately $2,000,000 will be spent in constructing a rock jetty from the west side of the Flood Control out more than half a mile into the ocean, which will be the beginning of a $15,000,000 breakwater to be constructed by the United States Government.

The harbor dredging program includes deepening the entrance channel and inner harbor to a depth of from thirty-two to forty-two feet, permitting the largest ocean vessels to enter at will.

foresee the year's greatest possibilities. Next in importance will be acquisition of the central and east beach frontage for the public, involving a bond issue of $1,350,000; the addition and improvement of a number of highways to the north and east; and building of a new Municipal Auditorium.

There were six giant dredges working in the Long Beach Harbor during the month of December, dredging more than 1,000,000 cubic yards interested in locating their establishments here because of an abundant supply of low-priced water, gas, oil and electric power. A new $20,000,000 Edison power plant, located at the entrance of the Long Beach Harbor, will be entirely completed by January 15 1925, with a capacity sufficient to supply Long Beach and all the neighboring towns for all purposes, insuring against any power shortage in the future. The Los Angeles Gas Company has well under way the construction of a $15,000,000 plant on Alamitos Bay at the eastern boundary of Long Beach.

The City of Long Beach has expended approximately $7,000,000 during 1924 for new street paving, storm drains and laying sewers. An equal amount is to be spent during 1925, including widening and paving of Anaheim street from the western to the eastern city limits.

The $4,900,000 public-school construction program begun in 1924 will continue during 1925. This new building program includes fourteen new school buildings, three of which will be entirely completed in January of 1925 and the remainder later in the year. When this building program is completed by the Board of Education, Long Beach will have as fine a physical plant for school purposes as is provided in any city of its size in the United States.

The year 1924 was one of reconstruction in Long Beach and throughout the entire country, yet this city experienced the greatest construction period in its entire history. Many of these skyscraper, hotel, apartment and theatre building projects are not yet completed, but will be early in the year. While there was a general slowing down of business during 1924 all over the country, Long Beach will have a building report for the year equal to the record of 1923.

Among the new public buildings planned for 1925 are two new public libraries, three new fire stations and an addition to the new City Hall building. The city will construct a new aquarium for the University of Southern California during the coming year in Recreation Park.

On January 17 the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce is to conduct an excursion of 100 or

TIME TO APPLY FOR 1925

RENEWAL OF AUTO LICENSE.

The State Division of Motor Vehicles began to accept applications and fees by mail for the renewal of automobile licenses for 1925 December 15, according to an announcement of Chief Will H. Marsh. Although the official renewal period will not open until the latter part of January, Marsh states that the division is desirous of having these applications so that they may be tabulated and thus give the motoring public faster service. No certificates or plates will be mailed out until the renewal period starts. No applications will be accepted over the counter until later.

Applications should be sent direct to the division at Sacramento. The fee should be sent by check, money order or bank draft. Currency or silver should not be sent. The fee for renewing the license of an ordinary passenger automobile, trailer or motorcycle is $3. Owners of trucks or other motor vehicles used for commercial purposes will pay the same fee as last year, the amount of which is shown on the certificate of registration. A weight certificate will not be necessary.

In cases where the registered owner and the legal owner are not the same, Marsh advises the registered owner to send his fee and white certificate to the legal owner and let the latter make application. When the application is approved the new certificate of registration and the plates will be sent to the registered owner direct, and the certificate of ownership will be sent to the legal owner.

Gas Tax Good Producer—During the first year of its operation, the state gasoline tax produced $13,068,150, according to an announcement of State Controller Ray L. Riley. The revenue is divided between the state and the counties. Los Angeles County, having 512,374 of the 1,282,171 motor vehicles registered in the state, gets the largest apportionment, and Alpine County, with forty-two, the smallest.

"Year Models" Eliminated—The State Division of Motor Vehicles will from now on eliminate all reference to "year models" in all registration transactions of motor vehicles. Will H. Marsh, chief of the division, states that putting the year model on certificates and applications adds nothing to the records from the point of efficiency and is not required by law. The new forms will contain no reference to models. "The department will save a great deal of controversy among the dealers by this action," says Marsh. "We are not interested in year models. Our forms will still provide for writing in the year built and the date first registered."

To Curb Recklessness—At the Legislature which meets in Sacramento this month, Assemblyman Henry E. Carter of Los Angeles will propose a bill requiring every California auto owner to post a $5,000 personal injury and property damage indemnity bond before being granted a license to operate a car.

Out of Luck—Automobile dealers and others who delay making transfers of cars until the annual renewal period of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, in the hope of dodging payment of the transfer fee, are going to be "out of luck" this year. Information that hundreds of transfers are being delayed on this account caused Chief Will H. Marsh to issue this warning. He points out that the law requires a fee of $1 be charged in every case of transfer of title or interest in a motor vehicle or trailer.

"Pinks" Must Be Forthcoming—The State Division of Motor Vehicles has not changed its recent ruling that the pink certificates of ownership must be presented or mailed before automobile licenses for 1925 will be renewed, and will still insist that the pink certificate be forthcoming. This has been asserted in a statement issued by Will H. Marsh, chief of the division.

Record Shipment—The first shipment of cotton ever made from Colusa County was sent out from Maxwell the latter part of November. The cotton was grown near Delevan.

SANTA BARBARA NATIVE DAUGHTERS ENTERTAIN CITIZENSHIP CLASSES.

SANTA BARBARA—MEMBERS OF REINA del Mar 124 had a social evening at East-side Social Center, where Miss Tulita De la Ojeda, the director and a prominent member of the Parlor, outlined the program of activity carried on to the foreign groups of Santa Barbara. At the same time four hundred candy bags were filled with candy and nuts to be distributed at the Americanization party of December 18.

For several years the local Native Daughters have arranged a Christmas evening, with a program appropriate to the season, having as their guests of honor the citizenship classes of the Santa Barbara public schools. This year there were two nationalities represented in the classes, and the program included numbers to interest each group.

The hall was beautifully decorated with Christmas motifs, the crib of Bethlehem being featured as the main decoration. A big and brilliantly lighted Christmas tree held the interest of one hundred little folks. Miss Winona Higgins, a member of the Parlor, made an ideal Santa Claus. Chocolate and cake were served by the committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. C. S. Ream, assisted by Miss Grace Ruth Southwick, vice-principal of the evening high-school, and other members of the faculty.

Bridal Revue Lovely.

Sto. Leon—Joanquin 34 members enjoyed an entertainment and banquet at which the past presidents and recent brides were honor-guests. The Hula sextet—Gartrude Beck, Virginia Hill, Belle Aldeora, Adelle Campodonico, Lulu Schneider, Lucy Marina—won the hearts of the audience when they appeared in Hawaiian costumes and, to the accompaniment of ukuleles, sang parodies to the past presidents.

The bridal revue, dedicated to the Parlor's recent brides, was lovely and the bridal procession most realistic. Those participating were: Gertrude Beck, Belle Aldeora, Lulu Schneider, Lucy Marina, Virginia Hill, Bertha Fischbacher, Anna Ruggles, Camille Heinemann, Adelle Campodonico, Delia Garvin, little Misses Marcel Mardock, Winona Heinemann, Josephine Scally.

December 9 the Parlor had one of the largest whist and dancing parties ever held here, which proved a huge social and financial success. December 23 the members enjoyed a kiddie carnival and Christmas jinks.

Small, But Active.

Byron—Twenty-four tables of whist were in operation at the card party of Donner 193, December 8, when the top chest was awarded to a Mr. Hunt of Tracy. Officers were elected, Mary Williams being chosen president. The Parlor has a membership of but twenty-five, but it made its annual donation to the old people's home, the disabled soldiers and the homeless children.

The community Christmas tree of December 22 was participated in by Donner and Byron 193 N.S.G.W. The Parlor's next card party will be given January 7.

Annual Yuletide Jinks.

Hollister—Copa de Oro 124 initiated a candidate November 18, the ritual being ably rendered by the capable boys of officers, after which refreshments were served.

Christmas festivities were inaugurated by the annual Yuletide tree and bick-jinks December 12. Under the direction of Marshal Helen Leonard a beautiful Christmas tree was artistically decorated with bright tinsel and varicolored lights. Santa Claus, in the person of Hilda A. Thompson, distributed toys, horns, popcorn balls, and cones filled with candy, nuts and fruits. As each gift was presented the recipient was called upon to perform some stunt. The result was a most amusing program, which was closed with the singing of Christmas carols.

Grand President's January Itinerary.

Alturas—During the month of January, Grand President Catherine E. Gloster will officially visit the following Subordinate Parlors on the dates noted:

"Tyson Night" Celebrated.

Oakland—Past Presidents' Association No. 2 had a class initiation November 22 and also celebrated "Tyson Night." An elaborate turkey dinner was served, and Sister Tyson received a beautiful picture from the association and many fond remembrances from individual friends. Sister Buckingham was in charge of the evening and deserves great credit for the affair's success.

December 22 the association had its annual Christmas tree party, members of Past Presidents' Association No. 3 N.S.G.W. being guests. A good time was enjoyed by all. Anna Silva headed the association's committee which prepared Christmas boxes for the disabled war veterans.

Wishing You a Happy and Prosperous New Year

zonant N.S.G.W. at a Thanksgiving party at which the celebration of Father's Day, Father's Week of 1924. The dinner and musical numbers provided a torrent of laughter and applause from the large number of spectators. Those participating in the show were: Mmes. Cornelia Lott, Lois Walsh, Gladys Cress, Margaret Patton, Bonnie Robertson, Fern Patton, Mabel Fells, Ann Allen, Kiefer, J. H. Patterson, Gerald George, Doreen F. W. Boyle, W. B. Henry, Mrs. Allen Hinton, contributed, and there was a beautiful Christmas dinner and a happy New Year's party. In charge of the affair was a committee composed of Mmes. F. W. Boyle, Freda Cole, W. B. Henry, Harry McCoy.

The Parlor's third annual hope chest was given away at the Orange and Olive Show December 2. The chest was made of California cedar from Plumas County and was donated by F. Kutzner. It was filled with hand-made articles and was awarded to George Lambert. The chest netted $475.50, which was added to the Parlor's growing building fund.

Neighbor Parlor Visited.

Petaluma—At Petaluma 222's election of officers December 2, Emma Tomasi was chosen president for the January-July term. Mrs. Florence Anderson reported a large sum was realized from the November 18 bazar and card party. A tamales supper was served at the meeting's close.

December 4 several members of the Parlor attended the initiation and banquet of Santa Rosa 217 at Santa Rosa. December 16 the annual Christmas party was held and proved a most enjoyable occasion.

Entertains Citizens-To-Be.

Santa Barbara—Edna Sharpe has been elected president of Reina del Mar 126 for the January-July term. December 16 the Parlor gave its annual Christmas entertainment for the citizenship classes of the public schools. Five nationalities were represented, and an interesting program was presented.

Christmas Entertainment.

San Leandro—El Cereso 207 elected its officers for the January-July term December 10, Clara Medina being chosen president. An initiation and Christmas entertainment were featured December 23, the committee in charge being Addie May Silva (chairman), Mary Rodgers, Millie Silvey, Edna May Bettencourt.

Members In "Stunts."

Elk Grove—The costume party of Liberty 213, November 28, was a decided success. There were many wonderful costumes, and a splendid program was presented. As each member's name was called she was required to do a "stunt."

The party was arranged by Grand Trustee Belle Bradford, Isabelle Grover, Elizabeth Foulks, Ida Smith, and a chicken banquet was served by Ida Farrell, May Rhoades, Lucile Bryte, Kathryn Martin, Frances Wackman.

Entertained at Member's Home.

Modesto—Officers of Morada 199 were elected December 10, Mrs. Bertha Stowe becoming president, and two candidates were initiated. The annual Christmas party was held December 23 at the Crows Landing home of Miss Rosetta Vivian, a popular member.

Sons Guests.

Bieber—Mount Lassen 215 entertained members of Big Valley 211 N.S.G.W. and a few visitors at a whist party November 29. Prizes were awarded, and after the play a delightful supper, enjoyed by all, was served.

Xmas Tree Contribution.

Manteca—Phoebe A. Hearst 214 elected officers December 10, Josephine Driscoll becoming president. Twenty dollars was donated toward defraying the expense of the community Christmas tree.

Spelling Match.

San Jose—The Thursday Club of Ventana 100 entertained at a delightful Christmas party December 11. Red prevailed in the decorations, and the favors were beautiful. Miss Sadie Jefferson was the general chairman of the committee in charge.

An old-fashioned spelling match created a lot of fun after the December 11 meeting of the Parlor. Mrs. Sadie Howell was the "teacher," and Mrs. Clara Gairaud and Mrs. Julia Waddington the choosers. Mrs. Gairaud is the head of a committee which is arranging a January card party.

H. H. Rowland's family. Has Thad married or not? What has become of Bob Rowland, Uncle Davis, Jack, Sam, Wilson, Solomon, especially, and tell them to write to me and I will be sure to answer every letter that I get from old Granville. What has become of Dr. Wm. B. Evans? Tell John B. Hicks to write to me; be sure and tell him to write me what has become of Bill Rice. I should like to hear from them, and in a word anything about anybody in old Granville will afford me exceeding joy, as I have never seen a man from there since I left there.

"Let not yourself be troubled about my welfare, for I assure you that I have always had friends wherever I have been, and plenty of them, and a very good reason for it. I have never wronged a man of a cent, neither have I been guilty of a single thing that is dishonorable since I have left, and but few can say this much that have been in the places that I have, and as long as a man pursues that course he has nothing to fear. Honesty is the best policy the world over; I know it to be true. I have never made any profession of religion, but I have never forgotten that I am mortal, and am contented in the belief that what is to be will be, if it never comes. I should like to see Robert, my brother. Tell him to cultivate the strictest honesty. Tell him his brother has traveled a great deal and he has found it to be the best policy. As respects his education, I would prefer either a professional education or a trade. Drink deep or touch not. A little learning is a dangerous thing, but what he does learn be certain that he understands it well, and on that point I will send you a small piece that was written by me and published in the Los Angeles 'Star,' which will explain my sentiments on that particular subject. I could write another sheet, as I have got in a way, but I now see that I must soon close for want of space. Give my best respects to all inquiring friends and accept my highest affection.

"B. B. BARKER."

POSTAL RECEIPTS DENOTE GROWTH.

Postal receipts in Los Angeles City for November 1924 showed a gain of 21.53 percent over those for the same month of 1923. It was one of the largest increases reported by any city in the country.

Based on the volume of November postal receipts, the cities of the United States ranked in the following order: New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Kansas City, Saint Louis, Cleveland, Detroit and Los Angeles.

Placer Fruit—During the 1924 season, which closed early in November, Placer County sent 4,255 cars of deciduous fruits to Eastern markets.

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"DEEP IN THE HEARTS OF MEN."

By Mary E. Waller; Little, Brown & Company, Publishers, Boston; Price, $2.00.

There have been eight reprintings of Mary Waller's novel, "Deep in the Hearts of Men", that in itself is a recommendation. The plot, a man's struggle to find himself, is a familiar one. It is in the fine portrayal of the forcible characters that the novel rises above the mediocre.

Adrian Powers, son of a prosperous manufacturer, leaves an assured position, home and comforts to work out his own problems, to make his own career. As a humble miner, in West Virginia, he learns much of men and nature. Acquaintance with Donald McQuade, fellow-miner, and his daughters, Jean and Julie, and son, Jim, prove a revelation to Adrian.

War ends the tranquil life in West Virginia. Out of its crucible, Adrian Powers returns to find that "After darkest night comes, full of loving light, the laughing morn."

"THE TALMADGE SISTERS."

By Margaret L. Talmadge; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.

Norma, Constance, Natalie! Who of us, having once seen the Talmadge sisters, have not wondered about them, wished to know more of them. To our rescue comes another member of this distinguished family, Margaret L. Talmadge, their mother.

The story of the Talmadge family reads like a Cinderella fairy tale come true. Of their early childhood in New York City, how Norma chanced to go into pictures, how Constance followed suit, all these milestones in the girls' career are intimately and entertainingly told by no less an authority than their mother. A few interesting pages are devoted to "How Pictures Are Made," and "What Makes For Screen Success," including an enlightening excerpt by Norma.

A great many charming poses of the girls and a splendid one of the author enhance the attractiveness of the book. The public is doubly indebted to Mrs. Talmadge, first for the Talmadge sisters themselves and second for the story of "The Talmadge Sisters."

DECIDUOUS FRUITS BRING MILLIONS.

The California Fruit Exchange estimates the total gross receipts from California 1924 deciduous fruits shipped to Eastern points at $111,800,500. The fruit-growers received a net total of $64,449,700.

The shipments, by carloads, included: Grapes 54,136, pears 5,755, plums 2,879, peaches 1,812, cherries 709, apricots 474; a total of 65,765. The 1923 carload shipments of the same fruits totaled 72,602.

Property Values—The State Board of Equalization reported December 10 the actual assessed value of all property in California subject to city and county taxation $12,125,970,808. Taxes for 1924 will total $219,468,000, a rate of $1.81 per $100.

Sugar Factory To Open—The beet-sugar factory at Hamilton City, Butte County, idle six years, is to be rebuilt and opened for the 1925 season.

In Memoriam

MISS JULIA SUGHRUE.

For the third time this term, death has visited our Parlor, and this time removed one of our most ardent and enthusiastic members, Sister Julia Sughrue. She was a past president, and also a district deputy grand president. She was born at Moores Flat, but later removed to North Bloomfield, where she lived until about fifteen years ago, when she moved to this city, which has been her home ever since.
Possessed of a very sweet and cheerful disposition, she made many friends, who will feel grieved to hear of her death. She was stricken with a paralytic stroke on Thanksgiving Eve, but lived until Sunday, December 7. The funeral took place from St. Canice Catholic Church, where a requiem mass was held. The members of Laurel Parlor acted as escort, and a very large number were present.
She will certainly be missed at our meetings, as she was nearly always present. She leaves to mourn her loss one sister, Miss Mary Sughrue, and one brother, Francis Sughrue, who is a past president of Hydraulic Parlor N.S.G.W. of this city. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to them at this time.

“At last the thread was snapped, her head was bowed;
Life dropped the distaff through her hands serene;
And loving neighbors smoothed her careful shroud,
While death and winter closed the autumn scene.”

LAUREL PARLOR NO. 6 N.D.G.W.
By Lottie M. Eden, Recording Secretary.
Nevada City, December 16, 1924.

GEORGE E. CARY.

To the Officers and Members of Lower Lake Parlor No. 159 N.S.G.W. We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of regret on the death of Brother George E. Cary, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, By the death of George E. Cary our state has lost an honored pioneer, our Parlor a beloved charter member, and his family a kind and loving husband and father; and whereas, the charm of his upright character and kindly disposition won for him the respect and love of our membership, who deeply grieve over his passing; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this tribute of affection be sent to the bereaved wife and children, a copy spread upon our records, and a copy sent to The Grizzly Bear for publication.

ALBERT S. KUGELMAN,
A. H. OSGOOD, Committee.

Lower Lake, December 18 1924.

San Francisco—Frank M. Silva, former district attorney of Napa County, assistant United States attorney and director of prohibition for California, died December 8, survived by a wife and two children. He was a native of Napa City, affiliated with Napa Parlor No. 62 N.S.G.W.

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

NEW YEAR DAY 1875 WAS USHERED in by one of the coldest New Year Eves yet experienced in California. The temperature was down to 26 degrees, but the day was clear.

January proved one of the stormiest months the state had experienced. Warm rainstorms began the 7th and, succeeding one another, gave a total rainfall of 8.53 inches for the month. Falling upon the snow on the Sierras, the rain melted it and caused extreme high water.

The Feather and Yuba Rivers, at flood height, overtopped the levee at Marysville, Yuba County, January 19 and the city was inundated. The flood was four feet deep in the business section, and people living in one-story houses had to take refuge upon roofs. Joseph Leckley, a 6-year-old lad, fell off a roof and was drowned. The flood, lasting three days, damaged several merchants heavily, and it was estimated that a million dollars' loss was sustained.

The 25th the flood had subsided so that people could come in and walk the streets; and auction sales of damaged goods gave ranchers great bargains. Clotheslines were crowded with wet bedding hung out to dry, and while the gas works were out of commission most of the people went to bed at dark. Sacramento, in true Californian generosity, sent the afflicted city a carload of blankets, while its citizens and those of neighboring towns raised money and contributed food and clothing to send to the flood sufferers.

Previous to New Year Day there was a shortage of feed in Southern California and over 30,000 sheep had been driven north of Tehachapi for feeding.

This month, 12 inches of rain fell in Los Angeles and everybody was jubilant. A washout on the railroad line near San Fernando caused the engine of a train to overturn.

A terrific norther blew January 25 and did much damage to shipping in San Francisco Bay. Several barges were sunk, schooners were blown ashore, and two British vessels that were at anchor collided. Buildings were blown down and roofs carried away, their shingles flying around like chaff. Telegraph wires and poles were prostrated all over the state. A snowslide on the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevadas buried and killed twenty-eight Chinamen.

The railroad lines were badly damaged by washouts and having bridges swept away. Train service during the entire month was much interrupted.

Four inches of snow fell in Bakersfield, Kern County, January 26. Donner Lake was frozen over during the last week of the month, and Truckee, Nevada County, people were enjoying skating over its icy surface.

New Year calls were never so numerous, and never before was "Tom and Jerry" partaken of in such copious draughts. A citizen of Sacramento, late New Year afternoon, met another and saluted him with: "A Happy New Year!" The saluted one steadied himself, responded, and then invited the other to have a cigar. He took out of his vest pocket a clothespin and, after presenting it, took out another, which he put in his mouth and vainly made several attempts to light it with a match. After learning that a woman friend had hospitably filled his vest pockets with fine Havanas, the friend left him still endeavoring to have a smoke and striking matches.

Miner Starts Something.

Sheriff Tom Cunningham of San Joaquin County was presented by his friends at Stockton, New Year Day, with a fine saddle horse, saddle and bridle costing $600.

The stock market continued to be agitated during the month, with an upward tendency until the last week. A slump then set in that carried values rapidly downward. The shrinkage in prices amounted to millions of dollars. Fluctuations amounting to $50 a share in prices were of daily occurrence.

In order to have enough stock to go around, Con. Virginia and California each increased their capital stock to $54,000,000, divided into 540,000 shares. It was an increase of five to one.

The decrease in value of mining shares this month was estimated to be near $500,000,000. Quite a number of margin stockholders, who began the year wealthy, were wiped out. Several brokers failed, and the California street, San Francisco, aspect had a blue tinge.

Joe Harrigan, a miner who had made a big raise in Con. Virginia stock, visited "Hell's Kitchen," a resort on Pacific street, San Francisco. He was a man of powerful physique and, after being invited to take a seat by one of the kitchen's "dames" ordered "something to wet my whistle." He was served a decoction that looked like gin. On tasting it, he had to spit it upon the floor. The "damsel," in forcible language, objected to his conduct, and he let fly the tumbler and hit her on the neck. She screamed, and then started a battle. Harrington grabbed a guitar from one of the orchestra and knocked down three women, also the chandelier, and in the darkness overturned tables, chairs and occupants and smashed numerous window panes. He got hold of a pewter pitcher and as a policeman entered hit him a staggering blow on the head. Several more officers coming, one with lowered head rushed and butted the wind out of the infuriated miner, who was then taken to the lockup.

Assays of ore from the Paramint mines ranged from $1,500 to $12,000 a ton. The first White child, a girl, was born in the camp this month. Nearly 100 ox and mule teams were freighting from Spadra, Los Angeles County, to the camp.

Two immigrants from Switzerland came to Grass Valley, Nevada County, and, unable to obtain employment, began prospecting on Deadman's Flat in November. This month they found a decomposed quartz vein and extracted, by crushing rock in a hand mortar, $4,000 in three days.

The McLeod quicksilver mine twelve miles from Hollister, San Benito County, developed a rich vein of cinnabar yielding 60 percent mercury. It was sold to a company of Englishmen for $50,000.

State's Indebtedness $3,483,655.

Two miners named Moran and Orr found :

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY R. H. TAYLOR

AGRICULTURAL LEGISLATION

ANOTHER LEGISLATIVE SESSION IS just beginning. The farmers of California should take the greatest interest in the bills which will be under consideration. The large farmers' commodity organizations, co-operative marketing and others, are combined in what is known as the Agricultural Legislative Committee, and through it they not only keep posted on pending legislation but take a very active part in seeing that the legislators are informed of the farmers' needs and the effect of such legislation upon their interests and the interests of California as a whole. The influence of this committee has been great, because it has played the game squarely and has always been conservative in its views.

The editor of this page has recently been made executive secretary of this committee, and because of the stress under which he must work has been forced, reluctantly, to give up his editorial duties, but in doing so wishes to express his appreciation for the continued courtesies extended him by the editor of The Grizzly Bear Magazine and those readers who have read over his page from time to time. We are looking forward to serving you, the people of California, in this new capacity and hope it may be more effective than in the past.

GROWTH OF THE HORSE'S FOOT.

According to Dr. John W. Adams, "The foot of the horse will grow from one-sixth to one-half of an inch per month, with a general average of about one-third of an inch; unshod animals' feet will grow faster than those that are shod; the feet of geldings and mares grow faster than those of stallions." From these statements the necessity for giving the feet proper attention can very readily be realized.

The wall of the foot grows downward below the sole of the foot unless it is removed or becomes broken off. As a usual thing such shells are permitted to grow until they shorten themselves by breaking off at the level of the bottom of the sole.

When they break in this manner, it is not unusual for them to break away more at one place than at another. In this way the foot is not kept level and the bones that are found in the foot cannot maintain their normal position and there will be a strain upon some of the ligaments and tendons and a relaxation of some of the others.

Among horsemen who have had a wide experience with horses, it is generally conceded that throwing the structure within the foot out of balance is, no doubt, the cause of by far the greatest percentage of lameness. In neglected feet of colts it is not uncommon to find large, flat, deformed feet, or feet with wings at the quarters, etc. It is absolutely necessary to trim the colt's hoof often if a desirable type of foot is to be maintained.

While the toes of the foot grow faster than the heels, they also wear away faster. When the animal is shod the wearing off of the toe is prevented and the greater amount of horn that is removed from the toe than from the heel emphasizes this fact very plainly.

If a horse is to go barefoot it should have plenty of horn, but it should not extend below the level of the bottom of the sole or it may become broken or split from coming into contact with hard objects. The frog should be pared level (or almost so) with the sole of the foot. Some of the older horseshoers are very prejudiced against cutting any of the frog away, but it does no particular damage when done within reason.

The edge of the wall should be well rounded off. A horse that has been wearing shoes will not stand so much neglect as one that has always gone barefoot. Horses that are going barefoot should have their feet inspected often, to detect any faults or irregularities in their growth.

BETTER HOG CRATES.

Good crates are easy to handle, reduce shipping costs, and save heavy losses. It is poor policy to put a valuable animal in a makeshift crate to be shipped any distance. Three essentials in building a crate are (1) lightness in weight; (2) proper size and construction to protect the animal during transit, and (3) durability.

There is no one common fault to our livestock crating practices. Instead, there may be one or more of many causes for trouble in shipping breeding animals. There may be too little lumber in one crate; too much in another, weak corner construction, lack of bracing, too few nails; or nails of the wrong size, some too small to hold, others too large so that they split the wood; nails driven into the end grain and consequently of little holding power; insufficient protection for the contents. These are the most obvious weaknesses of the crates of shippers of today.

The following table of measurements in building hog crates are recommended by the University of Wisconsin. Materials needed for hog crates for 100- to 225-pound hogs are as follows: Ends—4 slats, 1 in. x 4 in. x 1 ft. 10 in.; 1 slat, 1 in. x 6 in. x 1 ft. 10 in.; 1 slat, 1 in. x 3 in. x 1 ft. 10 in. Sides—6 uprights, 1 in. x 4 in. x 3 ft.; 6 slats, 1 in. x 4 in. x 4 ft. 4 in.; 2 slats, 1 in. x 6 in. x 4 ft. 4 in. Floor—2 skids, 2 in. x 2 in. x 4 ft. 4 in.; flooring, in 20-in. lengths; total length of floor, 4 ft. 4 in. Top—4 slats, 1 in. x 4 in. x 1 ft. 8 in.; 1 slat, 1 in. x 4 in. x 1 ft. 10 in. Endgate—1 2-in. strip, 1 ft. 10 in. long; 2 boards, 1 in. x 6 in. x 2 ft. 11 in.; 1 piece, 1 in. x 4 in. x 12 in.

Inside crate dimensions for hogs 225 to 500 pounds in weight are as follows: width, two feet; height, three and one-third feet; length, six and one-half feet. The same number of pieces are used, the dimensions being slightly increased to stand the additional weight. For pigs weighing up to 100 pounds make crates one foot wide, two feet high and three and five-sixths feet long.

The steps in the simplest method of crate construction are as follows: (1) Build the floor first. Cut the two skids 2x2 inches. Nail the floor boards squarely across the skids. (2) Build each side separately. Cut four uprights, two for each side. Cut enough slats for both sides. Nail the slats on the uprights proper distances apart.

(3) Nail the sides to the floor by nailing the uprights to the skids. Remember that the slats are on the inside of the crate. Drive the nails so that the heads will be on the inside and clinched on the outside of the crate. (4) Cut the top and end slats. (5) Nail the top and end bars, spacing properly. (6) Build the endgate. The material recommended for crate building is one inch thick and four inches wide.

The new standard type of crate has several advantages over the makeshifts of former years.
The lower slats on the crate are nailed close together for at least a foot above the floor to eliminate danger from broken legs. Nailing the floor boards crosswise on 2x2-inch skids also does away with the old practice of nailing a few boards lengthwise fastened only to the bottom slats which often met with disaster. Crate construction need no longer be a matter of guess-work and a few hours of work will complete a crate that should last a long time and embody the essential principles of a good crate, namely, lightness, proper size and construction to protect the animal during transit, and durability.

HIGHEST MARKET DEMANDS FOR CATTLE.

Well-fattened beef animals weighing from 800 to 1200 pounds have been in demand on livestock markets during recent years, rather than animals of greater weight. This has been the result of a demand by beef consumers for lightweight, high-grade cuts. Such a demand must necessarily be supplied by well-finished animals from 12 to 20 months old carrying a large percentage of the blood of the early-maturing beef breeds—usually that of the Hereford, Aberdeen-Angus or Shorthorn.

The preparation for market of yearlings, or baby beefs, requires more skill than is necessary for the production of animals marketed at more mature ages, on account of their tendency to grow rather than to fatten. To fatten yearlings successfully, they must be placed on a fattening ration when they are weaned and kept on full feed until they are ready for marketing.
Every effort should be made to get the calves through the weaning period without the loss of their milk fat. The grain ration should be increased so as to permit as little change in their rate of growth in fattening as possible. Some feeders build "creeps" in the pastures or lots so that the calves can get their grain without being disturbed by cows. Creeps consist of small pens with openings which permit only the calves to enter. These openings may have rollers on each side to prevent bruising the calves.

Calves from heavy milking cows should be weaned gradually over a period of from 10 to 15 days. Fall calves should not be weaned until after the cows and calves are on grass. Spring calves should either be kept on grass after weaning in the fall, or be given some succulent feed such as silage. It is advisable to provide them with winter pasturage such as wheat, oats, rye or barley when soil and climatic conditions permit.

SILAGE-MAKING HINTS.

Corn silage is best prepared when the corn is cut at a stage containing about 65 or 70 percent moisture. This may be told when the lower leaves on the stalk are turning brown, about 90 percent of the kernels are dented, and 75 percent are so hardened that no moisture can be squeezed out.

The length to which the silage is cut should be from one-half to one inch. Silage cut this short will pack better and the silo will hold its maximum tonnage. Also the chances for the silage to spoil are considerably reduced.

In filling the silo, packing is essential. The common practice is to keep the sides slightly higher than the center and to tramp the whole surface thoroughly.

If the silage is too dry to pack well, water should be added. This is best done by directing a hose in the blower. Well-packed and moistened silage is less likely to mold.

When the silo is filled the silage should be covered to prevent spoilage. A layer of cut corn or sorghum stalks from which the ears have been removed does this effectively.

In the Bald Mountain hydraulic mine near Sierra City, Sierra County, a nugget was found that weighed 5 pounds 8 ounces and was valued at $1,300.

Over 100 Chinamen were put to work grading the proposed railroad track from Los Angeles to Independence, Inyo County.

Statistics published this month showed that the State Government received during 1874 the sum of $4,333,342 and expended $3,963,965. California had an indebtedness of $3,483,655. The state savings banks had 57,807 depositors and $46,970,610 deposited. There were 234,309 children under eighteen years of age in the state. There was shipped by vessels through the Golden Gate during the present grain season 465,515 tons of wheat to Europe.

Engineers of the Southern Pacific, building south and north over the Tehachapi Mountains, located the San Fernando tunnel and began operations there this month.

A committee of citizens from Pacheco, Contra Costa County, was selected to make a systematic trial cultivating tobacco and curing it by the Culp process. Success was expected from individual data given.

Col. McLellan, a San Mateo capitalist, purchased a water ditch in El Dorado County and announced plans to enlarge and lengthen it. By constructing a large reservoir at El Dorado he would make that town the outfitting headquarters. The ditch was to be 100 miles long and would be used to supply Sacramento with mountain water. It was to carry 10,000 inches of water and float timbers and lumber from sawmills besides irrigating an immense acreage.

The Northern Pacific opened its line to Tomales January 7. There was a big excursion and celebration by the citizens of Marin County and a delegation from San Francisco.

Dr. Hugh Glenn, in Colusa County, had plowed and sowed 36,000 acres of wheat this season. He had 300 men and 1,000 mules employed.

Two hundred men were at work constructing a road on the South Fork of the Merced River to Yosemite Valley.

Salmon trout were ascending Temescal Creek to spawn in immense numbers. A dam at Humboldt Park stopped them and boys were catching a big supply weighing from three to seven pounds each.

A trapper named Snyder, on the Feather River above Marysville, caught three beavers, one of them weighing sixty pounds.

Santa Barbara had a woman editor on the "Press" and another on the "Index." They fell out, and went to verbal quarreling in the columns of the respective papers. The miss on the "Press" advised the matron on the "Index" to stop padding—her columns. The matron on the "Index" called her critic a cross-eyed hussy.

A boy named Cyrus Sanford, herding cattle on a rancho near Los Angeles, saw an eagle swoop down and fasten its talons on a 6-months-old calf and attempt to carry it off. The yells of the lad caused the eagle, when about fifty feet in the air, to drop the calf and it was killed by the fall.

Such Richness, So Near, Surprises.

Amador County taxpayers were complaining of the supervisors paying a watchman $70 a month to protect the county treasurer's safe which, on account of a robbery, did not have a cent in it.

D. Mack, boring a well on a ranch three miles from Dixon, Solano County, at a depth of fifty feet went through a redwood log below which was a bed of gravel that had been deposited there by an ancient stream.

A census of Oroville, Butte County, showed it had two ministers, five doctors, eight lawyers and 1,500 inhabitants.

During 1874 the Central Pacific brought into California 33,769 immigrants, who came second class, riding in the emigrant cars on the rear of freight trains.

Some of the Marin County citizens were hunting and killing seals in Bolinas Bay.

The State Central Committee of the People's Independent party, dubbed the "Dolly Vardens," met in San Francisco January 21 and decided to put a full ticket for all state officers in the field at a state convention to be held during the coming summer.

Ex-Governor Leland Stanford, president, and Mark Hopkins, treasurer of the Central Pacific, began the erection of mansions on the block between Powell, Pine, Mason and California streets, San Francisco, now dubbed "Nob Hill." Over 100 workmen were employed, and the railroad magnates were preparing to move from Sacramento to San Francisco. As was usual, Sacramento lost its millionaires after they had made their wealth there.

Senator John P. Jones of Nevada State married Miss Georgie Sullivan in San Francisco New Year Day. She was the daughter of Eugene J. Sullivan, a capitalist. The senator bought this month the Rancho San Vincente for $162,500 and subsequently built a mansion and subdivided the tract into the City of Santa Monica. The Jones mansion there is now a hotel.

State Senator Charles Maclay of Santa Clara announced that a prospecting party headed by an old-timer named Slater had found on the San Fernando Rancho, near Los Angeles, a rich cinabar vein, a ledge of silver ore, a deposit of good heat-burning coal and thirty-four springs oozing oil, all within five miles of the town of San Fernando. Such richness, so near, was an unexpected surprise to the oldest inhabitants of Los Angeles.

A. B. Meacham, a Modoc Peace Commissioner who was wounded in the attack made by Captain Jack and other Modoc warriors upon the commissioners which resulted in two of his associates being killed, was lecturing on "The Modoc War." He had with him Captain Applegate, a pioneer scout, and half a dozen Northern California Indians. Their war whoops and dances made a unique exhibition.

The first boxing contest in California was held in San Francisco January 26 and was attended by a motley crowd. The star bout was between Prof. Miller, dubbed the "Australian Hercules," and Bill Davis, a ring fighter of some renown. The bout was friendly, and made a good showing of scientific boxing.

Lake County Girl Expert Shot.

A few days later a couple of Negro sports called upon the police chief and asked him to decide a bet. One affirmed that a sparring match was different from a boxing match, and had bet it was. The chief cogitated a little while and then answered by saying he had known some boxers to spar for drinks, but before he could continue his decision he was interrupted by an intoxicated Irishman who had entered the office, saying: "If ye've want to know the difference just step out on the sidewalk wid me and I'll show ye'se." The bettors decided to go elsewhere for a decision.

MORELAND TRUCKS and BUSES Have Demonstrated California's Superior Manufacturing Possibilities

Fourteen years ago when the Moreland Trucks were first made, many people scoffed at the idea that quality manufactured products could be made in California.

In 1923, over $4,000,000 worth of Moreland Trucks and Buses were sold in direct competition with the leading makes in the United States.

The Moreland Company has demonstrated California's manufacturing possibilities by building trucks and buses of a quality unexcelled by any produced anywhere in this country.

CALIFORNIA PROPERTY LIABLE FOR BONDED DEBTS OF MILLIONS.

The outstanding bonded indebtedness of the State of California is $91,439,500, according to State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson, and there are bonds authorized and unsold to the amount of $16,147,000. In addition, the counties have a bonded debt of more than $200,000,000, and the municipal bonded indebtedness adds approximately $170,000,000.

The total assessed valuation of real estate and improvements in the state is approximately $3,500,000,000, and the total bonded debt, for which it must become liable, is approximately $461,439,500, or about one-seventh of its value.

Native Sons of the Golden West

AN INSTITUTION DESERVING

FINANCIAL AND MORAL SUPPORT.
GRAND PRESIDENT EDWARD J. Lynch of San Francisco has sent a letter to the Subordinate Parlor urging financial support for the California State Historical Association, with headquarters at the University of California, Berkeley. Dr. Owen C. Coy is the able director of the association. The Grand President, in the course of his letter says:

"As you know, the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West has been assisting in every way possible in the formation and initial support of the State Historical Association, of which our Past Grand President, Joseph R. Knowland, is president. This organization is making excellent headway in the face of serious handicaps, and promises big things for the future. It is greatly to be hoped that the resolution of our Grand Parlor, requesting the Legislature to appropriate a substantial sum for the carrying on of the work of the Historical Association, will be successful. For the next few months, however, until such an appropriation can be made, the Native Sons must stand behind the association, together with its other friends, in the effort to keep the important new venture alive. The memberships of Native Sons Parlor and of individual Native Sons are the most obvious means of assisting the Historical Association through these difficult days.

"A large number of the Parlor have already joined the association and if your Parlor has not yet taken action, I would urgently request that you bring the matter up for discussion. The grand officers have strongly endorsed the Historical Association and we are all anxious to see every Parlor of the Order a member. The annual dues for an institutional membership are $10, for an individual membership $3. I hope your Parlor will decide to join the California Historical Association, if it has not already done so, and I would also like to see as many individual members of your Parlor as possible affiliate themselves with the association. Checks for dues may be made out in favor of the California State Historical Association, University of California, Berkeley, California."

RECORD-BREAKING CLASS INITIATION.

Fort Bragg—Although a fierce storm prevailed, Alder Glen 200 went over the top December 8, and initiated the largest class of candidates ever inducted into any single Parlor in the Order's history—141. More applications are on file, and an additional 100 new members will be added to the rolls during the next sixty days. The ritual was exemplified by the following: Junior Past Grand President William J. Hayes, P.; Grand Trustee Seth Millington, 1V.P.; Grand Second Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch, 2V.P.; Grand Third Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, 3V.P.; Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew, Jr.P.P.; Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge, Sr.P.P.; Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb, M.; George Cuthbertson (Castro 232), O. The success of the membership drive was due mainly to the efforts of Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn, and he was accorded a well-deserved ovation. Alder Glen is so elated that it promises to be represented at the San Bernardino Grand Parlor by two additional delegates, and will put Leonard Stone in the field for one of the seven Grand Trusteeships.

Following the ritual ceremonies an elaborate banquet was served, President W. A. Andrews presiding as toastmaster. An orchestra and a quartet favored with several selections, and addresses were delivered by Junior Past Grand President Hayes, J. A. Pettis, Grand Second Vice-president Welch, Grand Third Vice-president Thompson, Professor J. S. Colton, Professor P. W. Smith, Leonard Stone, Stuart Robinson was heard in a vocal solo. Letters and telegrams from various Parlor and members of the Order, congratulating Alder Glen and Newman Cohn, were read.

The following day the Native Sons dedicated the new Noyo school. Leonard Stone was chairman of the day, and in addition to a program of musical numbers there were addresses by Henry Heitmeier, P. W. Smith, principal Fort Bragg elementary school, Junior Past Grand President Hayes, Grand Second Vice-president Welch, American and State (Bear) Flags were presented to the school, on behalf of Alder Glen Parlor, by Grand Third Vice-president Thompson.

At its December 12 meeting, the Parlor adopted resolutions setting forth "three prominent causes" responsible for the successful membership drive: "First, Alder Glen Parlor has first rank in our thriving community as a leader and participator in all patriotic events. Second, its membership is composed of hustling, loyal Native Sons, who are not backward in pressing the claims of the Order on worthy and eligible prospects. Third, the membership had the valued and untiring aid and assistance of Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn, to whom great credit must be given." It was resolved that a vote of thanks be given Cohn, and "That in the mind and heart of every member is the fixed and steady determination to keep Alder Glen Parlor No. 200 in the forefront as a Subordinate Parlor of the Order, an institution of great service to our nation and our state."

New Ritual Star Appears.

Palo Alto—The annual ritual contest between the present officers and past presidents of Palo Alto 216, November 24, was won by the latter. A new ritual star developed, in the person of Dr. O. L. Minor, third vice-president, who carried off the honors of the evening. The Parlor contributed four candidates to the Santa Clara County Parlor's joint initiation in San Jose, November 29.

December 8, Palo Alto's annual anniversary dinner was served in the auditorium of Native Sons' Building. One hundred and ten members were seated, and among the visitors were Grand Trustee James A. Wilson and D.D.G.P. James F. Stanley of San Francisco. An appropriately decorated birthday cake, with twenty-two candles was donated by the chair officers. Past Presidents M. A. Friedman and H. E. Browning were presented with appropriate emblems, and J. J. Alexander presented to the Parlor a beautiful silk American flag for parade purposes.

High School Dedicated.

Wheatland—Under the auspices of Rainbow 40 and Camp Far. West 218 N.D.G.W., the Wheatland Union high-school was dedicated. A program of speaking and singing was rendered the principal addresses being delivered by Grand First Vice-president Fletcher A. Cutler and Grand Second Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch.

Prior to the dedication the visitors were entertained at a banquet by the Parlor.

The dedicatory exercises were conducted by Grand First Vice-president Cutler, Grand Second Vice-president Welch, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Past Grand Presidents Fred H. Greeley and Clarence E. Jarvis. Other grand officers in attendance were Grand Trustees Seth Millington and Charles L. Dodge.

Luncheon Club Being Formed.

Sacramento—Sacramento 3 and La Bandera 110 N.D.G.W. had a Christmas tree and card party. Whist was played, turkeys being the prizes. Dancing was also on the program, and refreshments were served.

The local Parlor—Sacramento, Sunset 26 and Sutter Fort 241 are to organize a luncheon club, similar to the clubs in successful operation at San Francisco and Oakland. The Parlor's bowling team is in action every Friday night.

Fortieth Anniversary Observed.

Alameda—Alameda 47 celebrated its fortieth institution anniversary December 10 with a banquet and dance that was largely attended. E. A. Brule was toastmaster at the turkey feast, which was arranged by Encinal 156 N.D.G.W., and the speakers included:

Native Daughters—Grand Vice-president Sue J. Irwin, Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Past Grand Presidents Dr. Victory A. Derrick and Addie Mosher, D.D.G.P. Ramona Ring, Mrs. Agnes Reed, Miss Irene Rose. Native Sons—Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb, Past Grand President Harry G. Williams, Judge Lincoln S. Church, A. V. Fisher, J. W. McMasters, the latter two being charter members of Alameda.

Social Season Inaugurated.

Eureka—The annual get-together banquet of Humboldt 14 and Occident 28 N.D.G.W., November 24, was largely attended. George B. Albee was the toastmaster, and there were remarks from Mrs. Annie Madsen, Mrs. Nell Dick, Tom Carr, Lew Carr. An orchestra furnished music during the feast, and Melvin Satin favored with a vocal solo. Dancing concluded the enjoyable evening. The affair was in the nature of a housewarming, the lodge-room having been recently renovated, and its attractiveness was enhanced by the holiday decorations. A number of social affairs are in preparation for the future.

Humboldt Parlor is anxious to have the 1926 Grand Parlor of Native Sons meet in Eureka, and is at work to that end. Occident Parlor sent its usual Thanksgiving box to the Central Homeless Children Committee in San Francisco.

Host to Many.

Sutter Creek—Amador 17 entertained at a delicious Thanksgiving banquet, November 20, the wives of its members and the husbands and members of Amapolo 80 N.D.G.W. The decorations and favors were in keeping with the season. Following the feast there was an attractive program, and old-time dances were much enjoyed. During the evening President John Talia extended Amador's welcome, and President Vermetta Canvin responded for Amapolo.

Sea Point Advances.

Sausalito—Another six candidates were initiated into Sea Point 158 December 3, the ritual being exemplified by the regular officers, who are in a position to render the work in a very satisfactory manner. This has become a possibility, due to the fact that the officers and members of the drill committee work hand in hand, at many private rehearsals, to make a record for a perfect rendition.

Many candidates having been initiated during the term just closed, and many satisfactory social functions having been held, the Parlor has decided to maintain the same set of officers for another term. With Sea Point 196 N.D.G.W., a joint Christmas tree was featured, at which members of both Parlors, their relatives and the kiddies attended. All this speaks well for Sea Point 158, which will continue to advance.

Class Initiated in Santa Clara County.

San Jose—At a joint Santa Clara County initiation November 29, fifty-one candidates were initiated for San Jose 22, Santa Clara 100, Observatory 177, Mountain View 215 and Palo Alto 216. The ritual was exemplified by the following: Grand President Edward J. Lynch, P.; Junior Past Grand President William J. Hayes, Jr. P.P.; Grand First Vice-president Fletcher A. Cutler, 1V.P.; Grand Secretary John T. Regan, 2V.P.; Grand Third Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, 3V.P.; Grand Marshal Herbert Dela Rosa, M.; Grand Trustee John S. Ramsay, I.S.; C. George Cuthbertson (Castro 232), O.

in Somerville, Contra Costa County, and decided to fight it out in a fist battle in a ring. January 27 they fought fourteen rounds, surrounded by a large gathering of delighted spectators. A deputy sheriff killed the joy by stopping the fight and arresting both men.

New Year Day there was a great pacing race contested by "Jim Brown," "Longfellow" and "Nimrod" over the Bay District track, San Francisco, that took six heats to decide. A big sum of money was bet on the result. "Jim Brown" won the race. The best time made was 2:19.

A big racing meet at Merced brought owners and drivers from all over the state.

Orlando, Fla., died in 1914. He was a member of the Russian Revolution and filled the positions of postmaster and justice of the peace until he died. He was wealthy but, had not been over two miles away from his store in twenty-five years.

Allen, 12 years old, of Los Angeles County, was a remarkable expert shot with a rifle. The county paid a bounty of five cents for a squirrel and she had presented to the supervisors 1,000 during the past year, for which she was paid $50. At a shooting match New Year's day, the hard-headed competitors had her ruled out.

Mr. Allen, who was a member of the Russian Revolution, with lung trouble, and went to other localities hoping for a change would benefit him. He took many bottles of patent cough medicines and tried numerous remedies his friends advised without deriving any permanent benefit. Finally, in a coughing paroxysm, he expectorated pieces of a hard white substance and this month out came the gold plate. He had, while asleep nearly ten years previously, swallowed his false teeth and did not know it.

Captain Page and Captain McKnight of clipper ship renown had quit the sea to raise ducks on Tomales Bay. They had sold during the past year $2,500 worth of ducks and eggs and were about to increase their cargoes.

Notorious Bandit Convicted.

The Western Hotel at Sacramento was burned January 9. The fire started about 4 p.m. from an explosion in the lamp-room in the basement. Simon B. Conklin and Job Court, well known printers, who worked at night and slept by day, were asleep in their rooms and, with A. Iverson, a transient guest, were burned to death. The loss amounted to $100,000.

Col. Glascock's building and library with the Parker House burned in Oakland January 7. Gyasscock's library was valued at $10,000 and, he being the leading real estate lawyer, this loss of records and documents was irreparable.

The estate of Dutton & Moore in San Francisco burned January 20. Fourteen horses were cremated, and several adjoining stores were destroyed. The losses were $35,000.

The deaf, dumb and blind asylum at Berkeley burned January 17, causing $150,000 loss to the state.

A severe earthquake at 4 a.m. January 24 shook the Sacramento Valley and Northern California, but did no material damage.

Vasquez was tried for murder at San Jose the week of January 5, and on the 9th the jury brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree with the death penalty. His capture and trial had cost the state $30,000. Vasquez had a brother in Monterey County who was trying to raise a fund by subscription to make an appeal. Chavez, a former companion of Vasquez, sent word by mail to a resident of Monterey that he was coming from Mexico to California with a band of outlaws to take revenge. Vasquez was sentenced January 23 by Judge Belden to be hung March 19.

The chickens roosting in a tree in his back yard had been disappearing in such numbers that Sheriff B. K. Thorne of San Andreas, Calaveras County, concluded to watch for the chicken thief at night. He believed that a Chinaman was the acquisitive person. Judge A. H. Coulter, a neighbor, going home from a convivial party, concluded to take a short cut to his home and went through the sheriff's premises. He stopped beneath the roosting tree and struck a match to light his cigar. Just then the sheriff took a shot at the supposed chicken thief. His bullet hit the judge's wrist, fracturing the bones and making a painful wound.

NATIVE SON NEWS

Three hundred enjoyed the banquet which followed the ceremonies. Grand Third Vice-president Thompson was the toastmaster and the following responded to toasts: Grand President Lynch, Grand First Vice-president Cutler, Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington, Judge P. F. Goshoy (Observatory 177).

Past Grands on Speakers' List.
Santa Clara—The twenty-second institution anniversary banquet of Santa Clara 199, November 27, was a most enjoyable affair. President Edward Fellows was the toastmaster, and the speakers included:
Grand Third Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Past Grand Presidents Dr. Charles W. Decker, Lewis F. Byington and Thomas Monahan, County Clerk Harry Mulcrevy of San Francisco, A. Barker, one of the Parlor's organizers. Preparations for the affair were made by a committee composed of Charles Haight, A. Castro, Steve Mender, William Salo, John Walsh.

Hangtown Revived.
Saint Helena—The annual '49 entertainment of Saint Helena 53, November 25 and 26, was a big success. The Native Sons' pavilion was transformed into a typical Hangtown, and all the varied "business houses" of the early-day mining camps were in operation.
Door prizes were awarded each evening, and specialty acts were provided. The numerous patrons had a fine time, and the Parlor's treasury was considerably increased. "Live" committees were in charge of the various details, hence the great success achieved.

Official Visits.
San Leandro—Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge officially visited Estudillo 223, December 16, when a large class of candidates were initiated. A program was presented and a banquet was served. Vincent C. Faria has been elected president for the new term.

Womenfolks Guests.
Merced—Yosemite 24 entertained the womenfolks December 15. The hall was attractively decorated in reminders of the Christmas season.

including a free Progressive whist was played, and refreshments were served. During the evening a program of musical numbers and fancy dancing was presented. In charge of the soireeable was the following committee: J. C. Coganour, D. K. Stoddard, I. H. Reiter, L. J. Schroeder, J. G. B. Hart, W. W. Rodehaver

Santa Was There.
Hayward—An exceptionally good program featured the Christmas high-jinks of Eden 113, December 10. Harry Bradford gave an illustrated talk on the California missions, and there were several vaudeville acts. Santa Claus, impersonated by William T. Knightly, distributed gifts, and there was a banquet. President F. B. Leonard, W. S. Mead, Jack Simpson, O. C. Fink made up the arrangements committee Orphans Entertained.

Sacramento—Sutter Fort 241 had a Christmas tree for several of the younger children of the Sacramento Orphanage, December 17. A member of the Parlor acted as "daddy" for each child during the evening.
The guests were well cared for, each one receiving a gift. Entertainment was provided for their pleasure, and refreshments were served. In charge of the affair was a committee composed of Ted S. Lages (chairman), Everett B. Johnson, Ted Schofer, M. F. Trebilcock, Verne T. Meehan, Lon P. Ferron.

The "Get 'Em Kid" in Colusa County.
Colusa—Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn was accorded an ovation when he visited Colusa 69, December 16. From January 2 to 17 he will conduct a drive for members for the Parlor, and one for Williams 164 from January 17 to 23.

In this city January 30, there will be a joint initiation of the eligibles rounded up, the grand officers exemplifying the ritual. Cohn anticipates excelling the wonderful record made in behalf of Alder Glen 200 at Fort Bragg.

Carrying On.
Oroville—In line with the Order's purpose to perpetuate the state's landmarks, members of Argonaut 8, under the direction of R. J. Strang, have completed the white-washing of the trees at White Washed Trees.

This was a popular stopping-place in the days of the Oroville-Quincy stages. Pioneer John Champion, who kept the roadhouse, saw that the surrounding oak tree trunks were kept whitewashed, and hence the place was accorded the name White Washed Trees.

"Father" Remembered.
Oakland—Fruitvale 252 wound up its 1924 activities with the initiation of a large class of candidates brought into the fold during the "Big 3" campaign. Santa Claus was on hand, too, and remembered all the "boys."
George J. Hans, "father" of the Parlor, has been honored with a life membership, the presentation address on behalf of Fruitvale being made by Irwin Gracier.

Membership Standing Largest Parlors.
San Francisco—Grand Secretary John T. Regan reports the standing of the Subordinate Parlors having a membership of over 400 December 20 as follows, together with their membership figures January 1 1924:

SAN FRANCISCO BULLETIN

FIRST TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILROAD

CHARLES B. TURRILL GAVE AN ADDRESS November 25 before the California Historical Society of San Francisco. His subject was "The First Trans-Continental Railroad Connecting the West with the East." The talk was illustrated with about 100 lantern slides.

Turrill said that California was practically a separate nation, with a civilization and customs of its own. While the people loved California, they still had a longing affection for their old homes, and talked of "going back to the states" after they had gained the fortunes for which all were striving. It was a yearning to connect the new home with the old home that caused the railroad to be built. The idea did not originate here; many had talked of the road, but at last it took Californians to build it—Huntington, Stanford, Crocker, Hopkins and their associates. The speaker paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the "big four" who carried the burden of the undertaking. First and foremost, however, he honored the ability and determination of Theodore Judah, the engineer, who first visioned the possibilities of this iron highway and whose life was sacrificed to the advancement of the undertaking.

A photograph of the scene when Governor Leland Stanford drove the last spike was shown on the screen. Turrill said: "This is what the camera saw that day in 1869. It differs from Tom Hill's well-known painting, which contains the portraits of many prominent citizens who were not present. Some of them had been dead for nine years. I have often wondered why Hill left out the face of Christopher Columbus, and why he forgot George Washington. The omission of Abraham Lincoln from the group is inexplicable, for it was he who signed the bill which made the building of the road possible."

EXHIBIT OF HISTORICAL MATERIAL.

The California Historical Society has appointed a standing exhibit committee consisting of the following: Fred M. DeWitt (chairman), Anson S. Blake, Wells Drury, Miss Elizabeth W. Latham, Charles B. Turrill. It is the purpose of the society to hold quarterly exhibits under the direction of the committee in the rooms of the society, 508 Wells Fargo building, Second and Mission streets, San Francisco.

These exhibits, to which the public will be invited as guests of the society, will cover certain definite phases or periods of California history. It is planned to have the first exhibit, in January, one of Bret Harte material; the second, in April, will be of San Francisco between the years 1837-53, and will be mainly pictorial; and the third, in July, will be an exhibit of documents, especially those pertaining to the earlier history of the state.

BENEFIT GRAND SUCCESS.

The fifteenth annual masquerade of the local Native Sons and Native Daughters December 6 for the benefit of the homeless children was, as usual, a grand success. Edward J. Lynch, Grand President N.S.G.W., led the grand march.

The masquerade, which was held in Exposition Auditorium, opened with a pageant, under the direction of Mrs. May R. Barry, in which 250 children participated.

500 YOUNGSTERS ENTERTAINED.

Over 500 children were guests of South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. at the December 21 Christmas festival. A twenty-five-foot tree was gaily decorated, and Santa Claus, in the person of Julian Dresser, distributed candy and toys to all the guests.

A program was presented, consisting of a kiddies revue directed by the O'Neil sisters, Fred Rasmussen in a Punch-and-Judy show, the Datson sisters in a comedy sketch and several singers of note. Dancing followed the entertainment. In charge of the festival was a committee composed of George Anderson (chairman), William Waack, Fred Fischen, Harry McCarthy, George Nilan.

The Parlor has elected officers for the January-July term, Edmund Torres being selected for president.

DANCE, JANUARY 21.

Olympus Parlor No. 189 N.S.G.W. elected officers for the January-July term December 17, Thomas Flahavan being chosen president. An entertainment followed, which was greatly enjoyed.

Olympus and Fremont Parlor No. 59 N.D.G.W., which have frequently joined forces for successful social affairs, are now arranging for a dance January 21 at Redmen's Hall, 3053 Sixteenth street. Ed Cuadro, Henry Joost and Frank Fahey represent Olympus on the joint arrangements committee.

WORK APPRECIATED.

James Lick Parlor No. 220 N.D.G.W. and Gabriel Parlor No. 139 N.D.G.W. held a joint reception recently and presented May R. Barry with a deputy's regalia, in appreciation for her commendable work as district deputy in the Order. The presentation was made by Mrs. Francis Kenny of James Lick and Gertrude Normile of Gabriel. Refreshments were served, and every one enjoyed a pleasant evening.

ADVANCING

That Los Angeles is steadily advancing as a manufacturing city is evidenced by a recent report of the Chamber of Commerce which, for some time, has been devoting efforts, successfully, to locating factories in the city's metropolitan area. Here are the figures, setting forth the value of manufactured products:

1914	$ 103,458,000
1919	618,772,520
1920	788,652,885
1921	800,926,641
1922	959,806,503
1923	1,250,000,000

When the figures for 1924 are compiled the record of 1923 will, it is believed, be exceeded. A trip through the manufacturing districts will surprise one as to the variety of the products made here. Many of them have national and world-wide distribution, and in all cases the quality compares favorably with products manufactured elsewhere.

more business men and women into Mexico over the Southern Pacific railroad along the low altitudes of the west coast, through the states of Sonora, Sinaloa and Nayarit in Mexico. And on January 31 the Chamber will conduct another excursion of 100 to the Hawaiian Islands on the palatial steamer "City of Los Angeles." Both of these are arranged for the purpose of making trade connections and building up new commerce through the Long Beach Harbor and further cementing the friendships between the city and these countries.

In short, while it is certain there will be the usual new business come to Long Beach this year, it is not the plan of the city and the Chamber of Commerce to sit idly by and wait, but an aggressive policy is to be followed of the "Go Get It" type.

With the new oil wells coming in, to the number of twenty per week in the various nearby oil fields, Long Beach can reasonably expect the oil production during 1925 to hold the level, if not surpass, the yield of 1924.

The outlook for Long Beach from the standpoint of continuation of 1924 business and a greater volume for 1925 in all lines could not be brighter and can hardly be equalled by any other city of the same population in the United States.

The message to all, therefore, from the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce is not merely "watch us grow," but come here and grow with us. Any inquiries addressed to the Chamber of

NEW YEAR WELCOMED.

Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. initiated a candidate December 10 and elected officers, Mrs. Clara Fay being chosen president. Installation has been set for January 28. The Parlor's Thimble Club met at the home of Mrs. Clara Fay December 18 and filled Christmas candy boxes for the children.

Jointly with the Native Sons, the Native Daughters celebrated the passing of 1924 and the advent of 1925 with a New Year Eve party December 31. Dancing was featured, the numbers being interspersed with vocal and instrumental selections, readings, etc. Refreshments were served, and the large crowd had a jolly time.

TO LAUNCH MEMBERSHIP DRIVE.

Beginning right after New Year, Long Beach
Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W., which has been making great strides forward the past six months, will launch a drive for new members. President
Harold Leedom, C. E. Crowell and W. B.
Schweizer have been appointed a committee to investigate the feasibility of placing signs, similar to those in use by the Rotary and other clubs, on the highways leading to Long Beach.

At the December 17 meeting of the Parlor, the present officers were re-elected, Harold Leedom remaining as president. Visitors and speakers of the evening included Grand Trustee John T.
Newell and Deputy Grand President Albert V.
Mayrhofer. W. B. Schweizer is endeavoring to organize a glee club among the Parlor membership. C. E. Crowell's fame as a chef has become city-wide. The Parlor has taken out a membership in the California State Historical Association.

'AT A BOY!

Arthur Brisbane, the well-known writer, recently said: "Japan talks of racial equality.
There is no question of racial equality. Japan can have all of it she wants and for that matter racial superiority, provided she confines it to Japan."

"You recognize the racial equality of the man across the street. But when he says, 'Being your racial equal, I demand the right to break into your house, settle there and marry your daughter,' you reply, 'Try it, and I'll shoot you'."

AN INTERESTING MAGAZINE.

Going away from home to get the news we find in the November Grizzly Bear that Las Positas Parlor N.S.G.W. of this place has subscribed for five copies of that magazine for the use of patients at Arroyo Sanatorium. This is an act which will be greatly appreciated at Arroyo, as The Grizzly Bear, the publication of the Native Sons, is an interesting magazine with a wealth of history, fiction and news of California.

SLENDER SILHOUETTE PREVAILS

AT THE PRESENT WRITING FASHION offers nothing more chic than the semi-tailored frock of flannel, which comes in gay or subdued plaids and every possible kind of stripe from hairline to awning, as well as plain effects. For those who prefer the solid colors, there are all of the soft shades of the season, such as henna, maize, cranberry-red, fuschia and Italian blue. These flannels are so soft in texture that they lend themselves to a marvelous variety of treatments.

When one speaks of flannel and sports wear in the same breath, one must give more than passing attention to the separate sports skirt of flannel, which comes in various smart shades and is receiving the consideration of the most important houses.

The separate skirt is no longer the "stepchild" of the modern wardrobe, for, as a part of the costume, it is completed by the tunic-blouse, sweater or jacket. It commands immediate attention because of its charm and smartness.

Flannel is also chosen for the development of a sports skirt and often follows the mode of circular flares, with contrasting buttons, making narrow side panels. Soft finely woven cashmere is employed also in the development of separate skirts, both the wrap-around and the straight models being worn.

Strictly speaking, the slender silhouette continues to prevail and is expressed in one-piece frocks and three- and two-piece suits, giving the necessary freedom of movement by way of clever flare effects, plaits and godets. Sharing favor with flannel, are kasha, silk crepe and novelty silk, also jersey in both wool and silk.

A word of praise must be said for a new woolen two-tone combination of colorings, woven in tapestry manner, as well as the Scotch fabric with a border that combines the gorgeous tones of autumn leaves and flowers in wonderfully harmonious designs. There are deep reds, browns, greens, blues, brilliant gold tones and the flame colors all in stunning patterns, both small and large.

The cape and frock costume for the woman who can give variety to her sports wardrobe is to be highly recommended. This makes the smartest possible use of plaided kasha cloth or flannel. The dress usually is trimmed with the plaid material and the cape lined with it.

There is much that is novel about sweaters, many of which are fashioned of fine mohair yarn with tightly ribbed hipband, rolled cuffs and high collar. Another interesting design is a round-neck sweater in natural color, resembling a man's khaki shirt. It may be worn with a heavy brown leather belt and a heavy silk crepe-de-chine skirt to match.

For those who prefer knicker suits there are stunning models combining plain and plaid fabrics with smart feminine touches here and there, as well as the more severe types of homespun or English worsted. Among the novelties are tapestry knitted coats, usually made in the three-quarter length and sometimes called the tunic sweaters. These are edged with angora and are worn with scarf and tamoshanter to match. This makes a snappy outfit. A sweater coat of brushed wool is trimmed in a henna jacquard pattern at both bottom and sleeves and is worn with a smart leather girdle.

In spite of the fact that winter is passing, fur and fur adornment absorb the mind. When fur is not needed for warmth, it is most important as a valuable trimming.

A warm garment may be easily slipped off to show the fragile little dress under it, generally made of the heavy corded silks and always finished with fur collar and cuffs. The latest of these garments are longer than those produced early in the season, a more useful length, as the dress beneath is quite covered.

Black gowding, in connection with a bright vivid color, continues to find favor, but the relieving color has changed from the marvelous red, which so wonderfully caught approval with young and old, to a vivid emerald green or the delicious rich French blue. The long close sleeves have turned-back cuffs, and the flat collar gives a good neck finish.

Never has so much attention been paid to the woman of full figure as this season, and the number of designers who cater to her especial needs is constantly increasing. Satin crepe and the clinging fabrics are of course given preference. Soft lustrous velvets also give to the stout figure slenderizing lines. The trimming used includes fur, beading, lace and novel ornament applied in various original and delightful ways.

Speaking of slenderizing the figure, women who want to follow the mode are turning to the various reducing girdles and especially create corsets that take inches and inches from the appearance of one's size. These new creation help to give grace to the form and are a blessing to the woman who keeps up to the minute.

The ensemble suit has been such a success that it is going to be continued through another season. It lends itself to expression in every fabric, therefore there is no reason why its vogue should not go another season.

The most novel of the advance designs seen has the dress of georgette crepe, deeply hemmed with embroidery and the coat of crepe satin trimmed with braid. The ensemble suit finds expression in heavy linens as well as in the silks and satins of approved style.

The blouse, whether of the costume or sports type, is one of the most important features of the mode. There is a cheery note in the models sounded by dashing new combinations of colors. All that is true of the overblouse applies also to the tunic, which is mostly of three-quarter length. A two-toned crepe-de-chine, trimmed with tiny buttons and finished with a self-jabot edged with ribbon or braid, is sure to please. More elaborate are the models of georgette with velvet brocade, and others are of brocade chenille velvet featuring striking black-and-white contrasts.

The smartest millinery now being shown are the satin, suede or leather models. The shapes are usually small, with little upturned brims that provide for contrasting facing to be matched with the trimming.

Cut work is also noted on embroidery in vivid colors of wool or silk.

PASSING OF AGED NATIVE SON RECALLS HISTORY OF EARLY DAYS.

Stephen J. Richardson, in age believed to have been the oldest member of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, died at San Francisco, November 29. He was born at Mission San Gabriel, Los Angeles County, August 3 1831, and for years was affiliated with and the marshal of Mount Tamalpais Parlor No. 64 N.S.G.W. of San Rafael, Marin County.

Deceased was a son of William A. Richardson, an English sea captain who arrived at San Francisco in 1822, and Mary Antonio Martinez, daughter of General Martinez, commander of San Francisco Presidio and at one time owner of 20,000 acres of land in Contra Costa County.

Captain Richardson is credited with being the first English settler in Yerba Buena, now San Francisco. He is said to have erected the first house there, in 1835, and for several years was captain of the port. In the early '40s he went to Marin County, acquired a large tract of land, and built the first house in Sausalito. Richardson's Bay, on the Marin County coast, was named in honor of the captain.

WE THANK YOU.

Under the heading "Current [December] Grizzly Bear a splendid number," the Watsonville, Santa Cruz County, "Pajaronian" of December 9 said:

"The Grizzly Bear, the official organ of the Native Sons and Daughters, publishes in the current edition a fine tribute to the late Judge M. T. Dooling, who was a Past Grand President of the Native Sons. A photo cut of the judge accompanies the article, and it is the most characteristic photo of the judge yet shown in the papers."

THE CALIFORNIA MISSIONS

DR. HERBERT E. BOLTON, HEAD OF the history department of the University of California at Berkeley, in an address on the missions before the Los Angeles City Club, December 12, said: "The great book on California missions, dealing with those frontier institutions from governmental, social and economic standpoints is yet to be written."

"Many volumes have been written about the missions, but, for the most part, the authors have dealt with them either from a religious or a romantic viewpoint."

"The downfall of Spain is one of the favorite themes of Anglo-Saxon histories, yet we cannot truthfully allude to a country as a failure when its religion, language and customs still dominate two-thirds of the Western Hemisphere."

MISSION BELLS

(WALDO M. YORK.)

The dawning here of Christian Light
Was ushered in from out the night
Of hopeless years by rhythmic thrills
Of Mission Bells. The echoing hills,
In soft concordant sounds, replied!
In sympathetic cadence wide,
Responses came from souls that then Awoke to Brotherhood of Men!
The clouds o'er silent ages broke!
The Padres to the Wild Men spoke With Mission Bells! O Mission Bells!
Of valiant deeds your story tells!
Of Junipero Serra, when
He reached in love benighted men!
Of how they listened in that day
Then bowed with him in awe, to pray!
Of how they joined with him to sing
Of Jesus Christ, the Heavenly King!
Old Bells! Peal forth this Christmas Day!
Break other clouds athwart OUR way!
Ring out discordant, senseless Strife!
Ring in a nobler, happier Life.

(Editor's Note—The above lines, which made their appearance December 25, are by Judge Waldo M. York of Los Angeles, father of Superior Judge John M. York, a member of Corona Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W.)

NATIVES IN JOINT AFFAIRS.

Friday, January 9, at Native Sons' Hall, 136 West Seventeenth street, the Los Angeles County Parlors of Native Sons—Los Angeles 45, Ramona 109, Corona 196, Long Beach 239, Pasadena 259 and Vaquero 262—will meet in joint session for the purpose of installation. Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer is making the arrangements.

Mayrhofer has under way the organization of a parlor of Native Sons at San Pedro, which he hopes to institute at an early date. Prospects are good, too, for the organization there of a parlor of Native Daughters.

The evening of February 11, the Native Sons and Native Daughters will present a California program over K.F.I. radio. Sidney Witkowski is arranging the details, and will be glad to hear from any who may care to offer their talent.

TO ANSWER STATE DIVISION CRY.

The best entertainment that Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. has featured in some time was that of December 19. Among the numbers on the attractive program were several songs by Charles Schmalz, a member of the Parlor, and a short address by Grand Trustee John T. Newell. The affair was arranged by the good of the order committee, John M. McCroskey chairman, and "Bill" Coffey had charge of the program.

Ramona has made an appropriation for repairs at the California relics museum at the Pico-Fremont Memorial near Universal City. Officers were elected December 5, John M. McCroskey being chosen president, and Isadore B. Dockweiler delivered an enthusiastic address on the opportunity of the Order of Native Sons. Several candidates were added to the Parlor's membership-roll during December.

Judge Grant Jackson, Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger and Irving Baxter have been named by Ramona a committee to answer the cry of some local disgruntled politicians for state division because the Legislature failed to reapportion the state and give Los Angeles just representation. The Parlor meeting of January 9 will be held at Native Sons' Hall, 136 West Seventeenth street. Ramona expects to soon have a prize winning ball team in the Native Sons' League.

"BEST SHOW EVER" COMING.

The Christmas jinks of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. December 18 was a delightful affair, and the big crowd which gathered in Native Sons' Hall spent a most pleasant evening. A big Christmas tree, gaily decorated and electrically lighted, added to the attractiveness of the decorations. Dancing was in order all evening, and between the dance numbers "josh" presents were distributed to every person in attendance, which included women, men and children. Refreshments in keeping with the holiday season were served throughout the evening. The good of the order committee was in charge of the affair, the main details being looked after by Chairman Harry Pendell, Sidney Witkowski, Charles Lloyd, Richard Fryer, William Newell.

A real circus, with all the accompaniments, is the main attraction on Los Angeles' January program. It will hold forth the 29th, 30th and 31st, at a place to be announced later. Harry Pendell, Sidney Witkowski and Charley Lloyd are the managers, and promise the "best show ever." A class of candidates will be initiated the 22nd, refreshments following the ceremonies. At the election of officers Ronald M. Ross was chosen president of the Parlor.

INTERESTING PROGRAM.

At the December 2 meeting of the Historical Society of California, Dr. Rockwell D. Hunt president, P. J. Cooney read a paper on "Los Angeles During the Civil War," and F. Rolfe gave "A Sketch of the Life of R. B. Taylor: The Story of the Founding of Corona, Riverside County."

MRS. SANTA WAS THERE.

At the first meeting of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. in its new home, the Catholic Women's Clubhouse, 927 South Menlo avenue, December 5, three candidates were initiated. The dance committee reported the November function a great success, both socially and financially.

The Parlor's house-warming party of December 12, under the supervision of Grace Norton, was largely attended and a wonderful success. A beautiful Christmas tree, gaily decorated with colored electric lights, adorned the stage, and from it Mrs. Santa Claus, in the person of Grace C. Yarwood, distributed numerous presents. The tree was donated by Ida Miller, and the electric lights were contributed by Lucille Duncan. A splendid orchestra furnished dance music, and refreshments were served.

At its December 19 meeting, Los Angeles initiated four additional candidates. Splendid talks were given by Annie L. Adair, Grace Yarwood and Secretary Mary K. Corcoran, the latter concluding with a selection, "Hullo." President Marvel Thomas, as a birthday remembrance, was presented a rose-bowl, and in responding wished all a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

ATTENDANCE ON INCREASE.

Corona Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. added three names to its membership-roster during December. Many applications are on file, and there will be a class initiation January 15. There has been a gratifying increase in attendance at the meetings since the Parlor moved to its new quarters in the Catholic Women's Clubhouse.

Owing to physical disabilities, William M. Kennedy was forced to resign as financial secretary, and the Parlor regretfully accepted the resignation. At the election of officers, Arthur C. Davis was chosen president. The meeting of December 18 was adjourned early and the members of Corona in a body attended the Christmas party of Los Angeles Parlor.

INVITATIONAL DANCE.

Pasadena Parlor No. 259 N.S.G.W. will change its meeting-place in January to the Y. M. C. A., where the members will have the use of the gymnasium, swimming pool and clubrooms. Meetings will, as usual, be held every Friday night. A committee consisting of Herbert C. Emery, Secretary Vincent Savory, Frank M. Booth and President George Cavell made the arrangements.

At the December 19 meeting the present officers were re-elected, George Cavell remaining as president. Herbert Emery heads a committee of the Parlor which is arranging for an invitational dance at the Lamanda Park clubhouse the latter part of January. Several candidates, rounded up by Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, will be initiated during January.

MILLIONS FOR BUILDINGS.

When the record for 1924 is finally tabulated, Los Angeles City will be shown to have jumped to fourth place among the country's cities in value of building permits, being surpassed only by New York, Chicago and Detroit.

The year's building-permit figures on December 20 had reached $147,365,366, and will run over $150,000,000 for the year. March was the biggest and April the smallest month, the permits being, respectively, $17,279,758 and $8,789,932. There is every promise that the building activity will continue throughout 1925.

"BABY" GROWS.

The "baby" Native Son Parlor, Vaquero No. 262, is growing, initiations during December bringing the membership well over the 70-mark. A class of candidates were initiated December 6, Grand Trustee John T. Newell presiding as president during the ritual rendition. Milton Wicks, Gus Alvarez, M. J. Castillo and J. Botiller have been appointed by President Edward E. Ayers to represent the Parlor on the joint Homeless Children Committee.

Although the night was a stormy one, there was a good attendance at the Parlor's "old timers" dance December 16. The good of the order committee, headed by Sid. Neighbours, has an attractive entertainment program mapped out. January 4, Vaquero members will be the guests of Walter Temple at his Puente ranch; several candidates will be initiated at that time.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Mrs. Winona Spear, wife of C. Whitney Spear (Ramona N.S.), passed away November 26 at the age of 24.

Dr. John L. Dryer, father of George W. Dryer (Ramona N.S.), died November 30 at Santa Ana, Orange County, at the age of 79.

Mrs. Katherine A. Austin, mother of Mrs. Carrie Lenhouse (Long Beach N.D.), passed away at San Pedro, December 14, at the age of 78. She had been a resident of California for sixty-eight years, coming from Illinois.

Richard H. Fullaway, father of Richard M. Fullaway (Ramona N.S.), died December 15 at the age of 60.

Velma, the young daughter of Frank Pursell (Ramona N.S.), passed away December 18 in Arizona.

Miss Grace S. Stoermer (Los Angeles N.D.) spent the last week of the year in San Francisco. A native son recently arrived at the Puente home of George D. Ferrero (Los Angeles N.S.). Paul F. Leltner (Ramona N.S.) has gone to Arroyo Grande, San Luis Obispo County, to reside.

William J. Variel (Ramona N.S.) and wife recently returned from an extended trip through France.

W. H. Crofton (Sacramento N.S.) of Sacramento was among last month's arrivals and may remain here.

Colonel Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel (Bay City N.S.) and Charles L. McEnerney (James Lick N.S.) were among last month's visitors from San Francisco.

Julius M. Plath (Ramona N.S.) and wife (Los Angeles N.D.) have returned home after several months' absence, during which they toured many states and Canada.

In honor of his birthday anniversary, Township Justice Louis P. Russill (Ramona N.S.) was the honor guest at a dinner party given by Miss Frances L. Broszmer, November 22. During the evening he was presented by Herman C. Lichtenberger with a French sword which was used in the war with Mexico in 1846 by a soldier of fortune who brought it to this country.

it was slowly overtaking me, for I could feel the draft from it, but it was too late to try to get back to the fire break, and besides there was that fellow up the gulch, so I kept on going and fighting all the harder. 'Well, old man,' I gasped, as the smoke closed down on me, 'I guess you've fought your last fire for Uncle Sam,'—and then, all of a sudden, I stumbled onto a pool of water. It wasn't more than a few feet across and two feet deep, but it looked as big as the Pacific Ocean to me right then. I soused in it until I was soaked to the skin from head to foot, and was busy clearing away the brush hanging over the pool when all hell busted.

"Down into the water I went, clean under, and held my breath. No sea lion had anything on me then. The flames roared and swirled over and around me. Burning branches and sticks fell so thick in the water that they turned it warm. Finally I just had to come up for air. I stuck my face above water, pressed my wet bandanna tightly over my nose and mouth and tried to sneak in a few short breaths, but there was nothing but gas and flames.

"I don't remember much after that—only that the fire was gone and that it was awful smoky and the water cold. For a long time I lay in the pool mighty groggy, but finally I pulled myself together and crawled up the side hill through the smouldering brush and hot ashes and somehow staggered down the trail into camp. But you bet I ain't never going to forget those twenty minutes if I live to be a hundred. You can call it Providence or anything you like, but I'm telling you straight, for I looked the country over afterwards,—that was the only bit of water in the whole of Box Canyon.

"The 'straw boss'? Oh, he got out all right—found a deer trail and was climbing the hill when he saw the fire coming, so beat it for a burned-over area and came through without a scratch. Well, good night, I'm going to turn in and dream about a wet winter. Don't forget to feed Buck and Pete, and, say, tomorrow put a big pot of pork and beans on to cook and when they're done wake me up."

"There is in friendship something of all relations, and something above them all. It is the golden thread that ties the hearts of all the world."—John Evelyn.

event and thereby render possible the printing of the rare and rich story.

What kind of cooks did the adventure develop? There were no women along to teach the culinary art. Did the boys take lessons from their mothers before they left? Did they take turn-about over the pots and skillets? How often did they burn their fingers and the foods and utter "cuss" words? Amos Josselyn was secretary, but who was president? Forty-year-old Hobbie?

Isn't it strange that our historian, who knew so much about other details of the lives of these men for several years after 1849, did not speak of the treatment yielded by the gold mines? Perhaps the secret was too well guarded against his curiosity.

and cease their efforts to Japanize the Western states, they could accomplish much more real good in this country.

In the "Knocks and Boosts" column of the San Francisco "Examiner" recently, Jos. E. Reardon of the Market Street Railway Company started off with: "The only thing wrong with the spirit of San Francisco is that not enough people have it."

It is doubtful if Reardon himself has much of it, for he then proceeded to "knock" another city of the state. But little is to be accomplished by "knocking" the "other place." If one cannot "boost," he had best say nothing.

Quite a little storm arose in Washington official circles last month, when Representative Britten of Illinois introduced in the Federal Congress a resolution authorizing the President to call a conference of the White nations bordering the Pacific. While Japan was not mentioned in the resolution, its friends and agents, along with the pacifists, immediately started a howling sob-song.

The course of Japan itself at the recent Geneva assembly of the League of Nations, the publicly-expressed opinions of United States naval authorities and the published opinions of "observers" for France and England are all indicative that Japan is preparing for war. Representative Britten has made a start on the proper course, and should not desist. A "watch and prepare" policy should supersede the "watch and pray" one predominating at the White House.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson has proposed in the National Congress an amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the election of the president and the vice-president by direct vote, a majority of the people.

For the country's welfare, the legislation should have the favorable consideration of the Congress and the several states, and it has been, in reality, a government "of the people, for the people, by the people," the proposed amendment will be in force for the next presidential election.

The greatest vote in the history of California was polled at the November general election. For once, the majority opinion was expressed, 1,336,598 out of the 1,822,357 registered voters having voted. That speaks well for California and its citizens.

*Our Dividend Record: Over 30 Years

What is a Good Yield?

BEFORE you invest your money in any business, it is your right to know just what you are to receive in exchange. Make it a hard-headed business proposition; what do you get out of it?

There are, chiefly, three things that any person or organization may offer in exchange for the use of your money:

- 1—Safety
- 2—Marketability
- 3—Dividends or Interest

And remember this: the more of numbers 1 and 2 on this list that can be offered, the less of number 3 that will HAVE to be paid.

Whenever you are approached regarding any proposition that promises an unusually high yield, examine it to see what is lacking in safety or marketability—especially safety. For you can be sure of one thing—no successful business will pay excessive interest or dividend rates unless it is obliged to. If it did, it would not long be a successful business.

Cautious investors will find safety, marketability and yield ideally proportioned in the Preferred Stock of Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation.

W. B. Shearer

THE LIMITATION OF ARMS TREATY: The United States, the British empire and Japan agree that the status quo at the time of the signing of the present treaty, with regard to fortifications and naval bases, shall be maintained in their respective territories and possessions. The party made at Cleveland: "We pledge ourselves to fully maintain the navy to the treaty, 5-5-3."

The late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt wrote on the White House, October 8, 1909, when Standard Oil, Harriman interests and others of their powers challenged. Harriman's answer was, that whenever it was necessary he would buy a sufficient number of senators, congressmen and judiciary. Have we changed? Japan's attitude and activities on the spirit of the treaty, as set forth in the "Diplomatic Review," a quasi-official organ of Japan, are, translated into English, in part as follows:

"We earnestly desire to maintain permanent peace with America. However, that peace must be on a basis of equality, friendly sentiment and justice. That means that our demand upon America must include the following points: "First—Immediate repeal of the recent Japanese exclusion law. Also, as the gentlemen's agreement was contrary to the demands of the Japanese people, we cannot consent to its restoration in its old form.

"Second—The humane admission of Japanese to America.

"Third—Naturalization of Japanese on the same conditions as other aliens.

"Fourth—According Japanese residents the same legal rights and treatments as other aliens.

"Fifth—Arousing world opinion by literature and lectures, and preparing for war."

A professor of international law, before the diversity of Tokio in a lecture, says: "The Americans are powerless to prevent the Imperial Japanese Government from asserting its rights whenever it is ready to assert them."

Admiral Takarabe has stated: "While I am alive and hold the portfolio of the navy, none shall interfere in the affairs of the navy. I shoulder the entire heavy responsibility for the defense of the empire. I am opposed to postponement and desire to maintain what is necessary for national defense."

Property value in the United States is over 20,000,000,000. The people cry for lower taxes, yet we insure everything but our national security. A national defense policy, the smallest increase of taxes, will make us secure and war impossible. We are fools or knaves!

The Limitation of Arms Treaty does not, in any way, obligate or deny us the right to build adequate naval base on the Pacific Coast. The defense of this nation demands that we build and maintain adequate naval bases, both on this coast and at Hawaii.

The bases from which the fleet operates depend upon naval strategy and policy, which must be determined beforehand, in order that untimely changes may not be demanded when the nation is committed to a definite plan—when every move, well as all equipment and supplies, would become known and subject to delay and destruction.

War on the sea is conducted by floating naval forces, but they draw their sustenance from land bases. Without bases, a fleet cannot exist, and without fuel at bases ships are worthless.

BRITISH POLICY.

The British naval estimate contains appropriations for the construction of fuel storage at sixteen naval bases. They are spending close to $36,000,000, which does not include oil in storage.

The main fighting strength of the British navy is being diverted to the Mediterranean, just as the bulk of the American naval power is located on the Pacific. British command of the Mediterranean is established not only by the number and power of its ships, but by the chain of strategic positions—Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus and Port Said. From Malta to Singapore is a run of 6,000 miles. The British naval strategists view the necessity of the Singapore base. They realize the danger zone is in the Pacific, and without the Singapore base the stronger ships of their navy would be debarred from the Pacific

W. D. Shearer, who contributes the accompanying article to The Grizzly Bear, is a former officer of the United States Navy, and a world-renowned authority on sea fighting, warship construction and the condition and needs of the United States Navy.

He recently gained fame by his hard, though unsuccessful, fight to save from wanton destruction the battleship "Washington," intended to have been the pride of the navy and the first line of defense against an enemy of the Pacific that seeks the conquest of California.

Shearer has embarked upon a permanent fight to save the navy from complete emasculation and demoralization at the behest of this country's enemies, who have cleverly succeeded in putting to sleep the officials at Washington who should be on guard. He seeks, and should have, the hearty support of every citizen of California and the Great West.—Editor.

in war time,—for the same reason that would prevent the American battle fleet making a war cruise to the Philippines.

The Nelson and Hood class of ships could not be docked in the Pacific unless drydocks are built. It is that class of ships that could only match the Japanese ships of the Negato and Mutsu class.

The British are free to further develop Hong Kong, which already is well fortified, with a complete repair yard, six drydocks and an oil fuel depot.

Singapore, which is permitted under the Washington agreement, is well fortified; oil and coal fuel depot, repair facilities, five drydocks. One very large drydock is proposed, to take 35,000-ton ships.

JAPANESE POLICY.

The Japanese do not consider the Washington conference solves the problem of peace. Authority in Japan says, "We must arm ourselves properly. It is unwise to trust our national security to the good-will of others." The budget, approximately 900,000,000 yen, is asked for. Japan gets as much for the yen as we do for the dollar.

W. B. SHEARER

Admiral Takarabe has stated, "While I am alive and hold the portfolio of the navy, none shall interfere in the affairs of the navy. I shoulder the entire heavy responsibility for the defense of the empire. I am opposed to postponement and desire to maintain what is necessary for national defense."

Admiral Takarabe won over all opposition. There was no slacking for want of funds. The Japanese navy is preparing an oil supply which will make it independent in the event of war.

A company acting for the navy is opening new oil and oil soil regions in Manchuria and all parts of the empire. Japanese activities on naval bases and in all preparedness are going ahead with feverish rapidity. Japan has six known naval bases, fully equipped. Yokosuka to Manila is 1,741 miles, to Guam 1,350 miles. Nagasaki to Manila 1,309, to Guam 1,133 miles. Boko, a Japanese base, is 200 miles from Luzon and 680 miles from Manila. Japan today commands the Pacific Ocean, other than our coast or the radius of action of our fleet.

UNITED STATES.

The general opinion of the War College is, that the lack of naval bases on the Pacific is a serious condition that must be met; that we cannot handle a battle fleet in the Pacific in time of war. Lack of bases, fully equipped, is the reason. To handle the battle fleet of capital ships it will be necessary to dock the ships on the Atlantic side and use the Panama Canal Zone as our operating base. Six to seven hundred ships for supplies and fuel would be necessary to maintain the fleet for operations overseas.

Pearl Harbor could only be used as a repair base, in its present unfinished condition. Floating drydocks will have to be towed to Hawaii, even if used as advance or repair base.

If San Francisco Harbor be used, it would be necessary to take over private shipyards, docks and mercantile fuel supply, and to equip and prepare as much as possible an emergency base.

I repeat, there is not one naval base on the Pacific to accommodate the entire fleet in every respect.

Panama remains the only operating base for the fleet. That means the Panama Canal is vital to the defense of the Pacific and the nation.

I quote from the letter of the Secretary of the Navy, May 21, 1924: "The total supply of oil on hand March 31, 1924, is less than 10 percent of the requirements of the navy for one year under war conditions. The approved policy of the Navy Department requires 48,059,200 barrels of reserve storage for fuel oil and other petroleum products located at various strategic points. It will take $71,955,000 to construct tankage to take care of royalty oil as produced, where oil cannot be kept in the ground in our oil reserves."

May 8, 1924, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy's statement said: "We have no operating bases in the Pacific that are adequate. The Atlantic bases are better, but are not nearly all adequate. As regards petroleum reserves, we have a deficiency of 68 percent in reserves required in the Pacific; 32 percent of the necessary reserve is on hand. In a Pacific war the navy will use about 70,000,000 barrels during the first year of war."

You know, or should know, the one stumbling block against a modern naval base is a local political fight to save Mare Island for Vallejo. Mare Island is a navy yard, seventy years old, many miles up a channel, and not prepared to handle capital ships. If you taxed the capacity at Mare Island, you could not accommodate ten ships.

Open navigation, not dependent on tides and capable of serving the entire fleet in every respect to include all existing naval activities, is what constitutes a naval base. A fleet, to live, must draw sustenance from bases. The periodic return of units of the fleet to the bases is inevitable. The service rendered by the bases must be highly efficient, as the issue of the sea campaign may depend upon the complete readiness of the fleet to keep the sea.

The nation should not be allowed to rest secure in the belief that an adequate naval defense is had in vessels only, even though the navy be a well-rounded one. But it should know that, without adequate bases, the fleet cannot live.

STARTLING FACTS.

Our air defense is even worse.

Rating France 100 percent, that country will spend this year 802,000,000 francs.

Great Britain is 58 percent, and is spending 19,322,000 pounds.

Italy, 43 percent, is spending 300,000,000 lire, with 200,000,000 lire additional available.

Japan, at the rate of manufacturing and training, will soon equal France.

Our total appropriation is $27,025,000. We stand 16 percent in the air, and not one air craft carrier. In the coming maneuvers off Hawaii, you should know that the flying machines for those maneuvers will be taken from the mainland of this country and returned after the maneuvers are held. Which means that Hawaii and Pearl Harbor will be defended only during this show.

AMERICANS HOODWINKED.

It is only the American people that are being fooled; other powers are at all times advised

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

JUBILEE

THIS IS CALIFORNIA'S DIAMOND-JUBILEE year. Admission Day, September 9, the state will be seventy-five years of age, having been admitted into the Sisterhood of States, without having served an apprenticeship as a territory, September 9, 1850.

California is young, compared with some of the other states, but it has made greater progress than any of them, and its contributions to the wealth of the nation have far exceeded the fondest dreams of its sponsors when it knocked at the door of the family of states for admission as a full-fledged member thereof.

The state's seventy-fifth birthday anniversary is to be fittingly observed in San Francisco, where the news from Washington of California's success in seeking statehood, was first received in the state. The celebration, arrangements for which are already well under way, will be of such magnitude and grandeur as to attract the attention of the whole world.

This celebration will be combined with the observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, whose destiny is linked with the fate of California and whose inward pulse beats so responsive to the heart of the commonwealth.

The Order is the outgrowth of an assemblage of native Californians in San Francisco, arranged for by General A. M. Winn, a Pioneer from Kentucky, to participate in the celebration of the ninety-ninth anniversary of American independence, July 5, 1875, the Fourth of July being a Sunday. Called together again, July 11 of that same year, by General Winn, the natives enrolled their names in a fraternal society which has grown into a state-wide organization of numbers and influence, and whose foundation-stone is Loyalty, to nation and state, in times of peace as well as in times of war.

To stress the importance of California's romantic and resourceful history, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Will C. Wood proposes that during the year the public-school students be instructed in that history, particularly from the date of American occupation. It is well, but the study of the state's history in every school supported in whole or in part by California dollars should not cease with the close of the diamond-jubilee year, but should be continued regularly thereafter.

U. S. Webb, Attorney-General of California, is again commended, this time for requesting the district attorneys of the state to enforce the Alien Land Law. Webb says that inasmuch as "the legality of every phase of the law has been upheld by the State Supreme Court, there is no excuse for the law being violated longer."

If the Attorney-General's request be heeded, hundreds of acres of Jap owned or controlled land will be escheated to California, and the "peaceful invasion" of California seriously interfered with. We've had an extended series of "excuses" and "compromises," let's now have an extended campaign of Alien Land Law enforcements, directed against both the white- and the yellow-Japs.

As was expected, the California Railroad Commission has granted the Southern California Telephone Company a substantial increase in telephone rates for Los Angeles City. An attempt is to be made to have the findings reviewed.

They should be, and any increase in rates refused until the company furnishes a service commensurate with the rates now in force. The Southern Company is simply a part of the Pacific trust, and the same policy prevails—inferior service at excessive rates.

The Japs have no intention of obeying the California Alien Land Law, if they can find any possible way to evade it.

In their latest scheme, they are being aided by whites who are more interested in accumulating yellow-dollars than in the welfare of the state. In fact, were it not for those disloyal whites who have aided and encouraged the Japs to defy the law, the yellow-menace today would not be so menacing.

The yellow- and white-Japs are now forming partnerships, the latter owning the land and the former farming it. This is but another deliberate attempt at the law's evasion, and the evaders should be rounded up and the law's extreme penalty exacted of them.

In a letter to the editor dated December 14, Miss Catherine E. Gloster of Alturas, Modoc County, Grand President of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, said:

"I want to express my hearty approval of your opinion in re naturalization of Japanese, as expressed in your letter to the 'Forum,' published in The Grizzly Bear for December."

By the publication of false tales regarding this state in the Eastern, Middle Western and Southern states, a deliberate and systematic effort is being made to damage California. The purpose, probably, is to stop the flood of tourists and homeseekers headed for the Land of Sunshine, Fruits and Flowers.

Let the detractors say their worst, for the more they howl the more will California benefit. Most likely many of the false tales originated right here in this state, in the columns of those narrow-minded newspapers which delight in enlarging upon the misfortune of any other section than their own. They apparently fail to realize that a "knock" directed against any one section of California harms the whole state.

The most pleasing bit of news that has come out of Washington, D. C., in some time was the recent announcement that Secretary of State Hughes would retire from the cabinet March 4.

The Japs no doubt received the news with regret, but they should be cheered by the knowledge that Hughes is their friend and that, had Congress been swayed by his opinions, their "peaceful penetration" of California would not have been interfered with.

Two members of the California Legislature—Senators Sanborn Young and Harry Chamberlain—traveling fifty-one miles an hour on the highway in Yuba County were stopped by an officer, but not arrested because a foolish provision of law exempts legislators from arrest during a session of the Legislature.

The chief reason for the growing general disrespect for all law is the fact that lawmakers and law-enforcers set the laws at naught whenever it serves their pleasure or convenience to do so. A citizen who, himself, will not respect and obey the law lacks the first and most important qualification for a lawmaker or law-enforcer.

Representative Stalker of New York has before the National House of Representatives a bill to make prison sentence mandatory upon the third conviction of violation of the prohibition laws.

WHAT DO WE PLANT

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
We plant the ship, which will cross the sea.
We plant the mast to carry the sails;
We plant the planks to withstand the gales—
The keel, the keelson, the beam, the knee;
We plant the ship when we plant the tree.

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
We plant the houses, for you and me.
We plant the rafters, the shingles, the floors;
We plant the studding, the lath, the doors,
The beams and siding, all parts that be;
We plant the house when we plant the tree.

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
A thousand things that we daily see.
We plant the spire that out-towers the crag;
We plant the staff for our country's flag;
We plant the shade, from the hot sun free;
We plant all these when we plant the tree.

WHOLE NO. 214

A press dispatch says President Coolidge is opposed to such "excess punishment."

The President probably fears that, if jail sentences be meted out, there will be a marked dearth of national, state, county, city and township officials throughout the country. For the good of the United States, however, such a law as proposed should be passed and rigidly enforced.

The Tax Relief Association of California, with headquarters in Los Angeles, proposes an amendment to the State Constitution which "will exempt from taxation $2,000 worth of improvements on land to each individual taxpayer and will exempt all personal property from ordinary taxation."

The association's title is a misnomer, in that the tax-burden lifted from the shoulders of some citizens would be shifted to those of others, for the necessary taxes to meet governmental costs must be provided from some source.

As a matter of justice, no person or organization should be tax exempt. It is because of the numerous exemption provisions now on the statute-books, and which should be repealed that the tax-burden is onerous to many, and particularly the small property-owner. An equitable distribution of taxes among property-owners of every nature would be fair to all and would result in no just cause for complaint from anyone.

The first act of the California Legislature was to approve the proposed child-labor amendment to the Federal Constitution. In the Senate, the vote was thirty-six ayes and three noes, and the Assembly, sixty-nine ayes and nine noes.

A resolution is now before the Legislature, and will come up for consideration February 25, memorializing Congress to exclude the "children of agriculturists" in the enforcement of the amendment.

The Legislature should vote down this resolution, for there is no reason why the "children of agriculturists" or any other particular class should be singled out for exemption. Are the Japs back of this resolution? They work only their children, but their wives, on the farms, and so would be the ones especially benefited if the "children of agriculturists" be exempted.

The death January 5 in San Francisco of M. Russell J. Wilson recalled the strenuous times of the Vigilante days. She was the daughter James King of William, who arrived in California, November 10, 1848.

King began his career in this state in the Sierras, later going to San Francisco where, (Continued on Page 45)

COPPER SAVES 1924 RECORD

THE VALUE OF THE GOLD, SILVER, copper, lead and zinc produced in California in 1924, as estimated for the Federal Department of the Interior by J. M. Hill of the Geological Survey, amounted to $22,639,000, an increase of $1,519,000 over the value for 1923. The increase is due entirely to the much greater production of copper, for the output of every other metal was less than in 1923.

The gold produced in 1924 is estimated at 7,660 ounces, valued at $12,973,000, as compared with 6,172,310 ounces, valued at $13,379,331, in 1923. The production of gold by dredges apparently declined about 25 percent, other forms of placer mining were less productive because of the severe drought, but the deep mines increased their output, particularly those of Inyo, Nevada and Sierra Counties.

The silver produced in 1924 is estimated at 138,000 fine ounces, valued at $2,225,000, compared with 3,559,443 ounces, valued at $918,743, in 1923.

The copper mines, which were particularly active in 1924, produced 53,330,000 pounds of copper, valued at $6,880,000, as compared with 3,17,759 pounds, valued at $4,162,711, in 1923. The great increase was due largely to the Inyo and Calaveras Copper companies, both of which were operated through the whole of 1924 after beginning production late in 1923. The production of lead in 1924 is estimated at 160,000 pounds, valued at $412,000, as compared with 9,549,680 pounds, valued at $668,478, in 1923. All the lead mines, which are in the northern part of the state, were working on short power.

California again became a producer of zinc in 1924 with the reopening of the Bully Hill mines at Winthrop, Shasta County. The zinc content of ore mined in 1924 is estimated at 180,000 pounds, valued at $149,000. No zinc was produced in 1923.

Changes Name—The San Francisco Savings and Loan Society, incorporated in 1868 and one of the oldest banks in California, has changed name to The San Francisco Bank. Its assets December 31, 1924, were $96,917,170.69.

Southernmost City's Progress—In 1909 San Diego City's bank clearings totaled $51,889,000; in 1924 they footed $557,815,000, which was $9,276,872 more than the previous year, 1923. The building permits, in 1909, were valued at $625,000, and those of last year had a valuation of $14,679,000.

STATE ATTORNEY-GENERAL COMMENDED

ONE OF THE LARGEST AND MOST ENTHUSIASTIC gatherings of Los Angeles Native Sons was that of January 9 at Native Sons' Building, 134 West Seventeenth street, when members of all the local Parlor—Los Angeles No. 45, Ramona No. 109, Corona No. 196 and Vaquero No. 262—gathered to witness and participate in the installation of officers. D.D.G.P. Ronald M. Ross was the installing officer, and the following were inducted into the office of president of their respective Parlor: Ronald M. Ross, Los Angeles; John M. McCroskey, Ramona; Arthur C. Davis, Corona; Edward E. Ayers, Vaquero.

Following there was a discussion of matters in which the Order of Native Sons is particularly concerned, among the many speakers being Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Chancellor K. Grady (a San Francisco visitor from Pacific 10) and Past Grand President William I. Traeger (Sheriff "Bill"). As a result of the discussions it was the unanimous opinion of the assemblage, and motions prevailed accordingly, that the presidents of the Parlor should form a joint emergency committee for quick action on important matters, that a joint committee be named to attend the Los Angeles County Pioneer Society meeting and oppose a resolution, submitted there, favoring the division of the State of California, and that a joint committee compile a statement commending State Attorney-General U. S. Webb for his defense of the California Alien Land Law and to urge the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors to supply the district attorney with adequate funds to hunt out and prosecute the numerous violators and evaders of that law in Los Angeles County.

RULED OUT.

In compliance with the meeting's wishes, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, John V. Scott and Joseph A. Adair Sr. attended the Pioneer Society meeting January 13, when the state-division resolution,—presented by Joseph Mesmer, disgruntled because the State Legislature has dealt unjustly with the southern portion of the state in the matter of legislative reapportionment,—was billed to come up for action.

They were primed to present facts that any loyal resident of California would heed, but there was no necessity, for the president ruled the resolution out of order, and Mesmer, if he desires to continue his state-division activities will have to look somewhere else for support. Incidentally, an organization such as the Pioneer Society should provide in its bylaws that no one favoring a division of California may affiliate, for no person can consistently be a state-divisionist and loyal to the state.

THE ALIEN LAND LAW.

Also, in compliance with the assemblage's wishes, the committee named to consider the Alien Land Law's defense and enforcement—Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, representing Ramona Parlor No. 109 (chairman), Grand Trustee John T. Newell, representing Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, William M. Kennedy, representing Corona Parlor No. 196 and Sidney W. Neighbours, representing Vaquero Parlor No. 262—has issued the following statement:

"To the officers and members of all Parlor of Native Sons of the Golden West of the City of Los Angeles: We, the undersigned, committee representing the several Parlor of Native Sons of Los Angeles, respectfully submit the following statement concerning the successful conclusion of all matters which have been pending before the courts of our state and nation covering the question of constitutionality of the Alien Land Law and kindred subjects, and we recommend that a copy of this statement be recorded in the minutes of each Parlor, that a copy be sent to the Board of Grand Officers, that a copy be forwarded Attorney-General U. S. Webb, and that a copy be given to The Grizzly Bear for publication:

"In a democracy, the laws on the statute-books are the will of a sovereign people, represent their sentiments, and are the standards under which they elect to live. To all executive officers, they are mandates. He who wholeheartedly secures their enforcement is of the people, and commands their confidence, support and appreciation. Every one deserving of governmental protection, construes laws in the light of their evident intent. To search for means of evading a law, demonstrates unfitness for citizenship. An organization formed for such evasion is branded with the mark of Cain. When such an organization is composed of aliens who are present by the courtesy of a treaty, it is a menace to our institutions.

"Therefore, we, Native Sons of the Golden West, pledged to pass on to our descendants the priceless heritage of our fathers, desire to formally and with all earnestness of which we are capable express to State Attorney-General U. S. Webb our appreciation of his services in upholding the law framed to keep California what it must always be, a White Man's state. His successful and brilliant presentation of the laws of California to the courts of our state and nation have added lustre to his career as a public official and we are proud of his achievements." C.M.H.

SAN PEDRO NATIVES ORGANIZING.

Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer of the Native Sons has had such flattering success in San Pedro that a parlor of the Order will be instituted there about the middle of February with a minimum of 100 charter members.

The institution ceremonies will be conducted by the grand officers, and it is most likely that they will be held in Sepulveda Park at White's Point. A typical California barbecue will be spread, and all Native Sons will be invited. The name selected for the new parlor will probably be that of some Spanish-California family identified with San Pedro's history.

A parlor of Native Daughters, too, will be instituted at the Harbor City in March, according to D.D.G.P. Carrie Lenhouse, who has the matter in charge. Grand President Catherine E. Gloster of Alturas will direct the ceremonies.

HISTORY RADIOED.

January 20, under the auspices of the State Board of Education, which every Tuesday presents a radio history program for the education and edification of the school children, Miss Grace S. Stoermer, Past Grand President N.D.G.W., delivered an address on the subject, "Gold Discovery at Coloma."

She was followed by John Steven McGroarty, whose subject was "The California Argonauts." In the course of his address he took occasion to call the children's attention to the history and landmarks work being engaged in by the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters, and advised those born in California to affiliate with the Orders when they arrived at the proper age.

PEACE ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED.

The seventy-eighth anniversary of the United States-Mexican peace treaty, which gave California to this country, was observed by the California History and Landmarks Club at the Pico-Fremont Memorial Museum, Universal City, January 13.

Biographical sketches of Lieutenant-Colonel John C. Fremont, Major Pearson B. Reading, Major William H. Russell and Major Louis McLane Jr. were presented by Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes, Mrs. W. W. Foulke, Mrs. Glen R. Strickland and Mrs. Kingsley Pease, respectively.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY PROGRAM.

At the January 6 gathering of the Historical Society of Southern California, Dr. Rockwell D. Hunt presiding, the following program was presented:

"Los Angeles During the Civil War," P. J. Cooney; "The Presidio as a Frontier Institution," Professor Rolland A. Vandegrift.

PLANS HISTORY PROGRAM.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. is planning many delightful social functions, including several dances, one of which will probably be a masquerade. President Ronald M. Ross is always assured such affairs will be a success when in charge of the good of the order committee, Sid Witkowski, Harry Pendell, Charles Lloyd, etc.

The Parlor took the lead in organizing a baseball team, and now a league composed of teams from the other Los Angeles County Parlors is a near-certainty. Los Angeles has a splendid team, which will continue to render an excellent account of itself in diamond battles. Smith, Bell, H. and J. Leuschner and Stodel, members of the team, want all who would like to try out to come forward.

Los Angeles is planning an historical program for the near-future, with such prominent speakers as Dr. Rockwell D. Hunt, Dr. David K. Bjork and John Steven McGroarty. Instructors, as well as college and school students, interested in CALIFORNIA'S CONTRIBUTION TO NATION'S LUXURIES, NECESSITIES.

The great extent to which California contributes to the necessities and luxuries of the nation is indicated in figures of crop production in 1924 compiled for the California Development Association.

the total estimated value of the crop is $55,000,000.

There were more than 1,000 square miles of vineyards, with upwards of 540,000 acres bearing, in 1924. The value of the grape crop is placed at $55,000,000 and more than 36,000 carloads were shipped out during 1924.

Some of the other large shipments were 18,000 carloads of cantaloupes, 6,000 carloads of peaches, more than 5,000 carloads of pears, and 8,000 carloads of cherries, using round figures.

Actual yield from farm, orchard and garden products has been appraised by the State Department of Agriculture at $433,000,000.

A few of the large field crops for which figures have been furnished are 33,000,000 bushels of barley, 4,000,000 bushels of beans and nearly 4,000,000 tons of alfalfa. The value of the alfalfa crop alone is placed at $100,000,000.

The growing importance of the cotton industry is indicated in the 1924 yield of an approximate value of $13,000,000.

Poultry raising has become one of the important industries, the value of all poultry products for last year being placed at $75,000,000. This exceeds the total value of the vegetable yield, which is given at $65,000,000.

But great as are the returns from orchard and garden, they were exceeded in 1924 by the output of oil, which totaled 230,000,000 barrels, of an aggregate sales value of $500,000,000. This is in excess of the oil production in any other state of the union.

BUSINESS REMAINS ACTIVE THROUGHOUT ALL CALIFORNIA.

That California business activity is being maintained at the same high rate at which it opened the new year, is indicated by bank clearings of the principal population centers for the week ended January 22 as telegraphed to the California Development Association. In that week the five largest cities aggregated clearings in the amount of $374,063,000, which was a gain over the corresponding week of last year of $32,298,000.

San Francisco clearings for the week were $179,300,000, an increase of $23,800,000; Los Angeles clearings of $154,471,000 scored a gain of $2,579,000; Oakland clearings of $20,394,000 showed an increase of $4,601,000; San Diego clearings of $12,651,000 gained $768,000, and Sacramento clearings of $7,347,000 showed an increase of $594,000 over a year ago. Increases over the clearings of last year also were scored in the week by Stockton, San Jose, San Bernardino, Bakersfield, Modesto.

THE CAPITAL CITY'S STABILITY.

Sacramento City—The stability of California's Capital City is well illustrated in the 1924 record. Bank clearings of $430,137,499.10 were $61,824,048.44 greater than the 1923 total of $368,313,450.66. Postal receipts, $753,170.88 were $37,154.61 larger than those for 1923 $716,016.27. Building permits showed a slight decrease in valuation, the totals being $7,666,663 (1924), $9,699,638 (1923).

THE ZAMORANO FAMILY OF CALIFORNIA AND ITS SPANISH ANCESTRY

C. C. Baker

THERE IS IN THE POSSESSION OF THE children of the late Winnall Augustine Dalton of Tucson, Arizona, a fine old document, beautifully illuminated, on parchment, and written in the grandiloquent language of Spain. It is a Certification of Arms, showing at length the ancestry of Don Gonzalo Zamorano y Gonzalez, who petitioned for its issue, and is dated at Madrid, Spain, June 4th, 1777. The writer introduces himself as "Don Juan Felix Rujula, Chronicler and King-at-Arms for the Kingdoms, Dominions and Lordships of His Catholic Majesty Charles III (whom God Prosper), King of Spain and of the East and West Indies, etc." I have no further information regarding Don Juan. Charles III was king of Spain from 1759 to 1788, and it was during his reign, in 1778, that Spain joined France in the support of the insurgent Thirteen Colonies against England.

Don Juan, with proper circumlocution and many courtly phrases, states that the family of Zamorano was found at the earliest times in the mountains of Burgos, in Old Castile, where its members early "established by their heroic deeds the nobility of their Gothic blood," and where the family "spread by the thrust of the lance or the blows of the sword." Burgos is a mountainous district south of the main chain of the Cantabrian Mountains. It is known and regarded as the center of the Castilian share of the re-conquest of Spain from the Moors. One branch of the family finally settled in the town of El Arcajo de las Torres, in the bishopric of Avila, about west of Madrid. An uncle of the petitioner, Don Francisco Zamorano, had been sergeant major of the Royal Guards, and later, during service in Chile, was made lieutenant captain general of land and sea, in the city of Santiago, Chile, July 8th, 1698, by Don Tomas Martinez Poveda, governor and captain general of that province. Another uncle, Don Alonzo Ximenez Zamorano, was made spiritual administrator of the Royal Hospital de la Purissima Concepcion in the city of Madrigal by Philip V. Of the direct paternal line of the petitioner, only his father, Don Francisco, and his grandfather, Don Gabriel, are mentioned.

The chronicler next makes a statement which has become an established maxim among official heraldic genealogists: that the lineage of the father is not of sufficient nobility unless the same attribute applies to the maternal ancestry. Hence he proceeds to investigate that also as regards his petitioner. It should be understood that in the name of the petitioner, Don Gonzalo Zamorano y Gonzalez, the paternal name is Zamorano and the maternal name Gonzalez.

The first Gonzalez mentioned is Count Fernando, who, it is stated, "accompanied the Infante Don Pelayo in the restoration of this crown in 773 and founded the monastery of Escalada," near Burgos. The "Infante Don Pelayo" here mentioned was probably a descendant or relative of that Pelayo who defeated the Moors in 718 at the battle of Covadonga, where legend states that he and thirty followers destroyed an army of four hundred thousand Moors by rolling down stones on them from the mountain sides. He thus established the little Christian kingdom of the Asturias, on the Bay of Biscay, and here was fostered the germ of Spanish liberation. A daughter of Count Fernando married a knight of the city of Colonia in Germany, probably the modern Cologne, who had come to Spain to fight against the Moors. Count Fernando's grandson was Fernan Gonzalez, who won from the Moors forty-six battles, and was buried in honor in 970 in the Convent of San Pedro de Orlanza in Burgos. About 923 a descendant, Garcia Gonzalez, was created "rico hombre," or peer of the ancient nobility of Old Castile, the second of this dignity in the principality of the Asturias. This dignity was in 1516 changed to that of grandee of Spain. Of this line was descended Don Francisco Gonzalez, whose daughter, Joaquina, was the mother of Don Gonzalo Zamorano y Gonzalez. It is interesting to note that our chronicler specifically states that his petitioner is descended of a line "considered as Old Christians of pure blood, free of all admixture of Moors, Jews, converts or those who had been penalized by the Inquisition."

Follows then a description of the coat of arms adjudged to the Zamoranos, together with a description of the symbols appearing on the escutcheon. Some of these are very interesting and give information of the family. The gold represents valor, power and prosperity, and may be worn only by knights of a military order or by hidalgos, that is, those of noble lineage. Silver symbolized purity and integrity; red signified conquest, with honor and valor. The roundels, or small circles, representing the letter "o," are symbolic of the Knighthood of the Round Table instituted by King Arthur of England. The lions signify great heroes and strong captains; the aspes are worn in memory of the battle of Baeza, fought in 1227, about twenty-two miles north-east of Madrid, at which the Gonzalez family was represented, and wherein the Moors were defeated. A helmet surmounts the coat of arms, looking to the left in token of legitimacy.

Before passing to America it is interesting to note another Zamorano. On March 8th, 1822, President Monroe sent to Congress his message suggesting the recognition of the independence of several of the revolted Spanish colonies in the Americas. This caused excited diplomatic exchanges, on the part of Spain, with most of the courts of Europe. At this time the Spanish ambassador to the court of King William III of Prussia at Berlin was Joaquin Zamorano. If the family was traced, this gentleman would probably be found a member of the family with which we are dealing.

It is a matter of regret that no direct documentary proof is at hand connecting the Don Gonzalo Zamorano y Gonzalez of this Certification with the Zamorano family in California. Certain facts, however, imply such a connection. The Certification was found among the papers of Colonel Augustin Vicente Zamorano, and this fact, taken with the family tradition of pure Castilian descent, as well as the comparison of the date of the Certification, 1777, and of the birth of Colonel Zamorano, 1800, make it seem

MORELAND TRUCKS and BUSES Have Demonstrated California's Superior Manufacturing Possibilities

Fourteen years ago when the Moreland Trucks were first made, many people scoffed at the idea that quality manufactured products could be made in California.

In 1923, over $4,000,000 worth of Moreland Trucks and Buses were sold in direct competition with the leading makes in the United States.

The Moreland Company has demonstrated California's manufacturing possibilities by building trucks and buses of a quality unexcelled by any produced anywhere in this country.

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY, FEBRUARY 22, was observed in California with a parade and inspection of the National Guard at the Presidio in San Francisco. Governor Booth and Adjutant-General Foote did the inspecting. In the evening 8,000 people attended the literary exercises in the Mechanics' Pavilion and listened to Colonel W. H. L. Barnes orate.

The local military companies with the Red Men's lodge paraded in Sacramento. In Los Angeles there was a parade of military companies, the Red Men's lodge, the fire department and citizens. Literary exercises followed the parade.

The stock market continued to decline during the month and prices and fortunes shrank accordingly. The mining investors had lost over half of their paper profits in less than thirty days. California street, San Francisco, instead of being the mecca of fortunate investors became a place of misplaced hopes, blasted expectations and "has beens" who could have said: "Of all sad words of tongue or pen, are these, it might have been." They did not sell out in time.

Quicksilver mining was now at its zenith, both in the discovery of cinabar veins and the sale of the product. During 1874 the mines in California had produced 28,200 flasks weighing ninety pounds each. Dividends of $62,000 were paid this month by Lake County quicksilver mines.

Henry Morse, sheriff of Alameda County, and C. P. Marsh bought the ranch of Mrs. Hastings near Mount Diablo in Contra Costa County for $5,000 and proceeded to develop a cinabar vein found thereon. A rich vein of cinabar was discovered on the ranch of A. P. Whitney on Eel River in Sonoma County; it was nine miles long, and many locations were made.

A man named Liethy, who came to California from Illinois in hopes that a change of climate would cure his asthma, went to Nevada County. Having nothing to do, he began prospecting on Deadman's Flat, and found this month a decomposed quartz vein that yielded a fortune.

The Manzanita mine in Nevada County struck a buried gravel channel that was yielding a value of $20 to the pan.

Hensch and Sweeney, mining in Helleye Gulch, near Vallecito, Calaveras County, struck a vein of quartz two feet wide that assayed $6 a ton.

Senator John P. Jones and E. R. Burke bought a one-sixth interest in the Summer gold mine Kern County for $150,000. Hoisting works cost $100,000 and a thirty-stamp quartz-m were to be immediately erected.

There was a mining excitement in Calaver County over the discovery of a rich cinabar vein near Murphy.

There was a boom in hop growing, and there were not enough roots available to supply the demand of planters. The price advanced to a bushel.

Governor Booth Resigns.

The Gabilan rancho in Monterey County imported from Vermont a flock of 100 merino sheep at a cost of $30,000. This increased the flock of merinos there to 400.

There was a sale of the Centinella rancho, Los Angeles County February 15 and it lasted three days. It was sold in tracts at an average price of $30 an acre. Over 5,000 acres were disposed of.

Bales of San Jose had flocks of 2,500 angora goats in Santa Clara County. Hshearn fleeces a foot in length and was shipping the product to Jamestown, New York.

A telegraph line was built to Oakdale, Stanislaus County, reaching there February 1.

Bids for the construction of a large modern hotel in Santa Barbara were let February 24 and construction immediately begun.

The tug "Rescue" was built in ninety days at North Point, San Francisco Bay, and launched February 9 with appropriate ceremonies attended by a large crowd of spectators. It was the most powerful and expensive tug now afloat on the bay.

W. N. Drury, experimenting in Bakersfield Kern County, with rams, grew stalks seven feet high, and was preparing to plant 160 acres this season.

February 20 appeared the last issue of the "Sacramento Union" under the ownership Paul Morrill and James Anthony. Its efforts to organize a political party and destroy the influence of the Central Pacific owners proved financially disastrous to the owners and they were forced to sell. It was purchased and combined with the "Sacramento Record," owned by railroad men and under the management of H. Mills. February 22 it was issued as the "Sacramento Record-Union."

February 27 Newton Booth resigned as Governor of California so as to go to Washington, D. C., and take his place as United States Senator March 4. Romoaldo Pacheco became Governor, and his position as Lieutenant-Governor was taken by Wm. Irwin, president-pro-tem of the State Senate. At this time the lieutenant governor had charge of the state prison at San Quentin and his place of residence was the No changes were made by Governor Pacheco the state officials.

Levi Rosener, assessor of San Francisco County, was removed from office by order of Judge Sharpenstein February 5 on account of the poll-tax frauds committed by his deputy. He was charged with carelessness. Alex. Blam was elected in his place by the supervisors.

Miss Lotta Crabtree, the California actress had architects design a fountain to be erected on the corner of Kearney and Market streets San Francisco, to be given to the city. It was to cost $10,000.

Rattlesnakes in Vicious Combat.

Robinson and Fowler in Vallejo, Solano County, sold a quarter-interest in a patent for socket-broom to John Miller for $25,000. He was the well-known secretary of the Central Pacific Contract and Finance Company.

Turton & Knapp, Sacramento contractors, began the construction of the narrow-gauge railroad from Colfax, Placer County, to Nevada City, Nevada County, February 1 with 600 men grading.

M. Woolbridge of Cloverdale, Sonoma County, witnessed a battle between two rattlesnakes. They were coiled about each other from the tails up to within about eight inches of the heads. They struck at each other viciously, and each endeavored to fasten its fangs upon the other until exhausted. They would then lie on the ground, after partially untwisting, to renew the combat when recuperated. From the reappearance of the ground they had been fighting for some time. He cut a sapling eight feet long, poking their attracted attention. They quickly separated and made an angry dash at him and he had to kill them. One had fangs and the other sixteen rattles.

February 17 there were three shocks of earthquake that disturbed San Francisco between

LONG BEACH: The Forward-Looking City Where Native Resources Grow With The United Enterprise Of All

HARBOR DEVELOPMENT

P. E. Hatch

(VICE-PRESIDENT LONG BEACH BRANCH, SECURITY TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK, LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA.)

THE LONG BEACH-LOS ANGELES HARBOR is an outstanding factor contributing to the growth of Southern California. It is the gateway to and from the outside world for Southern California and the territory tributary thereto.

The record of the past sets forth clearly the marvelous development that has occurred. In 1900 this port was little more than a salt marsh and river mouth. In 1914 it had attained no significance commercially, being a port of call 000 tons per month to more than 2,000,000 tons cargo monthly during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924. This is an increase of 1,233 percent in the space of five years. Additional evidence of the rapid commercial progress and development at the harbor district is the fact that in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, 6,215 commercial vessels entered the harbor, compared with 2,886 vessels in 1920.

Further evidence of the growth and development of the harbor is shown by the increase in the investment of harbor properties. The City of Los Angeles had an investment of $354,463 in the harbor in 1912, which has increased steadily each year until it now stands at $20,131,538, or an increase of 5,578 percent. Figures showing the total cumulative investment in properties in the harbor by the City of Los Angeles, each year since 1912, follow:

1911-12	$ 354,463
1912-13	1,218,187
1913-14	2,211,826
1914-15	3,272,756
1915-16	4,210,376
1916-17	4,833,549
1917-18	4,857,020
1918-19	4,947,780
1919-20	5,635,887
1920-21	7,463,845
1921-22	8,737,241
1922-23	12,262,748
1923-24	18,015,833
1924 (November)	20,131,538

The bulk of the business passing through the harbor is coast-wise or coast-to-coast commerce. According to the United States Shipping Board, the harbor received more general cargo from the Atlantic Coast than San Francisco and Seattle combined. On the other hand, according to customs reports from forty-nine customs districts in the United States for the fiscal year 1924, the harbor ranked in the country as a whole thirteenth in foreign imports and seventeenth in foreign exports, valued at $37,298,452 and $52,974,959, respectively. The foreign commerce of the Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor is distributed principally among seven geographical areas, namely, Northwestern Europe, Asia, Japan, Canada, Mexico and Central America, South America and the Mediterranean, Balkan countries and Africa.

There is a great diversity in the foreign commerce of the port. In the export trade are found such items as petroleum, petroleum products, iron and steel manufactures, raw cotton, chemicals, canned fruits, oil-cake meals, seeds, drugs, cement, automobiles, canned fish, citrus fruits, honey and beans. Among the more important imports are newsprint, silk, glass, crude rubber, flax and hemp manufactures, rugs, hides, for only four or five maritime companies at the outbreak of the world-war. During the past ten years it has grown to such an extent that it is now ranked in second place with the other ports of the United States on the basis of tonnage handled, according to the Bureau of Research of the United States Shipping Board. The harbor increased its total commerce from less than 150,- wool, sugar, steel ingots, pigiron, fertilizer, copra and earthenware.

Although the total foreign commerce of the port represents only approximately 12 percent in tonnage and 11 percent in value of the total of all commerce passing through the harbor in a year, it should be remembered that the Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor has had a comparatively short commercial existence. The foreign commerce of a port depends to an important degree upon the development of trade connections. Commerce for this reason will follow customary channels long after other and perhaps more direct routes have been established.

The experience of the trade through the harbor with Hawaii is an illustration. Several of the steamship lines are owned jointly by San Francisco capital and the Hawaiian sugar interests, the sugar-carrying trade being one of the principal items of Hawaiian commerce. The development of trade between the Hawaiian Islands and Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor district has therefore been a tedious process. Yet slowly the Hawaiian trade has been developed, until the total commerce with the islands averages approximately $700,000 per month. The above illustration of the development of our Hawaiian Island commerce merely indicates what can be done in foreign trade development.

Another point frequently made concerning the commerce of the harbor is that a large proportion of the commerce consists of lumber imports and oil exports. It is true that, due to unprecedented building operations in Long Beach, Los Angeles and Southern California in general, importations of lumber at the harbor have been enormous during the past few years, the record in 1923 and 1924 placing this harbor as the largest lumber port in the world. Similarly, due to the great production of oil in Southern California and to declining production in the Mexican fields, the harbor has become one of the principal oil-exporting ports of the world.

Critics of Los Angeles statistics of harbor commerce often speak disparagingly of the fact that so much of our port business consists of this trade in lumber and oil. But this is no more a derogation of the volume of our shipping than is the large proportion of cotton exports from some of the harbors of the South. The fact remains that these two commodities have contributed, and in a large measure will continue to contribute, to the permanent wealth of our great metropolitan community.

The prospects for the future of the Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor and for the neighbor-

Passing of the California Pioneer

(Confined to Brief Notices of the Demise of Those Men and Women Who Came to California Prior to 1860.)

ALFRED JOHN JENNINGS, NATIVE OF England, 83; came to California via the Horn on the "Maria," arriving in San Francisco December 31, 1849; after engaging in boating on the Sacramento River for a time went to Watsonville, Santa Cruz County, where he was a conspicuous figure for many years; died at the Odd Fellows' Home, Saratoga, Santa Clara County. At one time deceased served Santa Cruz County as sheriff.

Mrs. Sarah Woodward-Melone, native of Rhode Island, 76; came with her parents in 1849 and resided in San Francisco until some fifty years ago, when she went to Saint Helena, Napa County, where she died, survived by two children. Deceased was the daughter of Robert B. Woodward, a Pioneer of '49 who was active in the early day affairs of San Francisco; he erected there the famous "What Cheer House," and also built and for many years conducted the noted recreation spot, Woodward's Gardens.

Martin Bunch, native of Michigan, 91; came in 1854 and for years drove a stage in Shasta and Trinity Counties; died at Redding, Shasta County, survived by a daughter.

John Eiszler, native of New York, 86; came in 1855 and resided in Placer County and Sacramento City; died at the latter place, survived by three sons.

Mrs. Mary Rucker-Smith, native of Missouri, 88; came across the plains in 1857, a few years later settling in Lake County; died at Upper Lake, survived by four children.

William Seeds Watson, native of New Jersey, 88; came in 1856 and settled in Sierra County; died at Coyoteville. During the Civil War deceased enlisted in Company K, Sixth California Infantry.

Franklin Watris, native of New York, 86; came in 1850 and after six years' residence in San Francisco, where he joined the Third Regiment Artillery Guards of Fort Gunnybags, settled on a vast section of land in the Agua Caliente, Sonoma County, grant, where he died.

Mrs. Rowena Van Dyke, native of Prince Edward Island, 81; since 1854 a resident of Los Angeles City, where she died; four children survive.

F. X. Lavelle, native of Canada, 84; came via Panama in 1855 and settled in Placer County; died at Lincoln, survived by two children.

Timothy Richardson Willey, native of Vermont, 85; came in 1859 and settled in Tuolumne County; died at Yorktown, survived by a wife and four children.

Mrs. Rowena Gillespie, native of Indiana, 93; crossed the plains in 1853 and long resided in Nevada County; died at South Bend, Washington State, survived by four daughters.

MORE THAN MILLION AUTOISTS MUST GET 1925 LICENSE PLATES.

Motorists are urged by the State Department of Motor Vehicles to secure their 1925 license-plates. Many applications have already been made to Sacramento, and delivery will be made about February 2.

"If you are the legal owner of your car," says the motor vehicle department, "put your pink certificate and your white certificate and a check, bank draft or money order for $3 in an envelope and send it to the Division of Motor Vehicles, Tenth and R Streets, Sacramento.

"If you own a truck or vehicle used for commercial purposes, the fee will be the same as last year. If you have a truck and a passenger car, send separate checks for each."

Branches of the Division of Motor Vehicles located in Los Angeles, San Diego, Fresno, San Francisco and Oakland, and the offices of the Automobile Club of Southern California, the California State Automobile Association and the Orange County Automobile Association are also permitted to accept applications.

The auto clubs, with branch offices in more than fifty California cities, will handle registrations during the renewal period, beginning February 2. Before March 2, licenses for more than 1,300,000 motor cars must be provided.

EXIT THE VEGETABLE PEDDLER. ENTER THE "ROLLING STORE."

In this age of keen competition, when "time is money" and the words "hygienic" and "sanitary" are the passwords, the vegetable peddler who uses an open horse-cart or an old-fashioned open motor-truck for selling his wares is fast becoming obsolete. The closed high-speed vending van, or "store at your door," is the vogue.

The Moreland Motor Truck Company is manufacturing a rolling store, the interior of which has shelves to accommodate a number of regular-size vegetable boxes, in addition to compartments sufficient to house a variety of sixty vegetables and other eatables. An ice box in the rear keeps the perishable foods at the desired temperature. The cost of operation and upkeep of the truck is very low, and it satisfies the demand of the discriminating housewife who wants cleanliness. Electric lights are provided, to enable the rolling store to do business evenings as well as day-time.

By the aid of the high-speed rolling store, vegetables can be picked and brought to the cities from the country and sold the same day. It means that "really fresh" vegetables can be had every day, and it saves the cost of extra handling, packing and shipping. Hence, by its aid the housewife should be enabled to purchase foodstuffs fresher and cheaper than heretofore.

CALIFORNIA'S NATIONAL FORESTS.More than 225 miles of roads and nearly 457 miles of trails were constructed within or adjacent to the seventeen National Forests of California during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1924, according to a report by the San Francisco district headquarters of the United States Forest Service. In addition, maintenance work was performed on 963 miles of roads and 3,617 miles of trails. At the close of the fiscal year the total mileage of roads in the state's National Forests stood at 535, and the trails' mileage at 1,642.The sum of $1,396,146 was expended on National Forest road and trail work in California by the Forest Service during the fiscal year. This sum was augmented by funds to the amount of $396,000 from co-operative agencies such as the state, counties and local organizations.

OLD FORT SITE TO BE MARKED.

Eureka (Humboldt County)—A bronze tablet marking the site of historic Fort Humboldt, abandoned in 1865 after the Indians had been pacified, will be dedicated by the Daughters of the American Revolution February 17.Your Headlight—Orders have been issued by Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, to arrest all motorists caught driving without approved headlight equipment after January 1, when the period of grace allowed by the law for some 165 devices expired. Marsh says motorists have had more than a year to get up-to-date equipment, and that the obsolete and dangerous devices will no longer be tolerated.Going Up—California moved to second place in auto registration during 1924, being exceeded only by New York State. The figures are: New

SAN BERNARDINO PREPARING

FOR GRAND PARLOR IN MAY.
ARROWHEAD 110 OF SAN BERNARDINO has arrangements for the Forty-eighth Grand Parlor, which will be in session in the Orange Show City the week of May 11, well under way, and an attractive entertainment program is assured.

There need be no apprehension as to scarcity of accommodations, for San Bernardino is capable of caring for all members of and visitors to the Grand Parlor. In addition to the many hotels already in existence a new 150-room hostelry will be in complete operation before the Grand Parlor date.

RESPONSE URGED.

The work of compiling the derivation of name of the Parlors of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is proceeding under the direction of Historiographer Frank C. Merritt of Oakland. A number of Parlors have not furnished the data requested to assist in the compilation, and it is urged that the matter be given early attention, so that a report may soon be made on this interesting project.

Grand Officers To Initiate Class.

Colusa—Colusa 69 recently presented the local high-school with American and State (Bear) Flags, the presentation address being made by Grand Trustee Seth Millington.

From January 2 to 19 Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn conducted a membership campaign for the Parlor and secured fifty applications. From the 19th to the 30th he will carry on for the neighboring Parlor, Williams 16, and if present indications are not misleading will secure at least 100 applications for that Parlor. The candidates for both Colusa and Williams will be initiated January 31 in this city by the grand officers.

Past President Gets Emblem.

Petaluma—A large delegation from Santa Rosa 28 accompanied D.D.G.P. Frank Berger to the "Egg City" January 6, when officers of Petaluma 27 were installed, Fred Cereghino becoming president. On behalf of Petaluma, D.D.G.P. Berger presented M. J. Hickey with a past president's emblem.

Eight Parlors in Joint Installation.

Sacramento—The auditorium of Native Sons Building was crowded January 16 when the officers of eight Parlors—Sacramento 3, Sunset 26, Courtland 106, Sutter Fort 241 N.S.G.W. and La Bandera 110, Sutter 111, Coloma 21, Victory 216 N.D.G.W.—were jointly installed.

The ceremonies were conducted by D.D.G.P. Genevieve Didion and Carlton L. Katzenstiel, the following becoming presidents: A. S. Dreyer, Sacramento; Myron E. Greer, Sunset; C. J. King, Courtland; J. V. Hines, Sutter Fort; Martha Hood, La Bandera; Annie Tilden, Sutter; Francis Crowell, Coloma; Marie Goodwin, Victory. Dancing concluded a most enjoyable occasion.

Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn will conduct a membership drive from February 1 to 21 for Sutter Fort 241 N.S.G.W. On the evening of the 21st the candidates secured will be initiated by the grand officers.

Husband and Wife Officiate.

Plymouth—Officers of Plymouth 48 and Forest 86 N.D.G.W. were jointly installed January 17 by Justice of the Peace J. D. Davis and his wife, Marguerite F. Davis. A program was presented and refreshments were served after the ceremonies.

1925 Revue a Scream.

Oakland—January 15 Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge officially visited Fruitvale 252. The good of the order committee, under the direction of Robert H. Waldear, presented "Fruitvale Parlor's Revue of 1925," which was a scream from start to finish.

January 23 the officers of the Parlor were installed jointly with those of Fruitvale 1, N.D.G.W., Robert E. Conahan and Irene Hasko becoming the respective presidents. Dancing followed the ceremonies.

Big Increase, Two Secretaries.

Fort Bragg—Officers of Alder Glen 200 were installed January 9 by D.D.G.P. H. P. Schepers. Caspar, F. W. Nelson becoming president. The combined office of recording and financial secretary, long filled by F. Fred Aulin, was separated, owing to the recent big increase in the Parlor's membership, and Aulin was installed financial secretary, and C. R. Weller as recording secretary. The large number in attendance enjoyed a "feed" and social session at the close of the ceremonies.

December 26 the Parlor initiated another large class of candidates and received several more applications. At a banquet which followed the ritual exemplification President F. W. Andrews was the toastmaster and among the speakers were Leonard Stone, Senator Pettus, Henry Shepper, Paul Madison, Frank Knaeke and Fred Aulin

Boy Scouts Guests.

Crockett Carquinez 265 maintained open house January 21 for the local Boy Scouts of America. Past President F. W. Hutchinson had charge of the entertainment, which delighted the guests. Past Grand President William J. Hayes of Oakland was the chief speaker of the evening.

Rural School at Xmas Time.

Oroville—Argonaut 8 entertained Gold of Ophir 190 N.D.G.W., the main feature being a skit depicting a rural school Christmas entertainment. Earl Ward, who tips the scales at an even 400, was the schoolmistress, and announced as the opening number a flag-drill by the "kids" who had received high marks: Tessie Hopkins (J. Emory Sutherland), "Four Eyes" (Jim Looney), Sophia Tucker (Harry Torrey), "Freckles" (Arthur Smith). The school board was represented by John Toland, Gordie Nisbet, Ed Shreve. Songs and recitations followed, and Nisbet brought forth bursts of laughter when he gave an example of how "he used to recite." Sleighbells were heard outside, and there was a notable silence. In came Santa Claus (Frank Boyle), who distributed from his bag toys and candy to the assemblage.

Jointly with those of Gold of Ophir 190 N.D.G.W., the officers of Argonaut were installed January 7. D.D.G.P. Ruby Mekellos and D.D.G.P. Arthur Smith officiated, Harry Torrey and Freda Cole becoming the respective presidents. Refreshments were served.

Humboldt To Be Combed.

Eureka—The Humboldt County Parlor—Humboldt 14 of this city, Arcata 20, Golden Star 58 of Alton and Ferndale 93—are anxiously awaiting the coming of Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn who, commencing February 25, will conduct a membership campaign for them.

Cohn has been most successful in Marin, Sonoma, Mendocino and Colusa Counties, but all his past records will, it is predicted, be shattered in Humboldt. The eligibles rounded up will affiliate with the several Parlors at a class initiation billed for April 4, which, it is promised, will be the largest in number ever initiated into the Order.

Active Participant in Civic Affairs.

Oakland—The Native Sons' Luncheon Club of Oakland held its second annual Christmas tree party December 23. An attendance which taxed the capacity of the dining-room enjoyed a program of vocal and musical numbers, with special stunts arranged by a committee consisting of Historiographer Frank C. Merritt, N. J. Meinert, Geo. J. Hildreth, W. J. Dieves and W. Cameron. Chief S. H. Short of the Oakland Fire Department (Athens 195) acted as Santa Claus and distributed candies and toys to all present. Past Grand President Harry G. Williams and Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb were speakers of the day. A generous donation was made by the club to assist in making Christmas merrier for some poor families.

The club is beginning its third year, and the noon-day meetings, held every Tuesday, are a source of pleasure to the local Natives. The organization has become an active participant in the civic life of the local community.

Boy Scouts' Committee Named.

Arcata—Officers of Arcata 20 were installed January 8 by D.D.G.P. J. J. Bognuda, E. L. Spellenberg becoming president. A supper preceded the installation.

To look after the welfare of the local Native Sons' troop of Boy Scouts of America the following committee was named: C. J. Dickerson, E. L. Stromberg, Roy Robertson, Len Yocom, Jake Bauer.

Membership Standing Largest Parlors.

San Francisco—Grand Secretary John T. Regan reports the standing of the Subordinate Parlors having a membership of over 400 January 20 as follows, together with their membership figures January 1 1925:

Parlor	Jan 1	Jan 20	Gain	Loss

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

PROPOSED AGRICULTURAL COUNCIL

WITHOUT QUESTION, THE MOST important agricultural legislation to be considered by the present State Legislature, is the proposed formation of an agricultural council, to have control of the State Department of Agriculture. This proposition was launched at the convention of fruit-growers and farmers held at Santa Ana a year ago, and at the last gathering of this organization, held in Sacramento during December, resolutions were adopted formally calling upon the Legislature to submit to the voters in the next general election a constitutional amendment providing for such a council. The agricultural council, it is provided in the draft of the amendment that has been prepared, would be composed of nine members appointed by the governor, serving terms of twelve years each, three being appointed every four years; the governor would be an ex-officio member. The first council would be appointed for varying short terms of three, seven and eleven years, to make future appointments come in the middle of gubernatorial terms. This council's most important duty would be to name the director of the State Department of Agriculture, and in addition it would, of course, aid in shaping the policies of the department.

It is claimed by the proponents of the plan that it would take the state department out of politics, in that the office of director could not be filled by a governor to pay political debts; that it would stabilize it, by giving assurance to highly-trained technical men that there would be no shakeups of personnel at the beginning of every state administration; and that a definite long time policy for agriculture in the state could be planned and carried out. Universal approbation of the idea came from all sources at the convention of farmers and fruit-growers in Sacramento, the California Farm Bureau Federation and the Agricultural Legislative Committee had endorsed it. But the California Cattle-men's Association, meeting in San Francisco, refused to endorse it, unanimously taking a stand against it, on the ground that the proposed council would make the State Department of Agriculture responsible to no one, and that it would set a dangerous precedent in conferring legislative and executive powers upon this new board. It appears, however, the champions of the measure will be able to muster enough strength to secure the two-thirds vote in both Assembly and Senate necessary to put the amendment on the ballot in the next election.

NEW MARKETING ORGANIZATION.

The newest co-operative commodity marketing organization will begin business in California about the first of March, according to announcement of the California Cattle-men's Association at its recent state convention. More than 80 percent of the cattle in California and 95 percent of those in Arizona have been signed up for the new marketing program. The plan, briefly explained, is this: twelve inspectors in the various districts of the state will keep a close watch on stock, and when packers order cattle, will fill these orders subject to grade, at a price previously determined by the association and the packers.

It is the belief of the cattlemen that they can cut down marketing costs, get more money for their stock, and that meat eventually will find its way into the hands of the consumers at less cost. The plan has been worked out in great detail, and it was decided a year ago to put it into operation as soon as 75 percent of the cattle of the state were under contract. However, the foot-and-mouth disease epidemic interrupted the campaign, and delayed the movement. Now, with the required percentage signed, only the perfecting of the machinery remains. This co-operative organization has one advantage lacked by others of the state, in that its market is not only close at hand, but is under-supplied by the product within the state.

WATCHING THE SITUATION.

The foot-and-mouth disease, as concerns the domestic livestock of California, has passed into history. It has not been entirely wiped out within the state, however, for the deer in the Stanislaus National Forest, in Tuolumne County, are infected, and while hundreds of them have been slaughtered, there remain some impossible to reach. A hundred hunters have been engaged in picking off these deer as they moved to the lower levels with the advance of winter.

Whether the foot-and-mouth disease will reappear among the herds and flocks of the state in the spring, is problematical. It would be rather surprising if there are not some sporadic outbreaks on ranches where the range runs into the foothills. But the federal and state authorities are watching the situation closely and are taking every precaution against a recurrence of last year's disaster.

WOULD AVERT DISASTER.

Uniform quarantine regulations will be asked of the State Legislature as regards livestock, where county movements are concerned; and of the other states of the Pacific Slope, as interstate traffic is concerned. Last year the state quarantines were limited in variety only by the number of states, and counties in California passed county ordinances almost as drastic. As a result, a study and correlation of the county regulations will be asked of the Legislature; and an effort will be made to establish an organization to work for animal quarantine uniformity, much as the Western Plant Quarantine Board handles the horticultural and agricultural situation.

This is a most important matter, for last year it affected not only livestock movement, but all that of fruit and other products of the soil, and a real disaster at one time threatened the farmers of California, when it seemed they would not be able to move their crops to Eastern markets.

IMPORTANT TO DAIRYMEN.

A measure that will prove of vast importance to the dairymen of California is the tuberculosis bill that has been drawn during the past two years by various dairy and dairy-breed interests of the state, working through the California Dairy Council as a clearing-house for the idea presented.

In final form, it will provide for the continuance of the formation of the tuberculosis free area districts, where less than 10 percent of the cattle are affected with the disease and when the supervisors ask for the action, with the new provision that the State and Federal Government will join in paying indemnities for cattle killed in cleaning up herds within a county. The Federal Government would pay half the difference between the appraised valuation and the salvage price realized on the carcass, and the county the other half. The county's share would be paid.

either from the general fund or by a head tax on all the cattle in the county.

No cattle could be brought into the state, except for immediate slaughter, without health certificates and subject to sixty day retests. The bill further provides for the branding of tuberculosis animals on the jaw, for the regulation of the sale and use of tuberculin, and for the sterilization of skimmed milk sold for feed for other livestock.

MODEL CODE OF ETHICS.

In its recent session in Sacramento, the State Association of County Horticultural Commissioners, with every member present, adopted a code of ethics that will stand as a model for any profession. Plainly setting forth the ideals of its members, it deals with questions of importance in plain terms, and with its "shalls and shall nots," marks a path that, while straight, is broad enough to be followed with ease. A high type of men, these county officials, justly deserving of the praise that has been bestowed upon them for their work during the past year, the most strenuous California horticulture has known.

POULTRYMEN HAVE PROFITED.

Standardization of eggs by the poultry-producing co-operative organizations of the state, is beginning to show its real value. While this same standardization has been the cause of much dissension within the ranks of some of the organizations, nevertheless the wisdom of the plan is beginning to be borne out by the fruit it is bearing. Cold-storage eggs, for instance, from the Central California Poultry Producers' Association, have been commanding higher prices on the markets than those from many other sources, because of their superior pack. This is one of the most important accomplishments of these organizations, and nowhere has the movement extended anywhere nearly so far as in California.

Poultrymen have profited, too, within the last few months, by the new egg grades issued by the State Board of Health, which define three grades, three sizes in each grade, and make clear what each grade must be, regardless of how long it has been stored. Under the old ruling, eggs in cold storage more than thirty days were labeled as cold-storage eggs. Those held in ordinary room temperatures did not have to bear such marks. The result is obvious. Good cold-storage eggs went begging at low prices, while poor eggs, even older, brought higher prices because they did not carry the odium of cold storage. Quality must be always the basis of grade, and properly-standardized eggs of California should command the highest prices paid on any market.

COTTON INDUSTRY SPREADING.

The cotton industry in California, firmly established in the Imperial Valley and in the southern parts of the San Joaquin Valley, bids fair to spread north this year, with very considerable plantings as far up the Sacramento Valley as Chico. Stanislaus, Merced and Madera Counties will plant large acreages in new areas in the San Joaquin Valley, while Colusa, Glenn, Sutter, Butte and Sacramento Counties will have acreages that are much more than experimental in size.

There is some question whether the length of season is sufficient in the Sacramento Valley to assure the maturing of the crop; but farmers who plan to plant are willing, apparently, to assume this risk. A movement to restrict plantings in the state to one variety, Acala, has been started in the San Joaquin Valley, and has received the endorsement of many organizations, particularly that of the Field Crops' Conference held last month in connection with other farmers' conventions of the state.

Crops Worth Millions—The California Crop Reporting Service estimates that while the 1924 production of 1,994,000 tons of the main field and fruit crops of the state was 17 percent less than the 1923 record production, the farmers received $368,427,000, which is less than 1 percent below the 1923 returns, $370,398,000.

ASPIRANT FOR CONGRESS.

Among the aspirants to represent the Fourth California district in the Federal Congress, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Congressman Kahn, is H. W. Hutton, a well-known attorney who has resided all his life in the district.

He served San Francisco as a police commissioner, and is active in civic affairs. Prior to engaging in the practice of law, he was employed as a machinist. Hutton is recognized as a hard fighter for what he believes to be right, and has always opposed prohibition because, he says, "he believes in freedom."

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

ENSEMBLE REPEATED IN SPRING STYLES

A WOMAN IS WELL DRESSED WHEN she realizes that fashion is not so much a matter of personal beauty and high-priced apparel, but rather the selection of modes that are most significant of good taste.

With dressmaking reduced almost to the simplest possible form and materials and trimmings so reasonably priced, there never was a time in the history of the world when women could be so charmingly and attractively clothed as now, and yet not exceed their budget for dress.

Fashion is emphasizing the chicly simple style for spring just as she has been accenting it as the dominant note of the modes of the past few seasons.

There are details that distinguish the straight-line frock as being a new creation, but its principles have not changed. That is because this type of dress is so versatile that it continues to be favored by well-dressed women the world over. Since lines are straight and as narrow as the figure will allow, there is not so much need for posting danger signs for the well-developed figures that attempt styles that add fullness.

A word of warning regarding stripes may not be amiss. Stout women are recommended to confine themselves to hairlines and the finely broken stripes of which there is an infinite and charming variety.

The ensemble suit is not going to be laid away with the storing of garments requiring camphor-ball preservatives. It is repeated in the spring styles developed in silk and satin, in suede finished fabrics and in combinations of these materials. There are several models in faille and cloth that will no doubt be worn until the beginning of next summer. Never has a mode been so complete, and as it is always chic its lasting popularity is easily explained.

One of the most striking ensemble effects of the season is made of kasha in one of the season's soft shades. The trimming note is supplied by tiny silk braid in a most effective design. Contrasting satin makes the graceful cascade revers, trims the open sleeve at wrist and also serves as a facing for the coat. The dress is also smartly trimmed with satin and braid.

A stunning ensemble among the simpler types is made of hairline stripe charmeen and stresses the slender silhouette in a most charming manner. The turn-back cuffs and standing collar are braided. Black satin makes the single slender rever and faces the collar. The right side of the coat is left quite plain, with knife plaits appearing at the left side to give variety.

As adorable as the straight-line frocks, in their bewildering variety of materials, are the tunic blouses of satin, silk, georgette, etc. Some are tucked, some are embroidered, some are braided, some are beaded and many are lace-embroidered, while others make clever uses of tiny buttons. To discuss the new neck line and varieties in collars would require a separate chapter on the subject.

Tricolette, satin, faille and crepe-de-chine are featured fabrics for the tunic blouse and the colors are pompadour, a light clear blue, green, terrapin, a lovely golden brown and the already-familiar rust, cocoa, gray, navy and black.

While the all-black tunic blouse in satin is eminently smart, it is frequently combined with contrasting colors. Especially smart are the combinations of black and white, black with don quixote—a lovely soft red—praline with tortoise, black with cranberry, and black with goblin blue.

Many plaited trimmings are introduced at the wristline of sleeves, due to the frequent featuring of the opened wrist line. A charming fancy in a new sleeve shown in a little dress of black satin is easily copied. The long sleeve, close below the elbow but comfortably loose in the armhole, points over the hand nearly to the knuckles. Between the elbow and the wrist is a wide inset of transparent gold embroidery or woven gold mesh, through which shines the flesh of the arm. The dress, close hanging but with side insets, is embroidered on the left side with matching gold threads.

Fashions for juniors—girls between the ages of fifth-year grammar and the dazzling last-year high—bear a close resemblance to fashions for debutante sisters. There must be clothes that are appropriate and stylish to offset the monotony of simple and practical things for school and everyday wear.

would be well perhaps to mention the advanced spring models in the fine worsteds and twills for girls and juniors, because these are shown in such charming variety that they are promise great vogue for the coming season. Many are made colorful with hairline crossbars and attractive plaids, while others are in solid colors handsomely worked with peasant designs in cross-stitch embroidery or with smocking in gay silk.

Frocks for all daytime occasions are featured in charmeen and fine wool jersey adorned with leather, metal buttons and kasha and crepe trimmings. Bengaline and the crepes are also used in the development of junior fashions, embroidery and gold buttons being favored for the richer materials.

A lovely springtime ensemble costume is made of heavy silk crepe, the hem-border sleeves at the wrist and the upper part of the dress being elaborated with gold braid. The coat is quaintly suggestive of the peasant smock and its lines are lovely and youthful.

Nothing is in better taste for school than the slim and straight little frock of striped flannel with its detachable collar and cuffs of linen in a shade to harmonize with the coloring of the dress. With these models a suede belt and narrow tie may be worn. Extremely smart, too, are the new plaid effects in deauville flannels.
They come in lovely color combinations and convenient widths and call for little, if any, trimming.

Dresses designed for girls between the ages of ten and sixteen feature skirts of dark plain material attached to blouses of contrasting fabric.
Worn with these dresses are little jackets without sleeves, which fasten with one button at the neck. This model is one that is generally becoming and lends itself to reproduction in any combination of materials.

In setting the fashion for spring, outer garments' designers have selected the soft fleeces and fabrics of chinchilla finish. Very dressy models, of course, are of the finer twills, such as satins and cashmere weaves.

Some of the spring wraps are double-breasted and some fasten straight down the front. Both set-in and raglan sleeves are liked. A stunning coat of the dressy variety, suitable both for late winter and early springtime wear, has deep collar cuffs of summer fur and peasant sleeves are attached to kimono armholes. The coat fastens at front with an overlapping row of smoked pearl buttons.

Brushed wool and other fuzzy fabrics are appropriate trimmings for sweaters and combination costumes of silk and mohair. Braid shares favor with these decorations, and while it is colorful and possessed of much novelty, the braids used on sports fabrics are all designed for sturdy service.

Not all of the smartest fashions for the youthful are expressed in materials that are of non-tubbable variety. Some beautiful crepes and novelty cottons are shown. Some are interwoven with figures of satin and wool, while others are self-striped or checked. There is an increasing demand for the silk and cotton mixtures, especially silk broadcloth, which is going to be smarter than ever for simple one-piece frocks and semi-sports.

Gingham, chambray and linen frocks are used for girls. Some are to be embroidered, while others content themselves with decorations of tucks, plaits and self bands. Embroideries for youthful frocks of the tub variety are simple and easy to develop.

Good looks and success go hand in hand. The business world is decidedly intolerant of the woman who exerts no effort to make herself attractive, because it is a salient fact that not to be well groomed is nothing less than personal neglect. There is a world of sympathy for the tired business man, but there must be no such thing as a tired business woman; at any rate, she must not look tired. First of all, she must have charm, poise and a measure of good looks, the latter embodied in a clear eye, a youthful

Native Daughters of the Golden West

DESERVES SUPPORT ALL NATIVES.
THE GRAND PARLOR, AT THE SANTA Cruz session in June of last year, adopted a resolution pledging the Order of Native Daughters to "enter upon an educational campaign throughout the entire state" regarding the drug habit and urging "the necessity of establishing and maintaining properly equipped institutions for the care and cure of drug addiction." Accordingly, Grand President Catherine E. Gloster created the Anti-Narcotic Committee, of which Dr. Louise B. Deal of San Francisco is chairman and May A. Lacy, also of that city, the secretary.

The committee has before the State Legislature a bill asking an appropriation for the establishment, equipment and maintenance of two institutions, one in the northern and the other in the southern portions of the state, for complete hospital service to those ill because of drug-addiction. The proposed institutions are to be managed by a board consisting of a member of the State Board of Charities, a member of the State Board of Health, a member of the State Institutions Committee, and two doctors of medicine licensed to practice in California, one from the north, the other from the south.

All Parlors and individual members of both the Order of Native Sons and the Order of Native Daughters are urged to take an interest in this humanitarian measure, which has been designed for the benefit of unfortunates and will, if adopted, reflect credit upon California and those sponsoring the bill. Write or speak to your legislators, soliciting their favorable consideration of the measure.

"This so-called 'drug-habit,'" says Dr. Deal, "is not a habit at all but a physical condition, a disease, and one of the most terrible diseases that is met in the practice of medicine. . . . The addict himself knows he is a sick man. From the day he learns that the curse of addiction has claimed his body as its prey, his daily hope and prayer is, to be cured."

"Do not get the impression that all addicts are criminals; there are addicts in all walks of life, from the pulpit of the high cleric to the artisan and the clerk—it is their misfortune. That there are addicts who are also criminals and who should be dealt with as such, is unquestionably true. The same might be said of consumptives, of rheumatics, and of any other class of sufferers."

"Let us try to remember that the opiate addict has a physical disease, the cause of which is, usually, ignorance, the results of which are misery, the remedy of which is education. With this understanding of the drug-question in mind, we must find a way to help these unfortunate people."

950 Kids Made Happy.

Colusa—Colusa 194 and Colusa 69 N.S.G.W. gave their third community Christmas tree December 22 at the grammar-school auditorium. There was a beautiful tree, and a Santa Claus for whom the children sang and who told them of his long ride. Every child present was given a stocking filled with "goodies," and stockings were also delivered to the sick children as well as to the Indian children at the Rancheria who, on account of the cold and stormy weather, could not attend. Nine hundred and fifty stockings were presented, and in their preparation 1,000 pounds of candy, 150 pounds of nuts, five sacks of oranges and 950 popcorn balls were used.

Colusa Parlor gave a Christmas tree entertainment for its members' husbands and children December 21. Santa Claus was there, and after the kiddies had gathered about him on the floor and told what they wanted, he gave each a present and candy. And the grown-ups, too, were remembered. Games were played until 10:30, when refreshments were served. Several poor families, that otherwise would have been without Christmas dinner, were taken in charge by the Parlor and well provided for.

Planning Welcome for Grand President.

Oakland—Piedmont 87's officers were installed January 8 jointly with those of Piedmont 120 N.S.G.W. D.D.G.P. May Barthold was the installing officer and Edna Healey became the president. Ramona Ring, retiring past president, was presented with an emblematic pin. The hall was beautifully decorated in ferns and other greenery. Alice Bertheaud was chairman of the evening and was assisted by a well-appointed committee. Dancing followed the installation. January 15 a very successful whist party was held, and the drill-team featured a whist the 26th. The Parlor's well organized drill-team, captained by Greta Murden, plans many social events for the term.

Piedmont is making elaborate preparations for the official visit of Grand President Catherine E. Gloster February 12. Marion E. Ring heads the arrangements committee and will be assisted by Greta Murden, Alice Bertheaud, Josephine Clark, Augusta Huxsoll, Tillie Gratton. The Parlor's institution anniversary is to be appropriately celebrated at a banquet. Greta Murden is chairman of the committee making the arrangements.

Interesting Relics Received.

Oroville—Mrs. Florence Boyle, custodian of Gold of Ophir 190's relic cabinet in the City Library, has recently received several interesting early-day relics from Miss Fredericka Braden, Jim Murphy, Francis Stedman, Earl Akers, Arthur Smith and Madge Dahlmeier. Among them are a picture of the original Sutter Fort at Sacramento, a hand-made hammer for shoeing oxen at the "First and Last Chance" saloon and way-station at Jack's ranch in the '50s, and bill-of-fare from the "El Dorado," a Hangtown eating-place of 1850.

Through the community exchange, the Parlor provided a Christmas tree and entertainment for the Butte County Infirmary. Gifts and candles were distributed at the program's conclusion. Those unable to leave the wards were not forgotten, being visited by a delegation who cheered them with songs, led by Cecil Hengy on the banjo. Much praise has been accorded Al Hengy for her leadership and untiring efforts in this Christmas work.

Native Sons Entertained.

San Jose—San Jose 31 gave a delightful Christmas party January 8, with members San Jose 22 and Santa Clara 100 N.S.G.W. guests. A beautiful tree, a splendid program followed by dancing and delicious refreshments were attractive features of the evening. Miss Jean Belloli was the capable chairman of the arrangements committee.

January 21 the Parlor gave a whist party which was largely attended and proved a huge success, socially and financially. Mrs. Lau Gilleran was chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements.

Officers of the Parlor will be installed February 12.

bruary 5 by D.D.G.P. Clara Briggs, Miss Elsie Fisher becoming president. The Parlor has suffered a distinct loss by the death of Mrs. Mary Campbell, a highly esteemed member who passed away January 9.

Kitchen Shower for Recent Bride.

Hollister December 26 Isabel Moore-Yocum, who a few weeks previously had hidden farewell to girlhood, was the honored guest at a kitchen shower given by Copa de Oro 105. Following the unwrapping and inspection of the gifts, games and refreshments were enjoyed.

With installation ceremonies impressively rendered, the officers of the Parlor were inducted into office by D.D.G.P. Alta L. Macaulay and Acting Grand Marshal June Lindsay of Santa Cruz, assisted by Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs. Following the installation ceremonies D.D.G.P. Clarence Richardson acted as master of ceremonies when a short program of musical numbers and speechmaking was enjoyed, addresses being given by D.D.G.P. Macaulay, P.G.P. Briggs and P.P. Vena Lasserot and vocal solos rendered by President Wm. O'Hara of Fremont 44 N.S.G.W. Presentations of cut-glass were made to Retiring President Else Schou and D.D.G.P. Macaulay. The festivities of the evening also included an enjoyable banquet and dancing.

Anniversary To Be Celebrated.

Daly City—Officers of El Carmelo 181 were installed January 7 by D.D.G.P. Rena Mathias, Madeline Fellows being retained as president. An emblematic pin was presented Past President Rose Sweeney, and numerous other presentations were made. The Parlor's first whist of 1925 was held January 21, Miss Elsie Forsell being chairman of the arrangements committee; dancing followed cards.

February 18 Grand President Catherine E. Gloster will officially visit El Carmelo and will be welcomed by the peninsula Parlors. The Parlor's fifteenth institution anniversary will be celebrated with a banquet February 26.

Welfare Work Continuous.

Mountain View—The welfare work of El Monte 205 among 130 men in four wards at the Palo Alto Base Hospital is continuous. It is under the chairmanship of Mrs. Eldora McCarty, who is lovingly referred to as "mother" by the boys. At Christmas time sensible gifts were distributed to eleven of the adopted boys, and Mrs. McCarty personally made up forty clever josh packages over which the boys had much fun.

New Year Day was celebrated jointly by the Parlor and Mountain View 215 N.S.G.W. with a sumptuous banquet which was followed by dancing and cards. January 31 the Parlors gave a whist party for the benefit of the homeless children.

Visitors Enjoy Banquet.

Santa Rosa—Santa Rosa 217 and Santa Rosa 28 N.S.G.W. entertained about 300 at a Christmas tree December 18. Candy, goodies and presents were distributed to young and old. Following an entertainment dancing and cards were in order.

January 15 D.D.G.P. Anderson installed the officers of 217, Lenora Mello becoming president. There was a large attendance from Petaluma, and they enjoyed the banquet given jointly by the local Parlors.

Past Presidents Enjoy Treat.

San Jose—Officers of Vendome 100 were installed January 22, Margaret Weber becoming president. Supper preceded the ceremonies. Mrs. John Corotto was general chairman of the January 8 meeting of the Thursday Club, and Mrs. Lotta Koppell had charge of the 22nd meeting. Grace Pearl, retiring president, entertained the officers of the Parlor at her home January 13; each guest was presented with a gift, and delicious refreshments were served.

January 7 Mrs. J. M. Howell entertained at her home the winners in a recent attendance drive of the Parlor's Past Presidents' Club. The home was beautifully decorated, and the past presidents, forgetting the years, became children again. Leaving here, the auto party, in turn, visited the homes of Mrs. Urban Sontheimer, Mrs. I. L. Koppell and Mrs. Robert Leaman, at each of which they were royally entertained. Lincoln's birthday, February 12, the Parlor will feature a card party. Mrs. David J. Gairaud is chairman of the large committee of arrangements.

ARRANGING ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

SEPTEMBER 9, ADMISSION DAY, MARKING the seventy-fifth anniversary of California's admission into the union, and the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, the Native Son Parlors of San Francisco have organized to arrange an appropriate celebration of the diamond and golden anniversaries, to occupy the week September 7 to 12. Mayor James Rolph (Hesperian 137) has appointed a citizens' committee, of which Supervisor Angelo J. Rossi (El Dorado 52) is chairman, to work with the Native Sons.

This will be a state-wide event, and the program will exceed in splendor and extensiveness any celebration ever held in California. Remember, "San Francisco Knows How!" Steps have been taken to have both the Pacific and Atlantic fleets in San Francisco Bay for the occasion, and an effort is being made to have the Federal Government issue a special coin commemorating the important events.

Officers of the Native Sons' joint committee include: James L. Foley (Twin Peaks 214), chairman; Grand Trustee James A. Wilson (Rincon 72), vice-chairman; Eugene O'Donnell (Dolores 208), secretary; Walter Garfield (Balboa 234), treasurer. Sub-committees, already at work, have these chairmen: M. J. McGovern, finance; Charles A. Koenig, parade; George Barron, pageant; Charles Wolthers, publicity; A. W. Boyken, accommodations; Harry Schroeder, music; Joseph Rose, ball; Supervisor Angelo J. Rossi, army and navy participation; John H. Nelson, printing; John J. Barrett, grandstands; Judge J. M. Golden, reception; Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, membership.

The latter committee has elected Dr. Gonzalez chairman, Sydney Bernstein vice-chairman, Fred Kockler secretary, Harry Stobing treasurer, Prof. J. J. Le Mer sergeant-at-arms. This committee is arranging for a class initiation of approximately 500 candidates Saturday evening, March 28. A spirited contest is on between the several Parlors for the prizes offered to those making the best percentage gains during the membership drive.

GEOGRAPHY CLASS INSTRUCTED.

The world's largest class in geography assembled in the San Francisco Ferry Building, January 22. Lewis F. Byington, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., was the teacher, and the subject was California.

The students were the 500 and more wool-growers of the country, in session in San Francisco at the invitation of the California Development Association. Byington's instructions followed a three-hour trip about San Francisco Bay, and the relief map of California that now adorns the Ferry Building was used to illustrate his talk.

PROGRESS STATISTICS.

San Francisco's bank clearings during 1924 totaled $8,366,230,636, a gain, compared with 1923, of $316,647,146. Building permits totaled for the year $57,853,000 in valuation. In 1909, the bank clearings amounted to $1,987,658,000, and the building permits had a valuation of $28,540,000.

Oakland's bank clearings for 1924 totaled $845,144,456, a gain over 1923 of $41,346,933. The value of the year's building permits was $30,942,000. In 1909, the bank clearings amounted to $95,773,000, and the building permits were valued at $5,411,000.

San Francisco's 1924 postal receipts broke all records for that city, amounting to $7,455,948.25, and exceeding the 1923 receipts of $7,040,036.30 by nearly $416,000.

ORGAN DEDICATED, PALMS UNVEILED.

A $100,000 concert organ, a gift of John D. Spreckels, San Diego capitalist, was formally dedicated last month at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor in Lincoln Park. The palace was a gift to San Francisco from Mrs. Alma de Bretteville-Spreckels and the late A. B. Spreckels, her husband.

Following the dedicatory ceremonies bronze memorial palms, presented to the city by the French Government, were unveiled.

PUBLIC UTILITY'S FINE SHOWING.

During 1924, the San Francisco Municipal Railway carried 78,648,992 passengers without a single fatal accident, according to the report of Superintendent Frederick Boeken. Receipts for the year were $3,238,686.36.

HISTORIC DAY OBSERVED.

January 24, the seventy-seventh anniversary of the discovery of gold at Coloma, El Dorado County, by James W. Marshall, was observed by "old time" Native Sons—those affiliated with the Order for twenty and more years—with a banquet, which is an annual event on "Gold Discovery Day."

Marshall's discovery was made January 28, 1848, exactly nine days before the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, between the United States and Mexico, was signed (February 2, 1848). The treaty ceded California to the United States.

NEW CHAIRMAN.

At the annual meeting in San Francisco of the Native Sons' and Native Daughters' Central Committee on Homeless Children, Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, a member of Bay City Parlor No. 104 N.S.G.W., was elected chairman, to succeed the late Federal Judge Maurice T. Dooling.

HEAR OF CONDITIONS IN EUROPE.

At the Native Sons' Luncheon Club gathering in San Francisco January 7, Assistant City Attorney Charles Peery (Stanford 76), who recently toured Europe, spoke on "Economic Conditions in Europe." Jesse Miller (California 1) gave a two-minute talk on "The Life of General Sutter."

January 21, Supervisor James B. McSheehy (Twin Peaks 214) addressed the club on "Comparative Taxation." Grand President Edward J. Lynch presided on both occasions.

BIG GAINS.

Officers of South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. were installed January 7 by D.D.G.P. Arthur Stanford, assisted by members of Mission Parlor No. 38 and Precita Parlor No. 187. The district deputy complimented the officers for their splendid ritual rendition, and the Parlor in general for its activities. Edmund Torres is the new president. Recording Secretary John T. Regan's report showed a gain of fifty-one in membership and $3,400 in assets the last term, bringing the total membership to 675 and the total assets to $25,400.

A banquet concluded the ceremonies, and a program of speaking and singing was presented. Grand Secretary John T. Regan was the toastmaster, and on the Parlor's behalf presented Edmund Olson, retiring junior past president, with a handsome emblem of the Order. February 14, South's drum-and-piccolo corps will give a Valentine party, to which everybody is invited.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED.

The twentieth institution anniversary of Castro Parlor No. 232 N.S.G.W. was observed January 17 with a banquet and good-fellows' carnival at Native Sons' Auditorium. Mike Hurley's famous jazz fiends provided the music and there was a program of snappy songs and dances.

The Parlor's third annual kiddies' Christmas tree was a great success, and was enjoyed by over 800 children. The membership drive, now well under way, will continue until the night of election of Grand Parlor delegates. Norman F. Coates is the new president of the Parlor.

VALENTINE PARTY.

Darina Parlor No. 114 N.D.G.W. had the pleasure of entertaining, on her official visit, Grand President Catherine E. Gloster of Alturas, January 19.

Saturday, February 14, at the Century Club, Franklin and Sutter streets, the Parlor will feature a Valentine party, the admission to which is 50 cents. A five-piece orchestra, directed by George Kettler, will furnish the music for dancing, and cards will be provided for those who do not care to dance. Bessie Peters is chairman of the arrangements committee. The general public is invited to attend, and an enjoyable evening is assured.

NATIONAL ORANGE SHOW

CALIFORNIA'S GREATEST MIDWINTER event, the National Orange Show at San Bernardino, will observe the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the show during the period from February 19 to March 1. The climax in exposition achievement seems certain, if present plans do not miscarry, and there is every assurance that the great spectacle of the orange will be more beautiful and more complete than any of its predecessors.

For many years the National Orange Show has been presented under canvas. The first step toward permanency was when the management purchased a forty-acre tract of land. When a little wind came along last winter and ripped one of the great tents to pieces, entailing a loss of many thousands of dollars, the executive committee ruled that a permanent building must be erected.

Today that great building project has come true. It is a structure that represents the latest word in exposition construction. It is so large that Uncle Sam's great dirigibles could be safely anchored inside. From the main entrance to the rear wall one must travel just 1,000 feet. Of this space 760 feet is given up to exposition purposes. Two departments have been created in the building, one to house the feature and rack displays, the other for industrial and automobile displays.

The dedication of this building, erected as a monument to the citrus industry, has been set for February 19. Governor Friend W. Richardson and other state dignitaries, newspaper men, citrus growers and many men prominent in business life will take part. It is an epoch in the history of achievement of the great midwinter classic. The Orange Show is a non-profit affair, being supported year after year by the business men of San Bernardino, who annually guarantee the expenses of the exposition and who must pay if the show loses, but who do not receive one cent in return if the show makes money. It is for this reason that communities everywhere laud the National Orange Show, and support it with exhibits and attendance. In so doing, they are indirectly supporting the great citrus industry which means so much to this great State of California.

Fifteen great feature exhibits will take up all available room in the fruit section this year. These exhibits will be the largest that have ever been constructed at any orange show. They are presented by communities in many sections of the state, citrus and otherwise. Many of the exhibitors support the Orange Show, even though they do not grow citrus fruits. They realize that each section is largely dependent upon the other. The result is co-operation, that spells success for all.

There will be four great fountains among the exhibits this year, tall columns, water wheels, quaint Venetian designs, some of the exhibits in motion, some with human figures. One of the most unusual exhibits will be maintained by the Mutual Orange Distributors, which will present a Tanagra miniature theater. Human figures, reduced to Lilliputian size, will present ballet numbers, solo dancing, etc.

The industrial and automobile departments will be filled to the brim, all space being taken. The automobile show will be second only to the greatest auto show held in this state. The industrial department will feature hundreds of demonstrations of machinery, supplies and everything of interest to the citrus grower and to the general public as well. A miniature packing-house will prove interesting. There are multitudes who do not know how oranges are graded and packed for shipment. Pretty girls of the Fontana district will pack a carload of fruit each day during the show.

One of the new features which will be welcomed is the construction of two balconies which will provide an overhead view of the show for the first time. Accommodations for 1,000 persons have been provided in the way of comfortable chairs. A seating plan has never before been arranged at the show, being impossible because of the tremendous throngs. On several days the attendance has been more than 50,000.

Every comfort of the visitor has been supplied in the new building. One of the features is a completely-equipped cafe, which will seat 400 persons at one time. Parking for thousands of automobiles on the Orange Show grounds, first aid and comfort stations, telephones, drinking fountains, emergency fire apparatus—everything, in the way of convenience, comfort and safety, will be found in the new plant. Last year the attendance ran to a quarter of a million, and this year all attendance records will be broken, it is believed.

DISASTER NOT APPARENT IN THIS PROGRESS RECORD.

Los Angeles City's progress during 1924 is denoted in the following comparative figures:

Bank clearings—$7,194,515,378.40 (1924), $7,024,782.08 (1923), a gain of $169,626,596.32. In 1909, the clearings totaled $675,849,000, in 1915 they had mounted to $1,049,110,927, and in 1920 to $3,994,280,520.

Building permits — $150,247,621 (1924), $200,133,181 (1923). As in all other cities, the valuations here were less during 1924 than for the preceding year, but the city stands fourth in the nation's building-record. In 1909 the permits had a valuation of $13,259,000.

Postal receipts—$7,519,748 (1924), $7,068,875 (1923), an increase of $450,873. In 1912 the receipts totaled $1,906,398.

Industries—Six hundred new ones were added during 1924, making the total approximately 5,700. Estimated value of industrial plants' products, $1,200,000,000 in 1924, an increase, compared with 1923, of about $50,000,000.

Those who have delighted in "knocking" Los Angeles will find little consolation in these fact-figures, and those inclined to pessimism will be benefited by thoroughly digesting them. The close observer is confident that no obstacle can stop the wonder-city's progress.

Builders to Assemble—The fourteenth annual convention of the National Association of Builders' Exchanges, to be held in Los Angeles February 23 to 27, will be attended by prominent builders from all over the country.

Big Bond Issue Proposed—During February and March four Los Angeles County sanitation districts will vote on a $12,600,000 bond issue for a main-trunk sewer with an outfall at White's Point.

Huge Sum—Los Angeles City's 1925 street-improvement program calls for the expenditure of $35,000,000, reports City Engineer H. A. Van Norman. Three hundred miles of paving will be laid.

CALIFORNIA SOUTH FIRE REVIEW BOARD REPORTS FINDINGS.

Increased fire protection through an enlarged system of roads, trails and fire lines; the division of the Angeles National Forest into two separate units and the creation of a new San Bernardino National Forest; the elimination from the Angeles Forest of approximately 100,000 acres of private and Indian reservation lands lying largely along the south boundary of the forest; and the suggested introduction of a special bill in Congress providing for an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the protection of the brush and forest areas in the National Forests of California South, contingent on the expenditure of an equal amount by other co-operating agencies, are the high lights of the report of the Board of Fire Review for California South, approved by Colonel W. B. Greeley, chief of the United States Forest Service.

The investigations of the board clearly brought forth the tremendous importance of brush-covered mountains to the industrial and social welfare of California South. In the area tributary to the Angeles National Forest there are 2,500,000 people and over 500,000 acres of irrigated land which are dependent, to a greater or lesser extent, for domestic and irrigation water upon the streams rising within the Angeles Forest.

"The continued prosperity of this region," states the board, "depends upon the maintenance and increase of the present water supply, and on flood control. The first steps necessary in accomplishing these ends are identical, namely, the preservation of the watershed cover from damage or destruction by fire."

streets, where he built a large number of ships. Justiano Roxas, in Santa Cruz, was claimed to be the oldest inhabitant in the state. He was 137 years old and in good health.

Samuel Matney, in Modoc County, was claimed to be the oldest inhabitant in Northern California. He was 95 years of age. He was a rancher who did all his own work and almost daily walked two miles to town for a newspaper. He was well posted and could argue on any of the questions of the day.

A man claiming to be John W. Hart was arrested for forgery in San Francisco. His vehement and insistent denial of the charge convinced Captain Lees of the police department that he was telling the truth. Struck by the man's resemblance to a party he had arrested once before, Lees searched his records and found the photograph of a man arrested ten years previously and who had escaped from an officer by jumping from a second-story window. Learning that the real forger had informed a victim that he had just arrived by a steamer, he began a search along the waterfront for the man that looked like Hart and the photograph. There he found a man from Australia, giving the name of Edward Ayres, going aboard a vessel about to leave and took him into custody. Ayres' resemblance to Hart was so great that one of the forger's victims identified Hart as the forger. Ayres finally confessed and Hart was liberated.

DEVELOPMENT

ing harbor cities, of which Long Beach is the largest, will depend upon the development of industry to produce goods for the greater commerce of the harbor.

The vital elements of a great industrial development are raw materials, power and fuel, labor, transportation and markets. One of the most fundamental is transportation. No community has all of the raw materials necessary for its needs. Transportation is vital for the bringing in of the raw goods it requires for industrial uses. Basic raw materials such as petroleum, lumber, wool, cotton, iron ore, rubber, silk, copper and sugar are either readily available within Southern California or can be shipped here in a dependable and economical supply.

The power used in Southern California is derived primarily from electric energy generated by water and second only to steam generated by coal and oil. At the present time, coal is not available in Southern California in a dependable or economical supply. Oil, while readily available, is being subjected more and more to other uses as industries develop. Electric energy developed by water power is therefore the principal source of power. At the present time, the total amount of developed water power in Southern California is approximately 750,000 horsepower, whereas, according to estimates made by competent authorities, its potential development is more than 2,500,000 horsepower from primary sources.

Much progress has already been achieved toward developing the potential supplies of hydro-electric power, both within the state and outside. During 1925 approximately 200,000 horsepower will be added to the present productive capacity of electric energy in Southern California. Of this new capacity, 100,000 horsepower will be available in new steam plants, 55,000 horsepower in new hydro-electric units and 45,000 horsepower in an increase in facilities in old plants. The greatly added capacity in new steam plants added to that of existing plants of this character makes it almost certain that there could be no recurrence in 1925 of the situation which, for a short time, threatened Southern California in 1924.

Another important potential supply of hydro-electric power is that of the Boulder Canyon project on the Colorado River. This project contemplates the erection, by the Federal Government, of a gigantic dam and power plant on the Colorado River. According to preliminary plans of the United States Reclamation Service, the proposed dam and power plant will cost about $100,000,000. The project will make possible (1) the reclamation of 6,000,000 acres, (2) the protection of life and property in the Imperial Valley through the control of floods of the Colorado River, (3) the storage of water for irrigation purposes and (4) the development of 900,000 horsepower of electric energy.

In keeping with the great industrial growth of Southern California, and the development of its resources, the harbor is being enlarged and improved each year to care for the increased commerce that will result from the development of our hinterland.

Long Beach is located on the eastern end of the Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor. The Long Beach end of the harbor is connected with the Los Angeles end by a channel and possesses unlimited potential value in connection with the great commercial and industrial developments that are now taking place and that will take place in the future.

In May 1924 the City of Long Beach voted $5,000,000 worth of bonds for the development of the harbor. This money is being expended on dredging inner channels, widening and dredging the turning basin and the channel connecting the Long Beach end of the harbor with the Los Angeles end, and the construction of municipal docks and warehouses.

The decision of the Pacific Coast Steel Company to erect a $15,000,000 steel plant at Long Beach is but one of the first results of the efforts of Long Beach to develop the harbor. Present plans for the Long Beach end of the harbor from an industrial point of view also include the establishment of a terminal for the Catalina Island steamers, the creation of a Pacific Coast operating base for the Merritt-Chapman-Scott Marine Salvage and Wrecking Company, the establishment of a joint terminal for the Dollar Line of ocean freighters and the Southern Pacific Railroad, and the construction of a harbor railroad-steamship terminal by the Union Pacific Railroad.

Scores of industries will be established along or near the Long Beach end of the harbor during the coming years, due to the favorable manufacturing conditions which prevail here and to the fact that Long Beach will become a world port of call.

AWAKE AND ADVANCING.

Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. has a membership drive under way, guided by an active committee composed of Fred C. Walker, William B. Schweizer, Lester E. Hann, Moya Robinson and A. J. M. Schlemmer. Several applications were filed at the January 21 meeting, and a class of candidates will be initiated February 4.

Dr. S. T. Luce, Edgar McFadyen and Phillip Loree have been appointed a committee to arrange for a dance and entertainment to be given jointly with Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W., February 18.

Past President Percy Hight started a special prize "stunt" for the homeless children during the January 21 meeting, and a considerable sum was raised for the kiddies' benefit. Financial Secretary Dr. S. T. Luce outlined, and there was a general discussion of, work to be done by the Parlor during 1925. Among other things, affiliation will be had with the Long Beach Federation of States Societies, a State (Bear) Flag will be presented to the city "dads" for the councilroom in the new City Hall, a booklet will be prepared and circulated among the local Boy Scouts of America, and three attractive signs, calling attention to the time and meeting-place of the Parlor, will be erected on the most important highways at the entrance to the city. These signs will be in place at an early date, and evidence that Long Beach Native Sons, like their home-city, are awake and advancing.

San Jose and partially destroyed it and also burned the Farmer's hotel adjoining.

The Pacific Tannery owned by Kellum & Wagner at Stockton was burned February 28, causing a $100,000 loss.

Domingo Estrada and Filomeno Cotta were hung in the Sacramento jail February 19 by Sheriff Larue for a murder and robbery committed in April 1874. They died without any undue struggle. An immense crowd of people gathered around the court house and jail, but saw nothing and heard less.

At 8:30 a. m. February 6, on Market street, San Francisco, a young man smashed the window of the Dime Savings Bank with a brick. Reaching his hand through the broken glass he grasped a package containing $1,000 in greenbacks and escaped. The sidewalk was thronged with passing people at the time.

February 16 three highwaymen sprang out of the brush and attempted to stop the stage from Redding to Shasta in Shasta County. Jesse Culverhouse, the driver, would not obey the demand and, lashing his horses, ran away. The robbers shot at and hit him on one of his cheeks, badly mutilating his face. A passenger grabbed the reins and drove the stage in safety to Shasta.

The stage from Mokelumne Hill, Calaveras County, to Lodi, San Joaquin County, was stopped near Comanche by two highwaymen, who became so excited the driver took advantage of their dilemma and drove away. They got nothing.

February 28 the Almaden stage, driven by Eugene Bauric, upset on Market street, San Jose. Mrs. John Williams was dangerously injured and ten other passengers were more or less hurt.

It was a habit of immigrant passengers on the freight trains passing through Sacramento to climb upon and sit on the roof of the freight cars, thereby getting a better view of the city than from seats in the emigrant cars. February 28 Joseph Caldwell, an immigrant, attempted to do this, but fell beneath the cars and was fatally mangled.

Eugene English, intoxicated in Condy's hotel, Middleton, Lake County, February 26 asked the barkeeper to return his pistol, left for safekeeping. It being handed him, under the supposition that it was not loaded, he fired and the bullet struck Michael Gooden, a bystander. In the heat, killing him instantly.

Chavez, who was second in command with Vasquez, the bandit, swooped down on the eastern part of Kern County with a band of Mexican renegades. They robbed Scotty's store on Kern River of about $1,000 in money and goods and appropriated five horses.

"Overtaker" Wanted.

David Spence, a Pioneer of Monterey City, residing there since 1824, died February 29, at the age of 76. He had an uneventful life.

Antone Madden, at French Corral, Nevada County, February 16 was caved upon and buried alive in his mining claim. The accident was witnessed by a 12-year-old son, James, the eldest of five children. He was promptly dug out, but died shortly afterward.

Jerry Baker, a miner at Gold Run, Placer County, was caved upon February 26 and was killed beneath eight feet of gravel.

Chris Lampton, owner of a derrick at the Vankee mine near Dutch Flat, Placer County, was caught in the machinery and crushed to death February 20.

At Rincon, Santa Barbara County, February 21, a rancher named Hammond was digging at the bottom of a well. The bucket used in hoisting the dirt fell from the top and struck him on the head, killing him. His wife and son arrived from the East soon after the accident.

A miner came into a Sacramento clothing store and desired to purchase an "overtaker." This nonplussed the storekeeper, who asked if he wasn't looking for an undertaker. "No," replied he, "you have advertised them here."

"Well, I keep all kinds of men's furnishings here, but I don't know of anything you have named," replied the storekeeper. The miner looked around a few minutes and triumphantly shouted, "Here they are!" He then pointed to an assortment of fine-tooth combs in a show-case.

February 2 a lad named Laumann, 16 years old, shot a deer across the South Fork of the American River above Chilli Bar, El Dorado County. He started to cross the stream, attaching himself to a rope, to get it, but the current caused him to become entangled in the rope and he drowned.

Three Chinamen found a letter on the street in Napa City that contained a draft for $100, which belonged to F. Barco, a business man there. They took it to him and tried to cash it, not aware he was the owner, stating they had received it in payment for work done at Vallejo. It landed them in jail.

A citizen of Fresno City proposed to change the name of Court House Square there to "Courtling House Square," owing to the grounds being the trysting place of adoring couples. The automobile now supplies the need.

Busy Bees—There are more than 200,000 colonies of bees in California, according to the State Department of Agriculture, and the annual value of their product is $1,500,000.

ZAMORANO FAMILY

probable that he was a descendant, possibly a grandson or a son, of the recipient of the Certification.

Augustin Vicente Zamorano was born in St. Augustine, Florida, in 1800. He served under Bustamante, in the revolt of Mexico against Spain, and in 1825 came to California as secretary to Governor Echandia. While in California, in 1827, he married Luisa, daughter of Santiago Arguello, grantee of the Ex-Mission San Diego. In 1832 Colonel Zamorano refused to accept the results of the revolt of the south against Governor Victoria, made a counter revolt against Echandia, and sustained himself as comandante of the north until the arrival, in 1833, of Governor Figueroa, to whom he was secretary. He is said to have conducted in Monterey, in 1834, the first printing office in California. He left California in 1838, but returned in 1842 as lieutenant colonel and inspector, only reaching San Diego, where he died in that year.

Of Colonel Zamorano's children, Dolores married General Jose Maria Flores, the last Mexican comandante in California; Luis Augustin married and died in San Diego; Gonzalo died young; Guadalupe married Henry Dalton of the Rancho Azusa and died at Azusa in 1914; Augustin Vicente married a daughter of Jean Jeantet, a Frenchman and a squatter on the Rancho Azusa, and died in Lower California; and Eulalia married Vicente Estudillo of the Rancho Oso Flaco, near San Luis Obispo.

While it is true that pride in family history often degenerates into a mere feeling of aristocratic superiority, this is the dark side of the picture. Family history is interesting. This story of the Zamorano family is given because California should be interested in the origin and history of a prominent early family that helped make California's history.

UNIFIED STATE PARK SYSTEM

IS NEEDED IN CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco—The first move toward a unified state park system in California was taken January 5 at a meeting at the Harbor Board rooms in the Ferry Building, attended by representatives of many civic and conservation societies, including the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, from all parts of the state.

J. D. Grant, chairman of the board of directors of the Save the Redwoods League, presided, and brought out the fact that, next to agriculture, there is probably no interest in California which is more vital to the state's prosperity than the proper development of its scenic and recreational opportunities through an adequate system of state parks.

Duncan McDuffie pointed out that the state now owns four state parks, with an aggregate area of 13,000 acres and valued at fully $3,000,000. There is, he said, no unity of administration at the present time. He stressed the need of a comprehensive survey of the state to determine the requirements of each section in the matter of park and recreational matters, and dwelt upon the importance of conserving scenic and recreational areas now, before it is too late. The extensive development of the highway system of the state, he said, required a corresponding development of a state park system along these highways. He emphasized the economic value to the state of a well-planned park system, in addition to its aesthetic value.

At the conclusion of the discussion resolutions, directed to the State Legislature, were adopted, to the effect that "it is the sense of this meeting that the administration of the state parks of California should be concentrated in the hands of a state park commission," and "to empower this commission to carry on a state-wide survey, upon which can be based a complete and comprehensive state park plan, and that sufficient funds for this purpose be appropriated."

hearing of California's history will be invited. Several candidates were added to the membership-roll during January. At the San Bernardino Grand Parlor in May, the Parlor will present John T. Newell for re-election as Grand Trustee.

NEW BANK HOME TO OPEN.

The new home of the Hellman Commercial Trust and Savings Bank at Seventh and Spring streets will be formally opened for business early in February with appropriate ceremonies.

The banking room is beautifully decorated, and in it has been installed the latest equipment for the convenience of patrons and the dispatch of business. The Hellmans, Marco and Irving, are to be congratulated for this latest addition to Los Angeles' business world.

DANCE, FEBRUARY 12.

Corona Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. initiated seven candidates January 15, and the newly-installed officers exemplified the ritual in an impressive manner. The Order's aims and ambitions were told the initiates in addresses by Joseph P. Sproul, Peter H. Muller, William M. Kennedy, Henry G. Bodkin and others, and all expressed a determination to "put their shoulders to the wheel." The membership committee, chairmaned by John Topham Jr., is doing fine work, and expects to double the Parlor's membership in a short time.

February 12, Corona will give its first 1925 social affair, a dance, at the 927 Menlo avenue clubhouse. All Natives and their friends are extended an invitation, and an enjoyable time is assured. Arrangements are in the hands of the good of the order committee: Carl Frowein, George McLain, George Haight, William Kennedy, Henry Bodkin.

The Parlor's baseball team, captained by Harry Jorder and completely uniformed and equipped, is "raring to go." It has won several games, and is out for the Native Sons' championship. In future, Corona will have initiation the second and fourth Thursday of each month. A social session follows every meeting and refreshments are served.

HEAR HIM!

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. will suspend its meeting of February and throw its doors open to the public in general, that they may hear from R. W. Shearer, a naval authority, some startling facts regarding preparedness. Ramona Hall, 349 South Hill street, should be packed to overflowing. Shearer deals with facts and has an important message to deliver. On the 20th a class of candidates will be initiated, and on the 27th the monthly high-jinks will be presented by the good of the order committee, William L. Coffey (chairman), Burrell D. Neighbours, Leon J. Leonard, Joseph P. Coyle, T. Dwight Crittenden.

January 23, Ramona accepted the resignation of William C. Taylor as secretary, and thereby lost the valuable services of one of the very best secretaries in the whole Order. To fill the vacancy, John Vincent Scott, for thirty-two years affiliated with the Parlor, was unanimously elected. Several names were added to the membership-roll during the month, and flags, American and State (Bear), were purchased for the Compton grammar-school. County Superintendent of Schools Mark Keppel, a member of the Parlor, will make the address at the formal presentation. Ramona's baseball team, captained by John P. Ward, is rapidly getting into shape.

PROGRESSING FAVORABLY.

The work of adding cheer to childless homes, by placing homeless children therein, is progressing most favorably through the agency of the Native Sons' and Native Daughters' committee operating for that purpose.

At the committee's January 9 meeting matters pertaining to the welfare and improvement of the work were discussed. Treasurer James B. Coffey reported most gratifying financial returns from the ball and the Christmas letter, the latter bringing in over a thousand dollars. Irving Baxter is chairman and Mrs. Annie L. Adair secretary of the joint committee.

DEVELOPING ATHLETIC TEAMS.

Pasadena Parlor No. 259 N.S.G.W. has issued, and is using effectively in a campaign for members, a neat little booklet entitled "Reasons Why Native Californians Should Join the Native Sons of the Golden West, an Exclusive Order for Americans Only."

The Parlor has changed its meeting-night from Friday to Thursday, and is meeting in the Y.M.C.A. building, 124 No. Marengo avenue. The members have the use of the gymnasium and swimming-pool, and teams in several branches of indoor athletics are being developed. Challenges are to be issued to other Parlors for friendly matches in the near-future.

OLD-TIME SONGS PLEASE.

At the January 2 meeting of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. several candidates were initiated and plans for the term were enthusiastically discussed. January 16 the good of the order committee, Edith Douglas chairman, presented a program and served delicious refreshments.

January 30 was devoted to an evening of music, and the chorus singing of old-time songs under the direction of Grace Norton and Kathryn Ronan was splendid. Lucille Duncan was surprised when, during the serving of refreshments, she was presented with a cake, bearing lighted candles, in recognition of her natal day.

February 6 a class of candidates will be initiated, and during the month officers will be installed and a Spanish supper featured.

BOXING FIESTA.

Sixty Native Sons journeyed to the historic Walter Temple ranch at Puente, January 4, where, amidst a beautiful setting, eight candidates were initiated for Vaquero Parlor No. 262

Landscaping—

Older residents of California are familiar with the fact that Howard & Smith have created many of the most beautiful gardens in the State. With the vast development which has recently taken place in Southern California, however, it may be that some of the newer residents are not aware of the fact that Howard & Smith have a landscape department capable of rendering the very highest service in the treatment of their grounds. In the development of a property, confidence can only be placed in those having a thorough understanding of landscaping in its entirety. A full comprehension of this subject, from the minutest detail to the placing of the house itself, is essential if beauty and harmony are to be the ultimate result.

If you are contemplating the development of your grounds we will be pleased to have you confer with us.

N.S.G.W., among them Walter Paul Temple and his son, Thomas, who had come home from Santa Clara University to celebrate his twentieth birthday anniversary. The initiatory team was made up of Past Grand President William I. Traeger, Burrell D. Neighbours, Adolph G. Rivera and Ernest R. Orfila of Ramona Parlor, Grand Trustee John T. Newell and Undersheriff Eugene Biscalluz of Los Angeles Parlor, Sidney Neighbours, John Foster and David Jones of Vaquero Parlor. Gathered about the festive board, following the initiation, there were pertinent addresses by Sheriff Traeger, Grand Trustee Newell and Thomas Temple.

Several additional candidates were initiated by the Parlor during January, bringing the membership close to 100. At the social function January 20, an historical moving-picture, the "Mark of Zorro," dealing with the days prior to the American occupation of California, was shown. The scenes are from the stretch of country between Los Angeles City and Capistrano, Orange County. Dancing followed the movie.

Vaquero will feature a boxing fiesta and entertainment at the Lyceum Athletic Club, 231 South Spring, February 18. A portion of the proceeds will be used to uniform and equip the Parlor's baseball team, and the balance will be turned in to the homeless children fund. Frank Abbott is chairman of the arrangements committee. The Parlor has extended Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 of San Bernardino an invitation to be its guest some time during February.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Mrs. Alice Thomas Gosewich, mother of Robert Gosewich (Ramona N.S.), passed away January 2 at the age of 57.

Mrs. Ina B. Boal, sister of Irving Baxter (Ramona N.S.), passed away January 15.

Dorothy Jean, daughter of Harry W. Frost (Ramona N.S.), passed away January 17.

Mrs. Mary Wallingford Folsom, mother of Harry G. Folsom (Ramona N.S.), passed away January 17 at the age of 77.

Ygnacio Bilderrain, brother of Refugio Bilderrain (Ramona N.S.), died January 18. He was born in this city seventy years ago.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Vincent Savory (Pasadena N.S.) paid a visit last month to San Diego.

Grace Bessac (Joaquin N.D.) of Stockton is in the city on an extended visit.

Herman C. Lichtenberger (Ramona N.S.) paid a visit last month to Sacramento.

John T. Newell (Los Angeles N.S.) was a visitor to San Francisco last month.

Jack Larronde (Ramona N.S.) recently returned from an extended Eastern trip.

Harry G. Pendell (Los Angeles N.S.) returned early last month from an Eastern business trip.

John L. McGonigle (Los Angeles N.S.) has moved his law offices to the Pershing Square building.

Colonel H. G. W. Dinkelspiel (Bay City N.S.) and Chancellor K. Grady (Pacific N.S.) of San Francisco were among last month's visitors.

George A. Glover (Ramona N.S.), formerly connected with the local Federal Internal Revenue Department, has opened law offices in the Pershing Square building.

Judge Walter Hanby ascended to the superior bench January 5, and found his desk bedecked with a beautiful floral tribute from fellow-members of Ramona Parlor of Native Sons.

NO TEARS WILL BE SHED.

"Sob orators, both white and yellow, have begun a systematic attack upon Congressman John E. Raker as being chiefly responsible for the passage of the Anti-Alien Land Law. They declare it was the 'contrivance of the devil to squelch missionary work in Japan' and demand that it be repealed.

"People who do not believe that California should be turned into a Japanese colony will continue to stand by Congressman Raker and the law designed to prevent their immigration. And if it shall result in 'squelching missionary work in Japan,' no tears will be shed by the public at large. As a matter of fact, there is a wide field for work by earnest, Christian workers at home, and no great harm will result if it shall put a few professional Christians out of a job."—Alturas New Era.

HOLLYWOOD THE MECCA FOR ALL PEOPLES

HOLLYWOOD IS A PART OF THE metropolitan city of Los Angeles and not a separate municipality. It is, however, the largest and most important suburb of Los Angeles and has within its boundaries a minimum of 130,000 population. In the entire territory there are some twenty square miles, improved after the fashion of most deluxe cities. It is bounded on the north by the foothills of the Santa Monica Mountains, which extend in a southwesterly direction to the sea. On the south is the Pacific Ocean and to the east the Los Angeles metropolitan district.

Hollywood is ideally situated as to distance from the center of Los Angeles and proximity to the beach resorts, the nearest one, Santa Monica, being twelve miles distant. The climate is admirable, summer temperature seldom mounting above 90 and in winter infrequently declining to the frost line.

Five years ago Hollywood had a population of 35,000 people. Comparing this with the census figure of today will give a fair idea of the growth and progress of the place. It is noted particularly as the center of the motion-picture industry and as one of the most desirable residence places of the Pacific Slope. It is the home of many of the greatest artists of the country and numbers within its list of residents such celebrities of the music world as Carrie Jacobs Bond and Charles Wakefield Cadman, whose beautiful songs are known the world over.

Hollywood has been referred to in all manner of kindly and unkindly phrases, the latter mostly undeserved. It has been called the "Paris of America" and the "Sodom of the Twentieth Century," yet it harbors the most eminent people of the world. To those who know it as it really is, it is regarded in the light of the Brooklyn of Los Angeles, the city of churches, the seat of higher education, the "home of the Symphony under the Stars" and the Oberammergau of America.

Hollywood is the home of two of the world's greatest artistic non-profit enterprises, the Hollywood Bowl, with a capacity of 50,000, being one, and El Camino Real Theatre, which houses the great annual "Pilgrimage Play" or dramatized "Life of Christ." The community embraces within its fold thirteen grade schools, one intermediate high-school and two large high-schools. The Hollywood high-school last summer graduated nearly 3,000 pupils, this winter graduated a class of 1,700 and this summer will have a class of over 3,000. It holds the record of the state for the number of graduates going to college or universities. There are also numerous private schools and academies, and a branch of the State University in its confines. It has churches of every denomination, creed and ecclesiastical teaching.

It is the home of the most imposing Easter sunrise service in the West, which gathers within the area known as the Hollywood Bowl, each Easter morning for the worship of God and the adoration of the Risen Christ, such great multitudes as marked the appearance of the Savior of the world on the occasion of the Miracles and the Sermon on the Mount. Hollywood has forty-two active civic, commercial and social clubs, of which the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, with a membership of approximately 1,500, is one.

Because of its multitudinous advantages, both as to all-year climate and location, Hollywood has very naturally come to be known as the Mecca of American countries for all peoples, all trades, all social classes and enterprises, and today is confronted with the anomalous condition of having to ask certain people to stay away. Allusion is made to the movie-mad element which, in the past year, has swarmed down upon Hollywood, only to be disappointed in the foolish quest for quick fame and fortune in the movies.

ber 8, 1855, he issued the first number of the "Daily Evening Bulletin," in which he took to task the evil-doers and corruptors of the city's morals.

May 14, 1856, as he was leaving the "Bulletin" office, King was shot and killed by a notorious politician, James P. Casey. This so aroused the tizenry that the Vigilantes of 1856 were organized, and on the day of King's funeral hanged not only Casey, but also Charles Cora who, early in 1856, had murdered United States Marshal William Richardson.

The criminal annals of California bear evidence that a vigilance committee of 1925, operating along identical lines pursued by the Vigilantes of '56, could find numerous duties to perform throughout the state, and California would be immeasurably benefited by their speedy doing.

Governor Friend W. Richardson's message to the California Legislature, presented shortly following its convening in Sacramento early in January, dealt fully, yet briefly, with the affairs of the state.

The Governor, like every other human being, has his faults, but it is a fact that, as he says, "During the past two years I have endeavored to give the people a business and not a political administration." Economy, on the part of the legislature, was stressed.

One of the worst cases of juvenile depravity in the criminal records of California is that of a 16-year-old San Francisco girl who last month killed her mother, because the latter interfered with her to mend her ways.

This crime should cause the authorities to close, and keep closed, the numerous resorts in this state which thrive off the sacrifices of honor and soul made by minors, both female and male. And it should impel the authorities to hunt them out, and keep behind prison-bars, the hundreds of pimps and other unworthy-of-consideration sales with which this state is sorely afflicted whose chief occupation is contributing to the delinquency of young girls.

Redding, Shasta County, vegetable retailers have signed an agreement to purchase all produce from White agents only.

An excellent example, that would greatly benefit California, if scrupulously and unfalteringly carried out by every White dealer and individual.

The Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West is sponsoring a bill, now before the California Legislature, which provides for the establishment, equipment and maintenance by the state of two institutions, one north and one south of Tehachapi, to care for those suffering from the drug-habit disease.

The bill should have favorable consideration at the hands of both the Legislature and the Governor. Those mentally weak are well cared for by this generous state. Why should those physically weak, from the effects of this most terrible of all diseases, not be looked after? California can well afford to invest some of its enormous wealth in such a righteous undertaking as that proposed by the Native Daughters.

In an address before the ninth annual peace congress of the American Council of the World Alliance for International Friendship—a Protestant Church organization—Rev. Dr. William P. Merrill declared "America should give moral support" to the Jap-proposed protocol at the recent League of Nations assembly in Geneva.

Which means that the Protestant churches favor submitting to the League of Nations the question of Jap immigration. The Japs, understand, want that done. Through that means, if the Japs continue to be excluded from the United States, Japan will have the long-looked-for excuse to wage war, in the hope that California and other Western states may be added to its possessions.

WOULD PRESERVE LANDMARK.

Assemblyman Hubert B. Scudder of Sebastopol, Sonoma County, has before the State Legislature a bill carrying an appropriation of $2,500 for the restoration of historic Fort Ross, in Sonoma County, established by the Russians in 1811.

Continues Gold Lead—California maintained its lead as a gold producer during 1924, the director of the United States Mint crediting it with 630,882 ounces of the total production for the country of 2,500,243 ounces.

Prize Winner—Watsonville, Santa Cruz County, has been awarded first prize for cities of the United States with less than 100,000 population for the best showing during Apple Week, October 3-November 6.

by their military and naval intelligence departments all over the world. We deliberately allow ourselves to be hoodwinked. Foreign powers maintain bureaus in this country and fill us up on foreign propaganda, at the same time flattering us on our wonderful leadership in the move for peace.

There is no evidence, outside of America, that any nation is aiding the peace move. England, Japan, France and Italy are increasing every type of ship not included in the treaty. The foreign governments have built and authorized 281 ships of war since the signing of the Washington treaty. The four-power pact on the open door policy of China has not been ratified or signed by France, but we made our sacrifice in Guam and the Philippines on fortifying.

It is well to remember that Great Britain is a potential enemy and is governed by British policies, not sentiment.

Japan is a natural enemy, governed by ambition and policies.

The exclusion law is a law only if you are prepared to enforce it. Our future nationalization demands that we enforce that law, and stop all smuggling of aliens over our borders,—that means all "Orientals and others."

The essentials of British and Japanese naval strategy were to scrap what America had and forge ahead with types of ships they possessed in great numbers,—those types which meant naval supremacy and were not included in the treaty.

SENTIMENTAL HYSTERIA.

If the American people, especially those on the Pacific Coast, are satisfied without a naval base or a proper air defense, then they have only themselves to blame.

Don't blame the party in power, or any party. Don't blame Congress. It is entirely in your hands. It is up to you to demand, and get, what is necessary for national defense on this coast. You do not demand, and for that reason your representatives at Washington do not ask for it; they simply barter and trade on unimportant matters.

We have overlived the treaty ratio in destroying. That is sentimental hysteria. Be careful that the officers and men of your fleet do not lose their initiative. With that gone, your first line defense is a myth. At no time have we made an attempt to live up to the building ratio. We are by honor and duty pledged as much one way as the other.

We owe it to England and Japan to keep faith, by living up to the treaty ratio as they do. Strange as it may seem, the Limitation of Armaments Treaty is the only treaty foreign powers don't demand that we fully keep.

The navy is a part of the Constitution of the United States. The officers and men are sworn defenders, and only ask for what is necessary to defend the nation.

It is up to you to insure your country as you insure your chattels. Until such time as foreign powers lay their cards on the table, face up, my position is that of a man who turns in the alarm. It was the officers of the navy who pleaded with me to make this fight.

As one of the accepted and qualified brains of the navy puts it: "In case of war, only a great leader and the grace of God could save us."

REFORESTATION ASSOCIATION IS FORMED IN HUMBOLDT COUNTY

The Humboldt Redwood Reforestation Association has been organized for the purpose of perpetuating the lumber industry, investigation of the factors favorable to reforestation to overcome such obstacles as may be met in the pursuit of this work, and to further encourage others similarly situated, whether in this region or any part of the country, who may be able to reforest their lands profitably.

Membership in the association includes all persons, corporations and institutions owning, in Humboldt County, forest lands, consisting of old-growth timber or cut-over land, each member to be assessed for dues according to the acreage of his holdings. Two reforestation nurseries have been established, one at Scotia, Humboldt County, and the other at Fort Bragg, Mendocino County.

The activities of the members of this association require over a million redwood seedlings to be planted within Humboldt County during the present planting season, and these have been grown and are being planted as rapidly as they can be lifted from the nursery beds.

CALIFORNIA NATIVE DAUGHTER CONVEYS NEVADA'S MESSAGE

Mrs. Emma W. Humphrey of Reno, Nevada State, was selected by the presidential electors of that state, to convey Nevada's message to Washington, D. C. She arrived there January 13 and presented Nevada's contribution to the election of President Calvin Coolidge to Senator Cummins.

Mrs. Humphrey left the following day for Florida, but will return to Washington February 9 and witness the opening of the electoral vote of the nation February 11.

School Attendance Increases—The total 1928 enrollment of the Los Angeles County public schools was estimated January 8 by County Superintendent of Schools Mark Keppel at 421,000, the 1924 enrollment was 383,000. This year's school-tax levy, about 45 percent of the total tax levy, is $36,372,153, an increase over 1924 of $8,232,657.

More Playgrounds—Eight additional playgrounds, provided for by a recent bond issue, will be thrown open to the people of Los Angeles City in the near future.

John Doe—or John Dough?

JOHN DOE is a substitute frequently used when the name of a person is unknown.

Did it ever occur to you that the unknown persons are generally people who have made failures of their lives? And that business failures are usually the direct result of being unable to save a part of one's income?

Now is a good time to ponder what your own condition will be when the time comes that you would like to retire. Will you be the unknown John Doe, or the well-known John Dough?

The solution is in your own hands. But you must act. Save a regular portion of your monthly income. To make sure, subscribe for the appropriate number of shares of the Preferred Stock of Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation on the monthly payment plan.

WAKE UP, AMERICANS!

"WE HAVE SURRENDERED THE PACIFIC OCEAN TO JAPAN, AND LIVE IN A FOOL'S PARADISE, WAITING FOR JAPAN TO GET READY"

BEFORE I PLUNGE INTO THE SUBJECT which should interest every one of you as Americans, I wish to state that I appreciate the honor of this privileged opportunity.

"The time has arrived for Americans to get together and talk it over, whether they come from the North, the South, the East or the West. We have a common purpose and duty before us—to preserve this nation. The only remedy is adequate national defense. For years we have played with compromising policies, and in every sacrifice we make it is not because we believe we are right but because the influences of certain invisible powers are at work on our officials at Washington as well as on our Congress.

Today we are without a defense policy. They lobby against our navy, our national defense, our merchant marine, our air service. In fact, under the guise of fighting for peace, they would undermine real American institutions and would substitute any organization that would leave us defenseless.

In 1919, at the torpedo station Newport, I started my first fight for the navy. The true conditions were exposed: officers were resigning and a would not enlist. That condition, in a few months, was righted, and America went on its way to be a sea power, not for conquest, but for peace and defense.

Then came the Disarmament Conference at Washington. I confess I worked for a defense, not an offensive, program to limit navies. During the conference I was in contact with the British, Japanese and Chinese authorities in Washington. It was obvious that the game was being played with marked cards and we the unsuspecting victims. The advice of the Navy's General Board and the navy's experts were completely ignored.

The essentials of British and Japanese naval strategy were to scrap what America had and go ahead with the types of ships they possessed in great numbers,—those types which meant naval supremacy and were not included in the treaty.

"When the Pacific battle fleet visited New York, March 6 1924, I was asked by officers who were familiar with my navy fight in 1919 to make another fight. I asked: 'What is our most important needs?' Their answer was, 'Naval bases and light cruisers on the Pacific.'

Early in April 1924 I laid before the Secretary of the Navy and the chiefs of bureaus my indictment on the navy; my claims were in their hands for comment and correction. April 17th, ten days later, I released for publication the report, only after I had called on the Secretary of the Navy and the Naval Intelligence Bureau.

Senator King of Utah, whom I did not know, came into the Senate records my statements, and asked for a thorough investigation. At that time the Senator King stated on the floor of the Senate that powerful influences were at work to undermine the navy ratio. I placed in the hands of Senator King and Congressman Brittan of Chicago original copies of my charges. The conditions of the navy were well aired in both House and Senate. In June, Senator King asked for further information. From June to November, I went further into the navy situation and the influence behind the navy's weakness.

While waiting for Congress to convene, in December I was advised of an order to sink the U. S. S. 'Washington' and was asked by the uniformed officers to try and save that ship. I made an unsuccessful fight and was informed that an American citizen had no equity and that the courts had no jurisdiction over the navy. When Congress convened, a secret session of the Senate Naval Committee was called. After that meeting I was warned and threatened to stop my fight.

To bring forcibly home to our lawmakers the true conditions of the navy, I released for publication the confidential War College letter covering the British battle practice and our inferiority in hitting power of six problems played at the War College. A court of investigation was called at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The day after I appeared as a witness I was again threatened. At Washington the Naval Committees were advised by the Secretary of the Navy and the General Board of the conditions of the navy. Their recommendations were completely ignored, though it was proven we do not stand 5-5-3 on the ratio. The Senate committee adopts the report of the House sub-committee, which is a misrepresentation of the true conditions of our national security or national defense. The Limitation of Arms Treaty means we are to be equal with Great Britain and superior to Japan. What we want is a proper interpretation of 5-5-3 based on hitting power, not junk, and to fully live up to the ratio as was understood and pledged.

"The United States of America made sacrifices in the Pacific based on the understanding that all treaties would be carried out, ratified and fully lived up to. The failure of France to ratify makes two important treaties ineffective and valueless, namely, the one relating to poison gases and submarines, and the one concerning the territorial integrity of China and the 'open door.' The treaty of the 'open door' of China was the cause of the Four-Power Pacific Treaty among Great Britain, the United States, France and Japan, relating to their insular possessions in the Pacific. This treaty, again, has not been ratified by France.

W. B. SHEARER delivered an address on "Preparedness" in Los Angeles, February 6, under the auspices of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. So many startling facts, vitally pertinent to the well-being of the United States, were revealed that, at the request of many Sons and with the approval of Edward J. Lynch, Grand President of the Order, the address is presented here in its entirety.

Shearer was introduced to The Grizzly Bear readers in the February issue. He is the one who made the unsuccessful attempt to save the battleship "Washington" from destruction. He knows whereof he speaks, and that he deals in facts is evidenced by the startling revelations which have come out of Washington during the "secret" Congressional investigation since this address was delivered.

In the course of his remarks, he digressed a moment to give his hearers a bit of information from confidential sources that should arouse the ire of red-blooded Americans and cause them to demand of Congress a program of adequate defense, and the expulsion from Washington of the foreign and pacifist lobbyists who are coming to place this country in such a condition of unpreparedness that it would fall an easy prey to an enemy. The information was to the effect that, IN SIX NAVAL ENGAGEMENTS "played" by the United States Navy with the navy of another country, both navies in their present condition of "preparedness," THE AMERICAN SHIPS LOST EVERY PROBLEM IN FROM 21 TO 84 MINUTES!

Patriotism, alone, prompts the publication of this address—that patriotism which is the foundation stone of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West and which is exemplified in loyalty to the United States of America in times of peace as well as in times of war. Loyalty involves preparedness, for any contingency. This country is at peace today, but the handwriting on the wall indicates that it will be at war in the near future unless, in the meantime, our governing officials are aroused from their pacifist-induced sleep and provide adequate defense. Which is the better course to pursue, that which, through preparedness, will assure peace, or that which, through unpreparedness, will lead to war!—Editor.

"The British protest to gun elevation on thirteen American battleships brings the Limitation of Armament Treaty in question. The British and American interpretations, I feel, are entirely different. No alterations in side armor and caliber, in number or general type or mounting shall be permitted. The question of gun elevation is not mentioned in the treaty, but the British make a direct protest against the United States elevating its guns on thirteen ships, which is purely a British interpretation and is a claim made and unsupported by the text of the treaty itself. The question is an interpretation of the spirit of the treaty, and neither the letter nor the spirit give authority for such claim on the part of the British.

"Further, the letter and the spirit of the treaty are in question, based on the British naval program. The spirit of the treaty is in question, based on the Japanese naval program as at present. Since the conference was held, Japan's has become the largest naval program in the world. The naval powers have made changes and alterations in ships and guns that are denied by protest to this country under the treaty.

"The Limitation of Armament Treaty is not in effect, because article 9 of the Nine-Power Treaty to respect the integrity of China provides: 'The present treaty shall be ratified by the contracting powers in accordance with their respective constitutional methods and shall take effect on the date of the deposit of all the ratifications, which shall take place at Washington as soon as possible. The present treaty shall be ratified as soon as possible, in accordance with the constitutional methods of the signatory powers, and shall take effect on the deposit of all the ratifications, which shall take place at Washington.'

"The further scrapping and destroying of all types of ships should be held in abeyance until the Limitation of Armament Treaty is shown to be in full force and all treaties dependent upon it or in any way conditioned by it are ratified and approved by all the signatory powers.

"Each of the said treaties contained an article to the effect that it shall be necessary to have the same ratified by the contracting powers in accordance with their respective constitutional methods and that it shall take effect on a deposit of all the ratifications in Washington and the Government of the United States will transmit to the other contracting powers a certified copy of the process-verbal of the deposit of ratifications.

"Some of the treaties have been ratified, all of them have not. If a proper construction of the language used in the treaties be had, all of the seven treaties have to be ratified in the manner specified before one shall become effective. Then, in that event, no one of the treaties can be held operative, effective or binding.

"By treaty number one, the United States of America is allowed 525,850 capital ship tonnage, the British Empire 530,950 capital ship tonnage. The Secretary of the Navy has stated before the House committee that England is 20,000 tons in excess of capital ship tonnage. The British compute 'normal' displacement with a very light load aboard, and the United States computes it at almost the maximum load aboard. It is necessary, in order to reconcile the figures to give a proper basis of comparison, to add from four percent to twelve percent to the British tonnage.

"If we take the most conservative view possible, the British capital ships total 740,116 tons, as against 525,850 tons for the United States. Or, if we take the maximum, which can fairly be done, the British total is 797,048, as against 525,850 tons for the United States.

"I give as an example the British H. M. S. 'Renown.' It was the largest vessel to navigate the Panama Canal in 1920, according to the records of the Panama Canal Commission, displacing by the actual measurements of our officials 33,379 tons. The U. S. S. 'Mississippi' and 'Idaho' went through the locks the same year, but they did not approach the 'Renown.' At that time the 'Renown' was lightened for the prince's trip, so that it cannot be said that the vessel was overloaded or even fully loaded at this actual measurement of 33,379 tons. Therefore, the U. S. S. 'Idaho,' 32,000 tons, is not as large as the 'Renown,' 33,379 tons, despite the fact that the British listed the 'Renown' at only 26,500 tons. Since 1923 the 'Renown' has been blistered to the extent of 3,000 tons, so displacement is now 36,379 tons, or 9,879 tons over the British figures.

"All the vessels in the British list are carried on the official British navy list, except the 'Nelson' and the 'Rodney,' building. Note the comparison of vessels: England—Building, two; completed, twenty-four; total, twenty-six. United States—Building, none; completed, eighteen; total, eighteen.

"British and American naval intelligence officers report that much is being done in secret in Japan, and that it is impossible to learn to what extent Japan is building. The latest disclosure that Japan has elevated guns, is another fact. Are we to believe that Japan has carried out the treaty provisions?

"Does the Navy Department deny that Great Britain is not overtonnaged in capital ships allowed? A letter from the Navy Department dated January 31 1924, reads in part as follows: 'The Naval Treaty allowed the British to retain their system of measuring displacement tonnage, which gives them an advantage over us to an extent that their ships are on an average of four percent lighter than when figured by our system. For purposes of comparison, such as Mr. ——— makes, it is proper to compute the tonnage on one system, so he took the American system as a standard. Likewise, Mr. ——— used present dry tonnages instead of the Conference tonnage for individual ships, for seven of the British ships have undergone changes such as addition of bulges and special protective deck armor. The total present-day tonnages for the British is according to my figures 644,958, as shown by the right-hand column, but it ought to be stated that the British tonnage is computed on the American system.' Fifteen ships blistered.

"On completion of the 'Rodney' and the 'Nelson,' each of 35,000 tons (total of two 70,000 tons), it is proposed to scrap three of the 'King George V' type (total 76,500 tons) and one 'Thunderer,' 25,000 tons, a grand total of 101,500 tons, which will be replaced by 70,000 tons, a loss of 31,500 tons, bringing the total of the British navy to 707,100 tons, as against 535,204 tons for the United States.

"November 1924, when the U. S. S. 'Washington' was sunk in advance of the date set by the treaty, 30,000,000 of dollars, with a defense value superior to the entire Atlantic fleet of six old crippled ships, were destroyed before Congress could act.

"The British saved the 'Glorious' and the 'Courageous' by appropriating 70,000 pounds, or about $170,000, a ship to be changed or converted into aircraft carriers. Can it be done? Has it been done? We are allowed an additional 69,000 tons of air craft carriers in addition to the 'Lexington' and the 'Saratoga,' should they ever be completed and put into commission.

"Today, a move is on to rewrite and bring up to date the unratified Washington conference treaties on China and the Far East. France has never signed the 'open door' treaty relating to China, yet we made our sacrifice in the Pacific and surrendered to Japan the control.

"It has been proven and accepted that we do not stand 5-5-3 in capital ships, as provided by the treaty. The spirit of the treaty has been discarded by Great Britain, France and Japan. The spirit of the treaty is the foundation of peace. The United States paid in good faith and in the interest of peace, close to $500,000,000 in new ships and did not lay down one new vessel of war. Since the signing of the arms treaty, other powers have built and authorized 281 ships of war.

"We made the greatest sacrifice ever made in the interest of peace. We scrapped from the top new ships that would have ruled the seas. Great Britain scrapped from the bottom old ships that were out of date. Japan scrapped from the bottom old ships and some blueprints.

"We further surrendered the right to fortify the Philippines and Guam. We have not completed Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and completely ignored the demand for an adequate naval base on the Pacific Coast. We surrendered the Atlantic Ocean to the British and live on the friendship of Great Britain. WE HAVE SURRENDERED THE PACIFIC OCEAN TO JAPAN AND LIVE IN A FOOL'S PARADISE WAITING FOR JAPAN TO GET READY!

"The four-power pact was one of the main reasons for calling the limitation-of-arms parley, and on that pact we made our Pacific sacrifice.

"The British military experts say the earthquake set Japan back just one year in the development of her naval program, but five years hence she will have her full strength again. It should be noted that in all utterances of the British officials danger of war is not anticipated for several years. Experts other than those connected with the labor government foresee Japan turning first to China and the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies and Borneo, and then to Australia. Great Britain, anticipating that move, kept the Singapore base out of the treaty and can now go ahead and further build, develop and fortify the Singapore base.

"There are no restrictions on Hong Kong, another Gibraltar. We alone paid the price. Our weakness in the Far East is the British and Japanese strength.

"The English pound and the Japanese yen will remain at par. How long will the American dollar remain at par? The essentials of British and Japanese strategy won out on the

MONUMENT FOR HISTORIC SPOT

(DOROTHY V. GLOSTER.)

ONE OF THE OUTSTANDING DUTIES of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West is the preservation and restoration of landmarks and the marking, with suitable monuments, of the spots of historic interest to California.

Far in the extreme northwestern part of the state are the Lava Beds of Modoc and Siskiyou Counties. Only in the last few years have tourists and pleasure-seekers come to appreciate this section, so replete with natural wonders, with romance and with historic memories of the pioneer days of California.

Here it was that many a sturdy pioneer paid to Indian savagery the supreme sacrifice paid so oft by those in the vanguard of civilization. Here it was that General Fremont, ordered by the Mexican government to leave California, received, on his northward march to the Oregon, the message which caused him to return and participate in the military events which made California the territory of the United States. Here it was that the United States troops made their last stand against the warlike Modoc tribe of Indians.

Here it was that the gallant General Canby and his brave associates were treacherously murdered by the notorious Indian leader, Captain Jack who, under a flag of truce, sought a conference with General Canby and his staff. During the terrific battle which followed this act of treachery, the Indians entrenched themselves in the labyrinth of caves in which this section abounds. For days the United States troops fought against overwhelming odds, but eventually succeeded in cutting the Indians off from their water supply. Then the savages were forced to come out from their seemingly inaccessible hiding-places and sue for peace. These caves in which the Indians so long held the troops at bay are familiarly known in this section as "Captain Jack's Stronghold."

For many years some few persons each year

Pacific. If we should lose the Philippines and the Hawaiian Islands, in a few years we would be unknown in the Far East, unless we went in for a long war. It would take years of preparation and training before we could win, if at all. Putting us in that insecure position, how would the Limitation of Arms Treaty or any other treaty save us? Europe owes us $12,000,000,000. What would be the attitude of Europe? Human nature has not changed.

"When England was occupied with her fleet in the North Sea against Germany, Japan took advantage of that and made her demands on China, knowing full well no one could oppose. England knows her weakness is India, and Japan knows what England knows. The Singapore base will be built. Japan will not attack England's possessions or strength, but go after a much richer prize, the Philippines and the Hawaiian Islands. To break down any and all American influences in the Far East, the Exclusion Act gives her the cause and the material to preach to 800,000,000 Orientals who are denied equality under the exclusion law. The treaty is not a solution of peace. It is nothing more than changing to a different type of fighting ship, which we do not possess. The type we did possess we destroyed—a type that other powers could not or would not compete against. The spirit of the treaty aroused the spirit of Japan to build with feverish haste every type of ship and war equipment not included in the treaty. THE DAY JAPAN IS READY, JAPAN WILL STRIKE!

"A ringing appeal to the Japanese nation, to immediately prepare for war with the United States, is made in a series of articles published in the Japanese 'Diplomatic Review,' a quasi-official organ of Japan. Officials use this organ to express the administration's policy on national issues. The necessity for war is predicated on the American Immigration Law. It further states, 'Since a Japan-American war is unavoidable, the sooner it comes the better it will be for Japan. After England recovers her national strength, and after England and America, especially America, have developed their air forces, and still more, after a full accord is reached between England and Russia, our country, struggle as it may, can do nothing. However, with the conditions as they are today, when England and Russia have not yet formed a coalition, a Japan-American war certainly will not mean the destruction of our country.

"Not only that, but a show of determination have visited the spot to view the battleground and to marvel at the prehistoric hieroglyphs with which the walls of cliffs and caves are covered. Many of these are ruthless souvenir hunters, who not only carry away the relics to be found there, but despoil the natural beauty of the section, not even hesitating to carve the names upon the old wooden cross which the soldiers erected to mark the spot where General Canby fell.

To prevent further desecration, the people of Northern California are planning, through the congressmen, to petition the Federal Government, asking that a national monument be created of these Lava Beds. When we speak of national monument we mean that a section of country so designated is under the direct supervision of the federal authorities and is protected from vandalism by special federal laws and regulations.

Following along the line of duty mapped out by the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, Alturas Parlor No. 159 has undertaken the task of erecting, from native material, a monument that will mark for all time one of the bloodiest battlegrounds of Indian warfare.

It is particularly desired that this monument be erected and dedicated while those few pioneers of this section who took part in the battle are still here to participate in the ceremony that will convey to them the appreciation posterity.

Alturas Parlor is a small one in number, but its members, descendants of Pioneers, are so loyal to California traditions and each and every one will enthusiastically lend her efforts to assist the committee in charge in creating a fund for the erection of this monument. The following members compose this committee: Mr. Gertrude French, Mrs. May Gooch and Recording Secretary Dorothy V. Gloster.

The committee asks that all persons throughout the state, especially in Northern California who are interested in this movement and wish to assist financially or otherwise, communicate with the committee at an early date.

to put through our demands even at the risk war, is the only way we can make America reconsider. By pushing this determination we will present a powerful reason for a peaceful settlement of the question. We earnestly desire to maintain permanent peace with America. However, that peace must be on a basis of equality, friendly sentiment and justice. This means that our demands upon America must include the following points: (1) Immediate repeal of the recent Japanese exclusion law. Also as the gentlemen's agreement was contrary to the demands of the Japanese people, we cannot consent to its restoration in its old form. (2) The humane admission of Japanese to America. (3) Naturalization of Japanese on the same conditions as other aliens. (4) According Japanese residents the same legal rights and treatment as other aliens. Not a single modification or concession can be made in those demands of our country to America.

"Our people must unite now with the whole strength of our combined power and concentrate on the single purpose of putting through their demands. If a satisfactory settlement cannot be secured in a short specified time by peaceful means, there is nothing to do but to appeal to arms. In preparation for this, our people must unite, recognize the Russian Government and go along fearlessly in alliance with Russia. Our people must arouse themselves in this crisis and encourage the Government. THE JAPANESE, AND RUSSIAN TREATY HAS BEEN MADE!

"In Manchuria and in Shantung the Japanese have seized control. In this territory, at least Japan has closed the door and nailed it shut. The Japanese government has driven out every American merchant, closed the American mission and schools, and compelled our government to recall our consul-general, who reported the Japanese breach of faith.

"The professor of international law at the Imperial University at Tokyo delivered a lecture on the rights of aliens in foreign countries, among other things saying: 'The United States Government has been guilty of a violation of its treaty agreements with Japan in failing to prevent the passage of the Alien Land Law of California. Japan does not intend long to endure this violation of her international rights. Unless the Alien Land Law is repealed by California and unless the United States Government apologizes to the Japanese Government for its discrimination against Japanese subjects, the Imperial Government will in the near future demand send upon the California coast, which is practically unfortified; within ten days the Imperial Government will land 500,000 Japanese troops and take possession of the State of California!"

"The Americans are a decadent people, without spirit, unmilitary, and unwilling to resent insult. The American armies are insignificant in size, and the American navy is made up of amateur seamen. The Americans are powerless to prevent the Imperial Japanese Government from asserting its rights when it is ready to assert them."

"Admiral Takarabe has stated, 'While I am here and hold the portfolio of the navy, none shall interfere in the affairs of the navy. I shoulder the entire heavy responsibility for the defense of the empire. I am opposed to post-ponement and desire to maintain what is necessary for national defense.' Admiral Takarabe is over all opposition. The budget, approximately 900,000,000 yen, is asked for. Japan asks as much for the yen as we do for the dollar."

"This is the letter and spirit of the treaty: The contracting powers agree to limit their respective naval armaments as provided in the present treaty. The treaty, as has been stated, is based on capital ship tonnage; gun elevation is not mentioned. It is only the British who have objected to our elevation of guns. All naval, naval official and other interpretations in this country of the treaty give us the right to elevate our guns on thirteen capital ships. We respect the British protest and remain far below the treaty ratio, though we have pledged ourselves to maintain the navy to the treaty ratio."

"The British protest can only be based on two reasons: First, they do not trust us to equal their fleet in gun fire. Second, they prefer to keep us inferior in gun fire to Japan. We can never reach the treaty ratio until our capital ships are equal to the British and Japanese capital ships in gun range. Americans believed that 5-5-3 meant equality to the British and 5-3 over Japan. The British outgeneraled us at the conference. The American people were deceived. However, the interpretation of the treaty is not against gun elevation, and we have the right to live up to that phase of the treaty obligation. It is only the British objection that stops us."

"A War College letter of November 1924 reads, in part, as follows: 'The people here are much interested in what Hughes disclosed, and that is evident after the subject has been studied. Every one here, from the top down, has expressed himself as being glad the matter will be exposed. We think Congress will have its eyes opened. As it is, we are afraid the whole matter will be buried, officers will be misled, and those who can and will have the opportunity to tell the real facts, whose opinion will carry weight throughout the country, will lay down the job too many axes to grind. I may be wrong, but why should the navy hold the sack? At the country know wherein the fault lies. The Democrats are as much at fault as the Republicans. We were sold out at the Washington conference. You should have heard what a participant in the Washington conference had to say. You should read the confidential records in the archives here and what the General Board and the naval experts recommend and what Mr. Hughes drew his pencil through.'

"A treaty is of little value, unless all parties to the treaty have honest intent. The Limitation of Arms Treaty has little peace value unless honest in spirit. The object of the treaty was to weaken us, and will weaken us further. It is being used by foreign powers to strengthen themselves in all modern equipment and war craft not included in the treaty. It is being used by foreign powers as propaganda to keep us weak and kill the spirit of defense and the service. It is being used by the pacifists and the Americans to weaken us further and spread the doctrine through America."

"Certain religious orders and colleges have stated they will not defend, even if invaded. The history of our country has been one of fight since the first man stepped on our shores. We fight for freedom, another war almost destroyed the republic, the last war, had we been prepared, may never have been fought."

"The strong are seldom challenged. Nations, like individuals, have position, influence and credit based on power. Only a nation, corporation or individual that has power can survive. History shows not one nation survived longer than its power lasted. Law, justice and brotherly love never kept, re-established or rebuilt a nation. Today we are the richest nation in the world. A wave of impractical sentimentalism is passing over the country, flamed by foreign and pacifist propaganda to disarm, to enter the League of Nations, to enter the World Court."

"To disarm, is to surrender! Foreign entangements will follow. We have never qualified to combat Europe diplomatically. Europe's cause is the common cause of Europe; once entangled we could never withdraw. The document has never been written that gives one vote an equal chance against numbers. Under our past plan, we have prospered and contributed much to the world, but always through our own laws and defenses. At the Washington conference we surrendered that right in the interest of peace."

"Foreign powers took advantage of our sincere efforts and sacrifices. We entered as fools and came out sadder, but wiser, men. Now, knowing that we alone paid the price and surrendered our supremacy, any attempt to live up to the treaty obligation or maintain the ratio brings an unwarranted protest. Based on a British interpretation of the treaty, by protesting equal gun range we are denied the ratio equality—we are denied the right to defend."

"Weight of ships means no more than the weight of men in a fight. It is the ability to hit. The only shots that count in any battle are the shots that hit; the only power in any agreement is your ability to hit. America scrapped thirteen new ships at the conference with the ability to hit. America is denied the right to make it possible for thirteen old ships to hit. Our sacrifice was double at the Washington conference. We paid with twenty-six capital ships in hitting power. It is unbelievable that American statesmen would make such a bargain, and deliver us lock, stock and barrel. The result of comparative war problems shows our complete inferiority as the result of the treaty."

"Are the American people willing to allow one man, with one vote, to sit at a table in a foreign land and barter away the nation? Nationalization, our wealth, the foreign debt, the Panama Canal, the immigration law, the exclusion law would all go into the discard. We would stand the same chances as any inexperienced young man of wealth entering a game against experienced gamblers. Human nature has not changed in commercial, national or international life. Each man, as each corporation or nation, looks for weak spots, and strikes at the psychological time. OUR ONLY GUARANTEE OF SECURITY OR PEACE LIES IN AN ADEQUATE DEFENSE!"

"America does not covet, for that reason alone we are qualified to command power and be ready. To surrender our power or surrender our rights to make our own laws, would open our doors to vast immigration that would cause a national war that could destroy our government. Our future nationalization demands that we restrict all immigration, and bar Orientals

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

GOOD INVESTMENT

GOLD DISCOVERY DAY, JANUARY 24, there was introduced in the Senate of the California Legislature a bill (S. B. 727) providing for the establishment of the California State Historical Association, the affairs of which shall be conducted by a board of fifteen trustees, who shall serve without financial remuneration. For the support of the association during the seventy-seventh and seventy-eighth fiscal years, the bill carries an appropriation of $15,000.

The purpose of the association is to promote interest in and disseminate knowledge of the history of California, one of the state's real assets. Other states, recognizing the proper preservation of their history as an essential function of the state, have associations similar to the one proposed supported by public funds, and California, with a far more interesting historical background, should follow their example.

The bill has the endorsement of practically every club and organization in the state engaged in history and landmarks work, for their members, as well as those of commercial organizations, appreciate the value of California's history, and the necessity for action along lines proposed by the association. California can make no better investment, than by putting the small sum of $15,000 into this worthy cause.

The Grizzly Bear solicits, at the hands of the legislators and Governor Friend W. Richardson, favorable consideration of Senate Bill 727, and urges its readers, also, to request the lawmakers at Sacramento and the Governor to give California a state historical association and the appropriation sought for its support.

That the Federal Immigration Law with the ineligible-to-citizenship alien exclusion provision is lessening the inflow of Japs, is indicated in the following report, issued February 20 by the California Joint Immigration Committee, representing the American Legion of California, the State Grange, the State Federation of Labor and the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West:

"The claim was made by Japan and her friends in this country that the 'Gentlemen's Agreement,' as operated by Japan, was successfully accomplishing its purpose of keeping out Japanese immigration; and, therefore, that the inclusion in the Immigration Act of a general provision excluding all aliens ineligible to citizenship was an unnecessary affront to Japan.

"In view of that claim a comparison of the number of Japanese immigrants who secured admission during the last six months of 1924 under operation of the new law with the number admitted during the similar period in 1922 and 1923, respectively, under the 'Gentlemen's Agreement,' will prove interesting.

"San Francisco admitted in the last six months of 1924, 107 Japanese immigrants, while the number admitted in 1922 and 1923 was 1,019 and 942, respectively. During the first six months of 1924 (the last six months under the agreement), that port admitted 2,072 Japanese immigrants. Seattle admitted in the last six months of 1924, 94 Japanese immigrants, while in the similar period in 1923 the number was 438. Honolulu admitted an average of 65 Japanese immigrants per month during the last months of 1924, while the average in preceding years was 250, and during the first six months of 1924, 385.

"So, it appears that under normal conditions the 'Gentlemen's Agreement' permitted entrance at our three ports, in a given period of time, of from four to ten times as many Japanese immigrants as have been able to come in under the new Immigration Act, and that, when taking full advantage of the privileges conceded by that compact, Japan was able to send in as high as twenty times as many as are now coming in.

"Under the present law there are admitted no new 'immigrants,' as the term is defined in the act. The enumeration above includes diplomats, tourists, students and merchants, who are still entitled to enter, but not for permanent settlement."

B. Ogden Chisholm, the United States' representative on the International Prison Commission, in a recent San Francisco address declared: "Statistics gathered by a commission show there has been a staggering increase of 500 percent in illegitimacy in this country, due for the most part to prohibition and the consequent spread of drinking among boys and girls."

Astounding, but true! Laws never have, and never will, correct people's morals. We have far too many laws designed to regulate personal habits. They should all be eliminated, and in their stead should be provided education for the masses.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Will C. Wood received a letter from Fanny Bixby Spencer of Costa Mesa, Orange County, who wants "The Star Spangled Banner" banned from the public schools, because it "is unquestionably the most bombastic, fratricidal and bloodthirsty

Fanny admits she is afflicted with Jordanian, having become infected by the peace-bug, and inquires, "how can we hope for peace?" It is national anthem be taught the schoolchildren generation after generation.

We cannot have peace, unless patriotism instilled in the hearts and minds of all citizens. "The Star Spangled Banner" incites only patriotism and loyalty. If any banning is to be done for the country's good it should be applied somewhere else than to the national anthem.

Los Angeles City is now in the throes of municipal election. What Los Angeles needs, is public officials of big vision. It is developed into a metropolis, except as to public-servants, most of whom are now, and always have been, of the small-town caliber.

In an address before a joint session of the Wyoming Legislature, William P. Larkin declared: "The man or woman who, possessing the precious right of voting, does not exercise that right, has done something to lower the esteem of the franchise of American democracy and to injure the ideals of our country; and that extent has been disloyalty to America. . . . It may be paradoxical, but it is certainly true that in falling off from 80 percent in the exercise of our suffrage to less than 50 percent our democracy has suffered a severe setback in recent years. In other words, while as a nation we have been progressing in power, prestige and prosperity, our civic consciousness has gone backward."

NATIVE SONS NOT INDIFFERENT TO STATE'S WELFARE

"Whatever is said of the Native Sons of the Golden West and their official publication The Grizzly Bear, no one can accuse them of indifference to the welfare of the State of California. A glance at any copy of the paper will disclose some snappy articles defending the good name of the Golden West and outlining a policy that will defend it.

"A recent article discusses the present policy of the United States in its naval affairs and points out that too much credit cannot be given the naval limitation agreement. As a matter of fact, the appropriations for naval purposes by the United States, Japan and Great Britain offer some food for thought along this line. Uncle Sam may be in a better position to speak on the subject than the rest of us, but those figures are not altogether reassuring."—Sebastopol Journal.

AGUA FRIA'S HIDDEN TREASURE

(JOHN L. DEXTER.)

STILL SAFELY TUCKED AWAY BEneath the sacred sod of "Silent" Agua Fria, somewhere, lies the pot of gold that has escaped the eye of the most alert, the most cunning and the most persistent of treasure-seekers for three-quarters of a century. Here the seer, the fortune-teller and even the crystal-gazer has met defeat.
But, sometime, even the sacred sod of this mystic city will offer up its treasure when good "Dame Fortune" guides the lucky one to the end of his rainbow.

Our story dates away back to the days of the Pioneers, when California was yet very young and when Mariposa and Agua Fria were the necess for the gold-seeker. At this time Agua Fria was the county seat of Mariposa County, then a vast empire in itself, extending from the Tuolumne County line on the north to the Los Angeles County line on the south, and from the summit of the Coast Ranges to the State of Nevada, and comprising almost one-seventh of the entire State of California.

At this time J. F. A. Marr was entrusted with the safekeeping of the county funds, he having been elected to the position of county treasurer the previous year, when the state gained its statehood. In those days there was neither bank nor vault in which to keep the treasure and, for safekeeping, men usually looked to mother earth for protection of their valuables from the thieving gangs of outlaws and robbers who infested the country.

December 12 1851 dawned bright and clear in the Mariposa hills and County Treasurer
Marr arose bright and early for a few days' trip among the mines, collecting the annual foreign tax which, by law, was an important part of his official duty. He had already collected and had in his possession $15,000 in fifty-dollar gold slugs, which were safely hidden before he began his fateful journey.

Mounting his trusty saddle-horse he rode happily away on this beautiful morning over the hills and across streams, halting here and there to collect from the tardy ones who had failed to pay their percapita tax previously. As the day advanced Marr saw that the sky was becoming overcast with clouds and that a storm was brewing, so he hastened on a little faster toward the Lewis store, now the Harless home on the main road between Mariposa and Le Grand, where he had planned to spend the night.

The storm finally broke in all its fury and the rain poured down in torrents, filling the streams until the banks overflowed. Only one more small stream ahead and the hungry, tired, rain-trenched man would be safely sheltered from the storm.

He reached Deadman's Creek, hardly more than a stone's throw from his destination; the stream was at its height, a madly roaring torrent. The rider paused a moment, then urged his faithful mount into the waters. The swift current hurled the animal from its feet and man and horse were carried down the stream to a watery grave.

The following day men from the store, who saw the accident, went forth to search for the unfortunate and faithful servant of his people.
His body was recovered and tenderly cared for,
later being removed to the home at Agua Fria, which this man loved so well, and then to the little cemetery which time has almost cast into oblivion.

Those three hundred shiny, golden slugs, after more than three-score years and ten of winter's rains and summer's suns beating down upon them, must be stained and rusty now.

Lucky will be he who finds the hiding-place of these golden slugs for, today, there is many a man who would cross the continent, willing to pay four-fold their metallic value for them.

Faithful to his trust and duty, a fitting memorial should be dedicated to this man who carried his official secret even unto death.

1924 general election lists California fourth among the states showing an increase, compared with the 1920 vote. In the latter year, 48.9 percent of the vote was cast, and in 1924, 61.7 percent, a gain of 26.1 percent. Which would indicate that, in California, civic consciousness has not gone backward.

Recently the daily press gave considerable space to the reported unearthing, for the hundredth-and-more time, of the "famous gold nugget" found by James W. Marshall at Coloma, El Dorado County, in 1848. The latest discoverer, of course, wanted to dispose of his find at a good figure.

Phil Bekeart of San Francisco, perhaps the best-informed man living today, as regards Marshall and his gold discovery, says: "The nugget has been for sale for years. It was found by Marshall four and a half miles away from Co-loma and six months after the original discovery of gold. The actual first gold was a flake, about the size of a fingernail, that is now preserved with thousands of other specimens in the Smithsonian Institution."

Several other states are now following California's course of enacting laws prohibiting aliens ineligible to citizenship from getting control of agricultural land.

California, being the original mecca for the peaceful-invasion hosts of the mikado, had to pioneer the way. Now that the Japs are spreading over the country, other invaded states appreciate the necessity for like action.

Time will prove to the nation at large that California's stand regarding the Japs is right, and that the welfare of the country demands the routing from our shores of the unwanted yellows.

Justice was certainly blind in the case of the former cashier of a Willits, Mendocino County, bank who was found guilty of embezzlement in the federal court at San Francisco and assessed a fine of $250. His peculations are said to have amounted to close onto $80,000! Had he stolen a loaf of bread, probably life in a federal penitentiary would have been meted out to him.

Attention of readers of The Grizzly Bear is called to the article headed "Greater Unity Week," by J. David Larson of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, on page twenty of this issue: It is filled to overflowing with meat for thought.

Unity of action means everything, to organizations as well as to communities. Without it, complete success cannot be had, but with it, any sane undertaking can be successfully accomplished. Let's have unity of action, Native Sons and Native Daughters, in everything we undertake.

After a visit to the East, May C. Lassen has returned to California, and in a letter to the editor of The Grizzly Bear from San Francisco says, among other things: "My, but I am glad to get back. Can now truthfully state that my California is different from any other state in the union. It is the Eden of the world, and no wonder the Japanese want it."

"The Easterners have not the slightest conception of what the Japanese menace really means to California. To them, it means nothing. Furthermore, they look upon California as being at the end of another world." Accompanying the letter were the following lines, entitled, "To California":

"On the heights I stand!
Mark the slanting rays
Of a setting sun
Creep through tall pine trees,
Of noble forests grand.
'Tis California! my native land.
Here rivers, vast mountains,
Rushing falls and streams,
Lead one ever on to dreams.
While glorious Nature is seen,
Reigning in majesty serene.
Oh California! an alien
Long from your sunny shore,
Let me linger near the bosom
Of your sloping hills, evermore."

STRONG LINK ADDED TO N. S. CHAIN

MINGLING THEIR VOICES WITH THE music of the waves of the Pacific, representatives of the Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West instituted Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 of San Pedro, February 15. The ceremonies were held in Sepulveda Park at White Point—a portion of the Palo Verdes rancho granted to the Sepulveda family in 1818. It was, indeed, an inspiring occasion! One hundred and twenty-five native Californians, residents of San Pedro and many of them descendants of the state's earliest Pioneers, enrolled as charter members of the Parlor. The institution took place in the open, at the foot of a cliff, on the Pacific's shore, with the blue canopy of heaven overhead and the sun shedding rays of gladness upon the assemblage and the occasion. And so, under most auspicious conditions, at a enchanted spot, was brought into being another link which will add strength to the chain of Native Sonism.

Led by the U.S.S. "California" band playing "California, Here I Come," the Sepulveda Parlor candidates, headed by Ramon D. Sepulveda and James H. Dodson Sr., were presented for initiation, and the ritual was exemplified by the following: Grand President Edward J. Lynch, president; Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, senior past president; Past Grand President William I. Traeger, junior past president; Grand First Vice-president Fletcher A. Cutler, first vice-president; Grand Secretary John T. Regan, second vice-president; Grand Trustee John T. Newell, third vice-president; T. Dwight Crittenden (Ramona 109), marshal; L. A. Packard (Los Angeles 45), inside sentinel; J. F. Velasco Jr. (Los Angeles 45), outside sentinel; Julius Krause (Ramona 109), organist.

Having become members of the Order, the 125 candidates were duly constituted Sepulveda Parlor No. 263, and then followed the installation of the Parlor's officers by D.D.G.P. Ronald M. Ross: Ramon D. Sepulveda, senior past president; James H. Dodson Sr., junior past president; James H. Dodson Jr., president; William A. Reuter, first vice-president; Eloi Amar, second vice-president; Edward G. Baldwin, third vice-president; Robert Snodgrass, marshal; Clyde H. Foote, inside sentinel; Charles Cassidy, outside sentinel; Leonardo Anderson, treasurer; John Martin Jr., financial secretary; Ben Sepulveda, recording secretary; James W. Mee, John J. Gandino, John J. Kaveney, trustees.

President Dodson, in the new Parlor's behalf, thanked those who, by their presence, had given encouragement, and promised that Sepulveda would unhesitatingly carry on the work of the Order in its district. Responding to his call, Grand President Lynch said the occasion was a momentous one, and that in the Parlor's institution new history had been made for the Order, this being the first time a Parlor had been instituted out of doors and that the charter members far exceeded in number those of any other Parlor.

Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, the oratorical giant of the redwoods, delivered one of the most wonderful addresses of his career in the Order. He pictured in beautiful words the grandeur and greatness of California, and paid magnificent tribute to the Pioneers who laid the cornerstone of the commonwealth. On behalf of Los Angeles Parlor, President Ronald M. Ross presented Sepulveda with the Holy Bible, President Edward Ayers, on behalf of Vaquero Parlor, presented an American Flag, and Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, for Ramona Parlor, tendered the map of the state. Dr. S. T. Luce extended greetings for Long Beach Parlor, and Charles E. McElvaine performed a like service for Arrowhead Parlor.

Faithful, hardworking Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, who organized Sepulveda Parlor, was roundly applauded when he arose to respond to President Dodson's invitation to address the gathering. In the course of his remarks he lauded those who had given him every assistance in his endeavors: Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Ramon Sepulveda, Edward Reese, Thomas R. Evans, James Dodson Jr., E. E. Baldwin, William A. Reuter, Mose Bennett, Eloi Amar and numerous others. Nowhere, he

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"NOON."

By Kathleen Norris; Doubleday, Page & Company, Publishers, Garden City; Price, $1.50.

Usually, one shrinks with dread at having to wade through an autobiography. Dry, egotistical, boring, tedious, are adjectives conjured to mind by the mere mention of the word. Not so with "Noon." Always a delightful writer, Kathleen Norris turns this short sketch of her life into a story as charming and fascinating as any of her fictions. There is plenty of reality, but not a prosaic moment, in the whole of the telling.

From happy, carefree childhood spent in Mill Valley, Marin County, California, familiar background to many of her novels—the beloved authoress and her brothers and sisters were suddenly pitched headlong into sorrow and responsibility by the death of their parents. Then followed years of bitter struggle against poverty, "but we never despaired," writes Mrs. Norris. "All this was but a passing phase; 'we will certainly laugh at this some day.' We all said buoyantly, laughing even then." A book-keeper, a saleswoman, a companion, a school-teacher, a librarian, superintendent of children's parties and reporter, are a few of the positions the girl, Kathleen, pluckily held.

But just around the corner lurked romance and love. Kathleen skated unexpectedly straight into their trap, into the heart of Charles Norris. There is a great deal more—of their married life in New York, how Kathleen began to write, how the famous and beloved "Mother" came to be written. But, really, it is not fair to tell any more. "Noon" is too bright a bit to mar with a smattering of review.

"SARD HARKER."

By John Masefield; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.50.

Adventures that vie with those of Sinbad, the sailor, befall Sard Harker in his frustrated attempt to return to his ship, anchored in the harbor of Las Palomas.

Fourteen days he spent, wandering penniless, in constant danger of being shot or knifed, running the risk of freezing to death in the snowy Sierras or starving to death in a dreary desert, in his desperate struggle to reach the ship. Indomitable will and a determination to save an endangered woman, the girl he had loved since childhood, serve to make good his fight for safety.

With bated breath and a prickling scalp, one follows the tale of the dauntless Sard Harker. John Masefield has written not only fiction, but he is also the author of "Salt-Water Poems and Ballads" and other poems characterized by their rollicking, sea-breezing lilt.

"ANYTHING BUT THE TRUTH."

By Carolyn Wells; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

"Another Fleming Stone Detective Story," and, it might well be added, why read another, having read one. Carolyn Wells seems inordinately fond of a favored plot, namely, unfathomable murder (done with knife). Bungling second-rate detectives accuse beautiful, young girl (third degree), loyal, shrewd, housekeeper devotee of Y. G. Plot thickens, darkness, no solution. Enter Fleming Stone, flashlight, spotlight, limelight—mystery solved, a la Sherlock Holmes, and all live happily ever after.

If you have read "Prillilgirl," then there is no need to bother with "Anything But the Truth." The only noticeable differences between the two being a dagger as the weapon of crime in the one—a carving knife is used in "Anything But the Truth" with excellent results—and the heroine, being a faster worker in "Prillilgirl," married before, instead of after, the crime. Using the title as an index, the book may be enjoyed at its face-value, as "Anything But the Truth." Please don't expect more!

"CENTERVILLE, U. S. A."

By Charles Merz; the Century Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

New York may boast of her teeming millions, but "There are more Centervilles in the United States than towns of any other name," according to the U. S. census reports. Surely, then, Centervilles are due some share of the limelight, and get it under the triumphant pen of Charles Merz.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

AGRICULTURAL INDUSTRY PROMISES WELL

SPRING OPENS IN CALIFORNIA WITH prospects for agriculture better than for many years. In most parts of the state the seasonal rains have been sufficient. Deficiencies in precipitation are the exception this year, rather than the rule as was the case last year and the year before. Along the Sierras the snowfall is somewhat below normal toward the north, but further south, where the rainfall in the valleys has been lighter, the snowfall on the higher elevations has been heavier. There should be plenty of water in the streams for irrigation, and with this sufficiency of moisture comes the assurance of crops.

Fruit has come through the winter in excellent shape. Fall-sown grain is doing well and prospects for good prices are excellent. Cotton acreages all over the state will be increased, and here again prices should be more than fair this year. Livestock is on the upgrade. Sheep and wool growers have had no complaint in the past two years, save that live lambs could not go to Eastern markets last season. The last quarantine restriction preventing this was removed in February. The cattle situation is improving, and credit arrangements are coming as a result of the protests of the California members of President Coolidge's agricultural advisory commission, and a tariff on hides and animal fats seems likely. There is a world hog shortage, and prospects are that California hog growers will turn losses to profits this year.

Taking it from every angle, and overlooking the exceptions that accompany every rule, the agricultural industry in California promises well this year.

LABORATORY NEEDED.

The question of the disposal of cull fruits is one that is becoming more and more important as production increases in California. With increased acreages there is an increase in the amount of fruit produced, quite naturally; and there no longer is a demand or a market for the inferior grades. This poor stuff, shipped regardless of conditions, too many times has had the effect of breaking down the markets and causing a general loss all along the line. But until poor fruit no longer is produced—and that horticultural millennium is far away—there remains the problem of the slightly blemished or undersized fruit, perfectly good and fit for consumption, but not for shipping.

The question of its disposal is a real one. The University of California has been doing a lot of work along this line, and has developed one or two by-products that appear to be real successes, in that they can be manufactured and sold at a price that will give the grower a profit on this cull stuff. The research men at the university, however, have no adequate laboratory for their work and the item of about $100,000 for a building such as would be needed, to be shared with one or two other divisions of the institution, was stricken from the budget of the College of Agriculture by the Board of Control.

Recently, at a meeting of horticultural interests called by the California Olive Association, means for obtaining this money were considered, and it finally was decided to back what is known as the Noyes bill, introduced in the Assembly of the Legislature, which will be amended to include this appropriation so much desired. It is believed this bill can be passed and that it has a fair chance of being signed by the governor. In addition to the working out of by-products problems, which interested the pear growers and others at the meeting mentioned, the botulinus situation in olives is being given attention by the fruit products division of the university, and it was this that led the olive interests to call the conference.

WATCH FOR FUNGUS GROWTHS.

Whether it was in a commercial orchard or in a backyard garden that grafts were made this winter, watch should be kept to see that the wax that completed the operation is tight. Rewaxing to prevent the entrance of water, where the surface has become exposed, may save the tree as well as the graft. If large limbs were cut from the trees in pruning, and the surfaces left exposed, it will be well to paint them over with a good lead paint right now. Don't let fungus growths get a start.

There are many orchards in California today where trees are being pulled out, when they should be at the height of their productiveness, because of carelessness in cutting out limbs. The cut, which has been made by this season of the year of course, should be close and in the direction of the flow of the sap, otherwise it cannot heal over. In case grafts do not grow, cut the limb clean, to a bud if possible, and paint it over. New bark cannot grow over square shoulders, but if the work is done properly, the stump will heal.

START A GARDEN.

Spring gardening has started. In the earlier districts of the state, already early vegetables are being used from the backyards, and from one end of California to the other the annual garden awakening has come. There is more than merely the use of vacant land in the planting of the garden, economically important as that is.

In the first place, vegetables and fruit from the garden do save on the grocery bill. Planting favorite varieties insures a supply of these throughout the season. Vegetables fresh from the garden have a flavor not to be found in those purchased after two or three days of wilting and drying. The exercise given the city worker is not to be overlooked.

Above all, interest aroused in the growing and cultivation of plants in the soil is important. To him who never has had a garden, who knows nothing of its wonders and whose interest never has been enveloped in watching the growing of vegetables and flowers, there is awaiting a never-ceasing fount of entertainment and instruction.

It is this that takes people to the suburbs, and keeps them there.

The desire for land, which is about the only explanation that can be given for most farmers remaining in the industry, is inborn; and is satisfied by the backyard garden. Let him who never has grown a garden start one this spring, if he has the soil. And in starting, remember that the digging is all important; dig well and deeply, prepare a good seedbed, don't crowd the plants, water when moisture is needed, and the results will repay the effort many times over.

THE ROSE POPULAR.

No flower is more popular or more easily grown, under all conditions, than the rose. Easily propagated and given a reasonable amount of attention, the rose is a delight to the home, be it urban or rural. If a blossom delights, put it in water and keep it as long as possible. Then cut off the blossom, put the stem in light, loose soil and keep it moist. It will grow.

One of the surest and least inexpensive methods is to invert a fruit jar over the cutting.

When the cutting is rooted, plant it in the open and give it water and cultivation. Don't water it in the late afternoon, if in a district where there is apt to be mildew. Prune heavily in the winter or early spring, to from five to seven good strong canes of the previous season's growth. This trims down what may be a beautiful, big bush to a small one, as the canes should be cut to from eighteen inches to two feet, but if a profusion of splendid blossoms is wanted, it is necessary.

COTTON GROWING EXPANDS.

Cotton will be grown in greater quantities this year than ever before known in California agriculture. Heretofore the industry has been confined to Imperial and Riverside Counties and to the southern San Joaquin Valley. However, with the spread of trial plantings in the lower San Joaquin Valley and in the Sacramento Valley as far north as Redding, it appears certain now that the industry will be rooted firmly from the Mexican line to Shasta County.

This year Madera, Merced, Stanislaus, San Joaquin, Sacramento, Yolo, Sutter, Butte, Yuba, Glenn, Colusa and Tehama Counties are sure to be added to the list of those growing cotton on a commercial scale. Of these new counties, Glenn, Colusa and Butte will be the principal additions in the north. There, considerable acreages will be planted. Experiments in the last two or three years have shown cotton can be grown successfully farther north than it has in the past, that the quality and yield are good, and that it will mature.

INTELLIGENT SPRAYING.

With the spring, comes to the owner of fruit trees the necessity of protecting them from the ravages of the various pests that importations have brought to California. So big is the state and its climatic and soil conditions extend over such a wide range, that directions for spraying must necessarily vary with each locality. Where the agricultural extension service of the University of California maintains an office, and this is in more than forty counties of the state, or where there is a county horticultural commission, and this applies to nearly every county, an appeal for advice will bring information that will fit the necessity.

If for any reason information is not available from such sources, a study must be made of what is being done in other localities, to profit by experience gained there. Haphazard spraying is money wasted. The grower must know for what he is spraying, and then be sure the materials and time are right. Combatting orchard pests is a necessary part of the California horticultural program, but it must be done intelligently.

ELECTRICITY TO FIGHT FROST.

What may prove a movement that will revolutionize the frost fighting methods of California, is being tried in Napa County. Instead of the common smudge-pots or orchard heaters burning oil, electric heaters, designed for this particular purpose, are being tried. If the cost of installation can be reduced to a reasonable figure, it is quite likely this equipment may in time replace the old.

Certainly new orchards that are to be equipped against cold in the future will use electricity, if it is available, and provided, also, the cost can be made comparable. The advantages are many and obvious. Instead of the smudge that not only is troublesome but actually damaging to house furnishings and store stocks, electricity furnishes a clean heat. There is no perilous delay in lighting heaters or pots, or danger of waiting until the frost has come, for a thermostat automatically turns on the heat in all parts of the orchard at the same time, when the danger point is reached.

SUGGESTION WORTHY A TRIAL.

Noticing that vines in an adjoining vineyard that had been planted near an irrigation ditch seemed to resist phylloxera, G. R. Goldman, a farmer of Tulare County, tried winter irrigation to check the disease. He claims his practice not only has checked it and has restored production to normal, but that his soil and vines are in much better condition than before he began using water in the winter time.

This news will be of much interest throughout the state, where phylloxera is a vine disease that has wrought much damage and has been responsible for losses of entire vineyards. Cautious growers, however, will give the method a trial on a part of their vines before attempting it over their whole planting, for a difference of conditions may make a difference in results, and may cause soil developments that are not desired.

FORESTRY: WHAT IS IT?

FORESTRY IS NOT SOME VAGUE THEORY; it is not "Woodsman Spare That Tree" oratory. Forestry is the basis of our civilization. It has been variously defined as a policy, a science, an art and a business. It is all of these.

Briefly, forestry is the growing and wise use of trees for lumber. It means the growing of timber on land unsuited for other use. It keeps such land busy continuously producing timber and other forest products for the benefit of mankind. It treats the forests as a series of agricultural crops, to be grown, cared for and harvested in uninterrupted succession. A forest is not a mine, to be worked out and abandoned. Forestry seeks to make the land yield just as much in the way of forest products as is possible.

Foresters recognize their crop as a necessity in industry and in the life of every civilized man, but before they can apply fully the science and art of forestry to make the forests of this country yield the greatest good to mankind, certain things are necessary. Laws must be revised, policies worked out, money made available, and man-caused fires prevented. To do these things, public education is needed. Citizens must know what forestry is and what its benefits are before they will want to have forestry practiced.

ONLY GOD CAN MAKE A TREE.

Sergeant Joyce Kilmer, who made the supreme sacrifice for his country upon the battlefields of France, was the author of these immortal lines:

"I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree;
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet-flowing breast;
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree."

LOS ANGELES BANK IN NEW HOME

Opening of the principal offices of the Hellman Commercial Trust and Savings Bank in the $2,000,000 Hellman Bank Building, Seventh and Spring streets, marked the culmination of progressive efforts to which native sons have contributed nearly the total of leadership and constructive activities.

The great financial house of Hellman is directed by Marco H. Hellman, president, and Irving H. Hellman, vice-president, both born in California, where they obtained their financial education at their father's side. Herman W. Hellman, founder of the bank, located in Los Angeles in the late '50s, when a boy of fifteen, and passed the rest of his active life with Los Angeles as his home, with upbuilding of the bank as his vocation, and upbuilding of the southland as his avocation.

Two records were broken by the bank at the opening. More than 200,000 persons attended the pre-opening exhibits of foreign-made goods and the display of modern machinery and devices constructed to increase speed and safety in handling money. The business opening day set a record of $3,250,000 for total deposits made by 1,830 new accounts. These figures were declared a record for the country, both as to number of depositors and as to volume received. Total deposits for the new bank during the first week were above $6,000,000, and these did not include transferred accounts from any of the thirty-three branches operated by the Hellman Bank.

"It was the most successful opening I ever heard of anywhere," said Marco H. Hellman, president. "We were exceptionally well pleased at the number of friends who turned out to extend as their good wishes." He, with other officers and employees of the bank, formed a receiving line that entertained all visitors during the three-day pre-opening. Employees acted as guides and the $750,000 worth of furnishings of the new bank were displayed to best advantage. There was something of interest every foot of the way. Floral tributes from more than 300 individuals, firms and corporations of the southland voiced the goodwill of the senders.

The principal office was provided under plans approved a couple of years ago, when growth of the bank made necessary larger quarters than then occupied at Sixth and Main streets. All general officers of the Hellman bank will have offices at the new quarters. The former headquarters at Sixth and Main streets will be conducted as a branch bank, but all supervising officers of the concern have headquarters at Seventh and Spring. Safety deposit boxes are located in the basement at the new building, commercial and saving accounts are handled on the main floor, and the second floor is given over to the trust department. Money is counted, sorted and wrapped by machinery, eliminating mistakes. Restrooms and parlors for women and men have been provided by the bank, with women attendants to care for the wants of women patrons.

BIG YEAR INDICATED.

Constructive activity continues to be the keynote of every county, district and community in California. Reports from Chambers of Commerce in every section of the state to the California Development Association give indications of brisk business, great building activity and preparations for a big year in all lines of production.

February opened with a huge construction program for California. In the first two weeks of the month major construction projects, for the first time announced in various parts of the state, aggregated $66,886,000 in estimated cost.

NEW CALIFORNIA SONG.

"I'll Say It's California!" is the catchy title of a new song adopted by the glee club of the University of California which promises to become popular throughout the state, according to reports from Berkeley to the California Development Association. Mrs. Hazel Knapp Luke, composer of the song, is a well-known artist and singer of the San Francisco Bay district.

Hospital Starts—Work on the Federal Government hospital in San Fernando, Los Angeles County, is responsible for more activity there than for some time. The first unit, to cost $1,000,000, is under way, and when completed work on a second unit of equal cost will begin.

Rich The City of Los Angeles, says the city auditor in his report for 1924, owns property valued at $193,802,951. The parks and playgrounds are listed at $21,801,355 and the water system at $65,225,190. The city's bonded indebtedness is $88,149,676.

U. C. Leads—The University of California has the largest enrollment of any university in the country—15,580 students, including those at the parent institution in Berkeley and those at the Southern Branch in Los Angeles. Columbia University, with 11,621 students, is second.

Mammoth Structure—The cornerstone of Los Angeles' new $6,000,000 Hall of Justice, well on the way to completion, was laid January 26. It is 196 feet high and has a floor space of thirteen acres.

Leads in Fishing—Wilmington, Los Angeles County, now leads all Pacific Coast ports in the fishing industry.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

SHOPS A RIOT OF COLOR

SUBTLE WHISPERINGS OF THE SPRING modes are the empire yoke line, either at front or back, side flare, with narrow hip-line, high pocket placements, plaited trimmings, colorful embroideries, the Russian silhouette with three-quarter-length coats having pronounced flare at lower edge. The costume idea is developed frequently with frocks entirely of chiffon, kasha weaves, taffeta, faille, or ribbed weaves, jabots, suspender ideas, cape costumes, box coats with dresses in tiered arrangement, Chinese coloring and mandarin necklines.

The straight gown generally breaks into fullness near the hem. A band may head a suggestion of plaited underskirt. The long tunic in its many varieties may flare considerably over a close underskirt or it may open in front over plaits of a second material.

In planning the wardrobe for spring, it would be well to include a few two-piece frocks, for this youthful style is going to be in great demand before many moons. The new materials for spring are so adaptable to all of the purposes of the wardrobe that one may make an ensemble suit from almost any of them. Particularly in demand, however, are the silks and satins of crepe ancestry. Then there is kasha, which stands in a class by itself. Interest centers also in ribbed silks, cashmere, twills, chevrons and soft suede-like woollens.

The ensemble asserts its versatility in variety of coat lengths. Simple lines continue to hold sway, with fresh appeal and individuality oftentimes introduced by means of color and unusual fabric combinations. Inverted plaits and godets are also features of the new mode. The dresses that are a part of the ensemble are sometimes elaborate and sometimes demurely simple. Sleeves are either extremely short or decidedly long.

The shops are a riot of color, and one will have to be guided largely by what is becoming, rather than what is fashionable. Some of the smartest tones make severe demands upon one's natural appearance and, as most always happens, the green that one adores most will not make friends with the hair, complexion or eyes, while the blue, that arouses only passing interest, is the color that makes one look like a queen.

Herein comes the question of style. The best and only policy being to select the things that best express the personality and achieve for the wearer distinction, rather than what all the world is wearing.

Among semi-dressy models, suitable for the woman whose taste combines the conservative and the smart, is a charming model of wool rep combined with printed silk. The coat, which employs the woolen fabric, has machine-plaited flounce at hem and wrist. The woolen material also makes the plaited skirt, which is topped by an overblouse of figured silk. The coat is lined with the same silk.

While coats are rather inclined to be straight and somewhat severe, there are plenty of instances in which the flare is illustrated. The flare may be circular, shirred or plaited and posed either at side or front.

Tucks and plaits register heavily in the spring modes, and there is no doubt about the brevity of the skirt, especially for street wear. Plaits are quite fine when they are featured on semi-transparent fabrics, but in tailored models, they are of the box or inverted version. One may make the plait as wide as the fancy dictates.

Daytime wraps for spring are as interesting as the frocks with which they are worn. Coat fabrics are soft and may be generally identified with the kashas, twills and heavy satins. To give variety to the straight and slender silhouette, much attention is given to linings, which are rich and colorful.

Furs are of flattering loveliness and are used in the form of bands stitched about the edge of collars and cuffs, instead of forming these details in their entirety. The soft, flat furs may be twisted into deft little bows and choker scarfs to emphasize the youthful effect of the spring coat.

Braid, embroidery and ornamental buttons are trimmings highly favored for the spring coat. Of details and accessories, there are too many to mention. These include bags, vanities, handkerchiefs, shoes, hosiery and a number of veritable trifles, which seem necessary to the perfect ensemble in spite of their cost.

In silk hose, flesh tones, beige and deeper tans are most often worn. There are also exquisite shades in the spring color list. Here are a few of them: beige, blonde, new nude, grain, fallow, cork, dust, and, for evening, flesh, mauve, gold and silver.

With kasha and flannel clothes, a rather nice idea is to wear lisle or rayon-and-wool hosiery in harmonizing tones. A diamond weave lisle hose is interesting, and "gingham" plaid lisle in pink, blue, orchid, tan and grey, are among the novelties.

There should be no difficulty in finding shoes to one's liking this spring, for it is an accommodating season in the matter of styles. Open pumps, one-strap pumps, oxfords and step-ins are good, and the choice of leathers is equally liberal, with patent kidskin and russian-calf in all the brown tones. Shoes in fabrics, plain and brocaded, and satins and metal brocades, are extremely stylish.

Gloves are more varied than ever and equally interesting. Each week brings some lovely novelty with a new treatment. Colors are conservative, as a rule.The lingerie blouse is the thing now, plainly fashioned, with a little collar left open in front and held by double buttons. Because these blouses require perfect freshness to be attractive, many women prefer the soft washable stuffs, like crepe-de-chine and georgettes.There is always a special fall for small things.

At present, it seems concentrated in hats, or rather in the adornment of hats. Much flower trimming is shown on the new hats. There are flowers of odd colors and strange forms. These flowers, as well as bunches of odd feathers and bits of feathers, are placed at the very apex of the crown.Something quite different in neckwear is the cravat collar of beige ratine with black and white satin stripes. A tailored collar and cuff set of natural or white linen is slashed for interest and the tub-jacket is outlined in tiny buttons. A small standing collar is a feature of some of the new dresses. The scarf is no longer a separate part of the costume. Many of the new dresses have them disguised as elongated collars. Flat bias ties are sometimes the only break in the severity of a frock.Lace is regaining its popularity as a factor in formal and informal evening gowns. Chinese red and blue give chic to a long tunic blouse worn over a tight black satin slip. Short and tight is the rule for the underskirt, if one is slim enough to go without a girdle. One should also wear round garters, matching the lingerie, to hold up the stockings. Few and simple are the articles of milady's lingerie nowadays, and they always match.The evening mode voices a preference for all forms of bead embroidery. Rhinestones, crystals, jet, steel and colored glass beads being pressed into service to develop some of the most stunning designs imaginable.The daytime mode is for braiding, applique, cut work and various forms of stitchery. Even sports costumes have caught the spirit, gaily bedecking themselves with touches of wool embroidery in vivid colors.Wash silk is going to be very smart this spring and summer, which is a boon to the woman who must dress on a limited income.
This material launders beautifully and wears very well. There are a number of ways to fashion clever little frocks from wash silk.
Often they are made perfectly plain from shoulder to hem, trimmed with glass buttons, narrow belt of the same material and flatly put on cuffs and collar of plain heavy crepe-de-chine. They are also very attractive, made of the broadcloth shirting.Herringbone patterns are popular for sports dresses, also two-piece dresses and traveling coats. A leather belt, fastening with three buckles on either hip, holds the inverted plait of a smart traveling coat in place.N.S.G.W. OFFICIAL DEATH LIST.Containing the name, date and place of birth, date of SEVERAL LEGISLATIVE BILLS ENDORSED BY BOARD GRAND OFFICERS.

The proposal of the Sempervirens Club of California to build a new road into the Big Basin was endorsed.

Prospects for the organization of a parlor at Gilroy, Santa Clara County, were reported by Grand Third Vice-president Thompson, and Grand Trustee Newell reported a parlor at San Pedro, Los Angeles County, about ready for institution.

Grand President Lynch reported that in the near future the board would dedicate the Horace Mann junior high-school and the Embarcadero subway in San Francisco, and high-schools at Santa Rosa and San Rafael. He also reported meeting regularly with the Joint Immigration Committee, which is interested in the exclusion of ineligible-to-citizenship aliens, and that an anti-alien fishing bill, as ordered by the last Grand Parlor, has been introduced in the Legislature.

Endorsement was given the bill, now before the Legislature, to provide support for the California State Historical Association. It was ordered that copies of the bill be sent all Subordinate Parlors, with a request that they use every effort to have their senators and assemblymen give favorable consideration to the bill.

Decisions of State Attorney-General U. S. Webb pertaining to the proposed insurance of all members of the Order were presented, and a committee of three was named to prepare a report for submission to the coming Grand Parlor.

Vaquero 262 (Los Angeles City) having been instituted with more than the required fifty charter members, was voted a supplies-credit of $150. State Superintendent of Public Instruction Will C. Wood was commended for his efforts to have California history in the public-schools, and a committee was named to prepare programs for use by the schools.

Bills now before the Legislature providing for the creation of a state park commission to have supervision over all state parks, and authorizing the proposed commission to make a survey of all park sites in the state, were endorsed.

SAN BERNARDINO GRAND PARLOR.

As the time for the Forty-eighth Session of the Grand Parlor approaches, interest increases in the gathering, which will bring together representative Native Sons from all sections of the state to discuss matters pertinent to the welfare of California and the Order.

The Grand Parlor, with Grand President Edward J. Lynch presiding, will be in session at San Bernardino City the week of May 11. To Arrowhead 110 of that city has been delegated the preparation of an entertainment program, and the thousand and more visitors will not be disappointed, for Arrowhead has a reputation to sustain, and it will be sustained. For some time the Parlor has had an energetic committee, headed by John Andreson Jr. at work on the entertainment details, and assurance is given that the program will equal, if not surpass, any provided for preceding Grand Parlors.

Grand Secretary John T. Regan visited San Bernardino February 16 and was "let in" on some of the surprises that await San Bernardino's visitors. He inspected and approved the meeting-place and made arrangements for the transaction of the business of the Grand Parlor.

Some fear has been expressed that San Bernardino may not be able to house its guests. That should worry no one, for the city has ample accommodations for any number of visitors.

Rumors of Grand Parlor office-seekers are abroad, but little definite information has reached The Grizzly Bear to date. The consensus of opinion is, that Grand Trustee Seth Millington (Colusa 69) of Colusa and Grand

His Record of Service to the Order Warrants His Retention in This Most Important Office.

Trustee James A. Wilson (Rincon 72) of San Francisco will be the entrants in the third grand vice-presidency "big contest." Grand Outside Sentinel J. Hartley Russell (Yerba Buena 84) of San Francisco will be a candidate for grand inside sentinel, and Grand Secretary John T. Regan (South San Francisco 157) of San Francisco will, it is generally conceded, be re-elected without opposition.

For the Board of Grand Trustees, John T. Newell (Los Angeles 45) of Los Angeles is the only one who has so far replied to The Grizzly Bear's inquiry; he will be a candidate for reelection. Rumor has it that Leonard Stone (Alder Glen 200) of Fort Bragg will seek a place on the board.

At the San Bernardino Grand Parlor, unless reports be misleading, a determined effort will be made to abolish the office of grand director. It will be proposed that a director of membership be provided for, who shall be responsible for the Order's numerical strength. Serious consideration should be given that question, for the Order's greatest need is increased numbers.—C.M.H.

Numbers Swelled.

Colusa—Large classes of candidates for Colusa 69 and Williams 164 were initiated January 31 by a ritual team composed of Grand President Edward J. Lynch, Past Grand President William J. Hayes, Grand First Vice-president Fletcher A. Cutler, Grand Third Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Seth Millington Jr. and Charles L. Dodge, Grand Outside Sentinel J. Hartley Russell. Among the numerous other visitors were Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington and Grand Trustee John T. Newell.

A chicken banquet followed the initiation ceremonies. Grand Trustee Millington was the toastmaster and on behalf of Williams Parlor presented Deputy Grand President Cohn, responsible for the large membership increase, with a solid gold pencil. When he arose to respond, Cohn was given an ovation. Speakers at the banquet board included Grand President Lynch, Past Grand President Byington, Grand First Vice-president Cutler, Superior Judge Weyand and several of the initiates. During the evening the "side degree," "Great Moguls," was put on for the amusement of those assembled.

Good Example to Follow, Now.

Petaluma—A campaign for the closing of all local business houses on Admission Day, September 9, was launched January 26 at a joint meeting of Petaluma 27 and Petaluma 222 N.D.G.W.

The meeting was a most enthusiastic one, and a resolution directed to the merchants was unanimously adopted. Committees were named to wait on the Chamber of Commerce and the Central Labor Council, and formally ask their members to declare Admission Day a holiday. As a result, Admission Day will be a business holiday in Petaluma.

Charter Member Given Life Membership.

Merced Yosemite 21 entertained the women-folks January 29 at the monthly ladies' night which has become a popular feature. The hall was beautifully decorated and refreshments were served. During the evening 500 was played and entertainment features were introduced.

February 9 was an eventful night in the Parlor, Dower Kenneth Stoddard, a charter member, being presented with a solid gold life-membership card. Past President Cyrus W. Croop made the presentation address and the recipient feelingly responded. Five candidates were initiated, $10 was donated to the Salvation Army, and an oyster supper was served by Chef J. C. Cocanour.

"Golden Poppies" Danced.

Palo Alto There was a record-breaking crowd at the joint installation ceremonies of Palo Alto 216 and Palo Alto 229 N.D.G.W. in Native Sons' Building January 26. D.D.G.P. A. S. Liguori and D.D.G.P. Eldora McCarty presided, F. J. Simpson and Rena Trimble becoming the respective presidents.

Preceding the ceremonies three girls Ruth Mockbee, Evelyn Clark, Antoinette Kammersheu—in yellow gowns with yellow hats and carrying yellow-trimmed baskets, danced the "Golden Poppies." There was a program of addresses and vocal solos. Several presentations were made. Following a dainty midnight feast dancing was enjoyed. The occasion was a most delightful one.

"Old Boys" Have Inning.

Sacramento—Sacramento 3 honored its past presidents February 26, many of whom were in attendance. The officers stepped down from their stations and the "old boys" took their places. After the meeting the honor-guests were entertained with jazzy numbers and a sumptuous feast, at which Bob Shorrock presided as toastmaster, was served. The committee that arranged the renew-old-acquaintances affair was composed of Ed. J. Cahill (chairman), Hap Williams, Jerry Desmond, Ted Brown, Zee Pressey. The Parlor has secured headquarters in San Francisco for the big Admission Day celebration in September, and its drum-corps is in training for the monster parade that will be one of the features.

Many Pretty Valentines There.

Sonora—D.D.G.P. Rowan Hardin, assisted by Ed. L. Gorgas, installed the officers of Tuolumne 144 January 23, Linwood Ball becoming president. Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew was present on his official visit and in the course of an interesting address remarked that his father was a native of historic Tuttletown. A banquet concluded the meeting.

The Parlor featured its annual masquerade February 14 and many pretty valentines were in attendance. Matt Marshall was the floor director, and was assisted by Dr. E. M. Graham, J. P. Gibbons, A. J. Sylva, T. M. Wilzinski, Linwood Ball, Austin Menzes, F. W. Van Harlingen, Melvin Bixel, Lloyd Damin, W. M. Harrington, W. E. Baker.

"Booster" Gathering.

Stockton—Stockton 7 entertained Lodi 18 at a "booster" gathering January 26 at which plans for participating in the celebration of California's seventy-fifth birthday were discussed. Stockton proposes to pay the expenses of all its members to San Francisco for the occasion.

At an excellent spread prepared by Harry Herrmann, Law T. Freitas was the toastmaster and there were addresses by Judge Warren Atherton, Judge George M. Steele, District Attorney Edward Van Vranken. Frank Smith favored with piano selections.

Many Social Affairs Under Way.

San Rafael—D.D.G.P. Charles H. Locati, assisted by Wm. McK. Crane, acting grand marshal, installed the officers of Mount Tamalpais 64, George Streckfus becoming president. On the Parlor's behalf Assemblyman Charles Rein-dollar presented an emblematic ring to Lloyd De La Montanya, retiring junior past president. Mount Tamalpais has many social affairs under way, and is making preparations for the dedication of the new San Rafael high-school

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE BIG EVENT IN CALIFORNIA DURING March 1875 was the hanging at San Jose, the 19th, of Tiburcio Vasquez, the bandit. It was the largest attended hanging ever held in the state, all available space in the jail court where the execution took place being filled with more than fifty sheriffs, and undersheriffs, other peace officers, newspaper representatives, priests, friends and invited guests.

For a fortnight previous Vasquez had eaten and slept well, and had a good slumber his last night on earth. At 12:30 p. m. of the execution day he ate heartily of a sumptuous dinner.

At 1:35 p. m. he walked up the steps to the scaffold, smilingly removed his coat and necktie, and after his wrists and ankles were strapped and Sheriff Adams had adjusted the noose and prepared to pull the black cap over his head, he nodded adios to some he knew in the crowd. At 1:39 p. m. he was launched into eternity with a drop of six feet and four inches, which broke his neck, and thirteen minutes later he was pronounced dead by the doctors in attendance.

Vasquez was born in Monterey, California, in 1837 and was therefore 37 years of age. The years from 1856 to 1870 he spent in San Quentin, being convicted twice of larceny. In 1870 he began his career as a bandit. He was a small man, five feet four inches high, and weighed but 137 pounds. He was broad shouldered and agile, and a splendid horseman. He had a "taking" way, which made him take horses, women and valuables without stint. He claimed he had never killed a man. Although about forty senioritas in different parts of California claimed to be the original Mrs. Vasquez, he said he had never been married. He died a poor man and his relatives buried his body in the Catholic cemetery at Santa Clara.

Chavez, a partner of Vasquez in his marauds, made his appearance in Hollister, San Benito County, the day of the hanging. The officers were absent at San Jose, consequently he made a number of visits to old acquaintances, was discovered by quite a number of the citizens but, unmolested, mounted his horse and rode away when he got ready.

At a meeting in Los Angeles City March 4 fifty of the leading citizens subscribed largely for stock in the Los Angeles and Independence railroad. The secretary was authorized to telegraph Senator John P. Jones, the head promoter of the enterprise, that the citizens would take $300,000 of stock in the road.

Senator Jones was also interested in building a 1,200-foot wharf at Truxton Beach and a railroad from Santa Monica to Los Angeles. He also had a controlling interest in the Los Angeles street railway.

Santa Anita Rancho Sold.

Marysville, Yuba County, began the building of a levee around the city, four feet higher than the mark the late flood rose to, at a cost of $100,000.

The stage from Sonora, Tuolumne County, to Milton was stopped by three masked highwaymen March 23 near Reynolds Ferry. The took the express box from the stage, broke open with a sledge hammer and obtained from it over $6,000. They did not molest the passengers. Sheriff Thorne and a posse went in pursuit.

There was a shakeup in the school department in San Francisco this month. The Board of Education dismissed five women teachers having paid money to secure their positions. It was also found out that teachers were borrowing from others, and the janitors were being preyed upon by those financially distressed.

A child case that caused many sympathetic mothers to sob was heard by Judge Ramage in the district court at Sacramento. Ten years previous Mrs. J. C. Golden, then a widow named Ladd, in poor health and circumstances, gave Nicholas Smith and wife her little daughter, 18 months old, and signed a contract to that effect. Since then she had married and become wealthy while the Smiths had aged and become poor. She now brought suit to regain her child. Judge Ramage had to decide in the mother's favor, as there was a sorrowful scene when the little girl loved by her foster parents, the only loved one she knew, had to be separated from them as was taken away, sobbing as though her heart would break.

A lawsuit against the Geyser Quicksilver Mining Co., owned by the citizens of Calistoga, Napa County, was decided in the company's favor as the result was celebrated in Calistoga by a candle illumination of the town, firing of an anvil salute of 100 guns and a speechfest.

A. W. Von Schmidt, the well-known civil engineer, was agitating vigorously a proposition to supply San Francisco with water from Lake Tahoe.

E. J. Baldwin bought the 8,500-acre Santa Anita rancho in Los Angeles County for $200,000 March 12. He purchased it from Newman Bros., who paid $85,000 for it three years before.

An oil well, flowing fifty barrels a day, was reported developed four miles from San Fernando, Los Angeles County.

Dan Caldwell found a cinnabar vein on Horn Creek, Siskiyou County, that gave a high assay.

The famous lost Gunsight mine, first discovered near Death Valley in 1849, was reported found this month by a prospector in San Bernardino who exhibited specimens of rich ore taken from it.

Distillery With Underground Pipe Line Seized.

A woodchopper cut down a tree near Gilroy, Santa Clara County, and found beneath a root tin can containing ten gold slugs worth $50 each.

J. J. Smith was reported to have discovered rich horn silver vein fifteen miles from Hollister, San Benito County.

The Oceanic Quicksilver Co. of San Luis Obispo County produced 300 flasks in sixty days making an income of $2,400 a day.

Jake Gear found a rich cinnabar vein in Sonoma County.

Alex Budlam, a San Francisco sportsman, had 15,000 trout eggs expressed from New York State to be hatched in his trout ponds at Calistoga, Napa County, and distributed in the Coast Range streams.

St. Patrick's Day, March 17, was celebrated by parades and literary exercises in San Francisco, Sacramento and Marysville, while grand balls in Los Angeles, San Diego and Merced gave the Fenian cause a financial lift.

Truckee, Nevada County, reported that spring was being ushered in there by the appearance of snow plants, blackbirds and swarms of butterfly flies.

There was a two-day coursing meet on Whitcomb's ranch in Sacramento County March 3 and 4. A large number of fleet greyhounds, called "Irish race horses," contested.

A big coursing match was featured at Merced March 25 by the California Pioneer Coursing Club with many speedy greyhounds. "Uncle Sam" was the prize winner.

A distillery in Los Angeles was seized by internal revenue officers, who found a six-inch pipe running 100 feet under the ground to where it emptied its contents into a wooden tank ten feet high and sixteen feet in diameter. Further away in a woodshed, was another tank nearly as large. There was found 60,000 gallons of brandy on the premises.

Dr. Hugh Glenn had 35,000 acres in Colusa County in wheat under crop control of four tenants. The yield was estimated to be 1,000,000 bushels and worth about the same in dollars. Fears were expressed by anti-land monopolists that Dr. Glenn, in time, would own and farm the Sacramento Valley. A few dry years and subsequent campaign in politics gave the doctor

In Memoriam

STEPHEN RICHARDSON.

To the Officers and Members of San Point Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed brother, Stephen Richardson, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, The Almighty, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call to the Heavenly Parlor on High our beloved brother, Stephen Richardson of Mount Tamara Parlor No. 61 N.S.G.W., and thereby caused our Order to suffer the loss of the oldest member in the fraternity, he having passed the ninety-third milestone in the month of March last, and whereas, no man loved the state of his birth more than did Brother Stephen Richardson, who always took an active part in the affairs of his Parlor and the state celebrations, his declining years caused him to become feeble and thus interfered in recent years with his activities, nevertheless Native Sonism at all times was uppermost in his mind, therefore, be it

Resolved, By San Point Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W., in token of its sympathy for the bereaved members of the deceased's family and our sense of the Order's loss, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this Parlor, that a copy be printed in the Grizzly Bear Magazine and that a copy be forwarded to the bereaved family.

H. J. THOMAS,
F. A. FIEDLER,
S. G. RATTI,
Committee

Sausalito, January 7, 1925.

MARY WALLINGFORD FOLSOM.

Whereas, In the wisdom of Almighty God, Mary Wallingford Folsom, mother of our brother, Past President Harry G. Folsom, has been called from her activities in this life to the beneficence of His eternal rest; and whereas, Mrs. Folsom was a pioneer of California, contributing her part to the development and the progress of this great Western empire, and for such the sincere appreciation not only of the natives of the great West, but all the peoples of our country should be expressed, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the past presidents of Ramona Parlor, and the members of said Parlor, do hereby express such appreciation and extend to Brother Folsom sincere sympathy in this hour, be it further resolved, that these resolutions, be spread upon the minutes of Ramona Parlor No. 109, Native Sons of the Golden West and a copy be mailed to our bereaved brother and published in The Grizzly Bear.

DORA HENRICKSEN.

To the Officers and Members of Piedmont Parlor No. 87 N.D.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed sister, Dora Henriksen, submit the following:

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call from our midst our beloved sister, and whereas, Piedmont Parlor No. 87 N.D.G.W., feels most deeply the loss of its esteemed member; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we humbly bow to the will of our Heavenly Father, we shall retain in our hearts a lasting affection for our sister, and be it further resolved, that we extend to the bereaved husband in this, his hour of trial, our sincere and heartfelt sympathy and commend him, for consolation, to Him who "doeth all things well"; and therefore be it further resolved, that this tribute of respect be sent to the bereaved husband, a copy sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication and a copy be spread in full upon the minutes of this Parlor.

MARY L. CAMPBELL.

To the Officers and Members of San Jose Parlor No. 81 Native Daughters of the Golden West—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect and condolence to the memory of our beloved departed sister, Mary L. Campbell, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, has called from our midst our dearly beloved sister, Mary L. Campbell, thus taking from us one of our most devoted and loyal members, a faithful, true and loyal friend, whose loss is deeply felt by all, and whereas, by her death the husband has lost a devoted wife and companion, and the family a loving member;

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved husband and family our most sincere and loving sympathy; and be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the husband and sister, to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Parlor.

LONG BEACH: The Forward-Looking City Where Native Resources Grow With The United Enterprise Of All

GREATER UNITY WEEK PROGRAM IN LONG BEACH EFFECTIVE

J. David Larson

(EXECUTIVE SECRETARY, LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

CIVILIZATION IS BUILT UPON UNITY. No people can thrive without some degree of unity. Our very existence depends upon the action of others. Over in Iowa, in a little town of 1,500 people, a community hall was built containing amusement parlors, rest rooms, lecture hall and all those things which go to make up a community center. The structure was built in two weeks. It became the center of activity for communities miles around. Unity of action built and paid for the center in two weeks.

Fifty years ago a railroad bridge was constructed across the Missouri River. It was built and paid for by a community of eight or ten thousand people. Money was scarce and interest rates high; yet, by unity of action ten percent bonds were floated to pay over a hundred thousand dollars for the bridge structure. Today this bridge is a part of the transcontinental a few years ago, had considerably more population. These cities had equal opportunity. Today, Kansas City holds supremacy in its region and is recognized as a distributing center for a vast territory which was formerly served by other cities. Work has already started on the most pretentious soldiers' memorial and civic center. Unity of action did it for Kansas City.

No great city has ever been builded without unity and without forward-looking vision on the part of the citizens. Some day commendation will be written to the men and women of Long Beach who visualized the future and favored such improvements as harbor development and the providing of Recreation Park.

Unity Week is not a new thing. It is only placing emphasis on an old necessity. Effort is made to cause the citizens to think as one unit instead of as many units. Centralization of thought is necessary, if proper development is rail highway and joins two cities with a total population of a quarter of a million. Unity of action fifty years ago made the two cities possible. Unity of action has made possible the Denver civic center and its boulevard system, both of which are quite famous throughout the country.

Not so many years ago a careless cow kicked over a lantern and what was then the City of Chicago was burned. Out of the ashes grew a new Chicago, and while the city is known as the industrial, commercial and banking center of the vast inland empire, yet it is fast becoming famous for its civic achievements. Its parks, playgrounds, boulevards and extensive lake-front improvements are becoming nationally recognized. It is being accomplished by unity of action.

Kansas City prides itself on progressive civic and commercial development. There are cities within two hundred miles of Kansas City which, to take place.

Cities are not merely buildings of stone, mortar or street railways. The people are the city. As the people, so the city.

The people of Long Beach are banded together in the pursuit of a livelihood and of happiness. The ties which bind them are economic and social. Where the economic overbalances the social, the community is on dangerous ground. Where the economic life is dormant, there is want and physical suffering. And so there must be a happy blending in community building, with a consideration given to the foundation as well as to the super-structure. This unity effort is meant to cause men and women of the community to recognize the rights of others, blend the temporal and the spiritual, and unite in those things which will best build for a better place in which to live and to do business.

It is sometimes said that American cities are over-organized. This charge is true only where communities are split into small units and see with a narrow, selfish vision. Clubs and organizations which function for the benefit of their members are quite necessary, but when they act in a selfish way for their members only, then they become a detriment. Blessed is the city which has organizations which serve their members faithfully and cause them to become better citizens, and in the light of this better citizenship join unitedly through a centralized force in working for that which is best for the community. There can be no forward progress without leadership, and leadership must be representative. The city without leadership and without unity of action in the broader sense will be retarded, no matter how many organizations are maintained or luncheons held. A flock of sheep sometimes teach the human race a lesson—they follow a leader, and more often to safety than to ruin.

Civilization has the advantage of intelligence which has been largely founded upon the human race living together and seeking for higher character. Recently the press dispatches announced the finding of buried cities in an adjoining state. Hundreds of years ago the inhabitants of that section built communities. The structures were mud, built firmly, but narrow and dark. Even their household utensils, their instruments of war, were primitive indeed compared with those of the primitive day. The very character and spirit of those Indians can be deducted by the method in which they built. They lacked the character and spirit of doing better. Thus they perished through the coming of a greater light of a civilization which has developed that greater soul.

Where there is unity, vision and intelligence, a model community can be builded in a desert, if the spirit of the people living there wills it so. Raw materials or nature's blessings would help them, but the lack of them would not deter the people's progress, provided their character was strong enough to build a community along righteous lines.

The united voice of the people for any given thing in a community is only the crystallization of the spirit or the desire of the people. It is that desire which is the unseen force that controls building—good or bad. Where the spirit of the people has been properly developed and the finer qualities of unity cultivated, it is portrayed in their community building. It is that spirit which allows communities to be built, or allows them to become decayed. If the spirit of unity is dead in a community, the community is also dead, no matter what may be the outward appearance.

The live spirit is portrayed in the appearance of the homes, lawns, trees, flowers, and in the back lots and in the alleys. It is pictured in the schools, in the parks, playgrounds, and in the churches; and the divorce courts and the jails present the spirit all too vividly.

streets, are all like the telling written line. The people on the streets, in the elevators, on the busses or street cars, are daily telling the observer the character of spirit in the community in which they live.

Again it must be said that the people are the city—as the people, so the city. The city will be no better nor no worse than the people. If they are prompted by high commercial and civic ideals and united, every development is possible.

Sometimes it requires a catastrophe to arouse the community spirit. San Francisco rose from the ashes of her fire a far better city than she had been before—not necessarily because of the opportunity of building anew, but because of the fact that to overcome her many obstacles it became necessary for her people to develop a unity of spirit which had previously been dormant. The spirit was so aroused that before the building campaign had been completed a great exposition was inaugurated, and it was demonstrated to the world that the San Francisco spirit could be developed to a point of glory.

Omaha is a better city because it was stricken by a tornado, and while this terrible catastrophe spread death and destruction in its pathway, out of it bloomed a fellowship and community spirit which had never previously been known. The burdens of destruction were many, but a unity spirit developed which has been beneficial ever since.

The catastrophe which visited Dayton, Galveston and other cities, while cruel and destructive, have had their compensation in the development of a greater citizenship. The nation pays tribute to the City of Detroit as the automobile center of the world. There are many places in the country that would be equally suitable for the manufacture of automobiles, but in the years past some leading citizens saw the possibilities of this great industry, talked it, worked it, and united the forces behind the idea—and today it is reaping the benefit.

Battle Creek is a cereal food center. Raw products are taken from the Middle Western corn and wheat fields, transported to Battle Creek, and returned to the very farm from which the grain came, in the form of breakfast food. Battle Creek was built; it did not grow. It had back of it the spirit of unity—a spirit of definiteness of action, and the industry was established.

Long Beach, with the wonderful opportunities which have been given by nature, will develop and reach its destinies as fast as the people of this city desire. It may become a much greater city in a few years or in many years—depending entirely upon the will and unity of the people. On the character of the citizenship of a community today rests the city of tomorrow, and where there is no vision the people perish.

There are men in every community who lay particular emphasis on the desire for new industries. Others seek civic improvements, while some have other hobbies. Long Beach will be a well-balanced community. As facilities are prepared, industries will come, and because of the spirit of the past it will always maintain a home influence and, therefore, be popular as a good place in which to live. The contenders for industry and for civic development can best obtain their desires by joining hands for a balanced development.

The growth of the city must be substantial. "Boost" has retarded the growth of many localities which had excellent opportunities. Home-seekers and investors are coming to Long Beach, if they know that the growth is substantial and without undesirable inflation.

Unity Week is inaugurated for the purpose of causing the people of Long Beach to think and act for Long Beach today and the future. There will be many excellent sermons delivered on this subject. There will be thousands of persons throughout the city who will hear the unity message—but merely hearing this message will not build Long Beach. Building requires action—united action—and if this unity can be obtained, and if the spirit of the community is based upon high commercial and civic ideals, almost anything can be accomplished for the city in which we live.

About two thousand years ago a very worthy leader advised the community builders of Judea to refrain from building their houses on the sands, lest storms come and wipe out the foundations. This message is equally important today.

SUPPER AND CARD PARTY.

Officers of Long Beach Parlor 154 N.D.G.W., with Mrs. Clara Fay as president, were installed January 28 by D.D.G.P. Carrie Lenhouse. The hall was beautifully decorated in red, white and gold, and there were a large number of visitors, including President Marvel Thomas, Annie L. Adair and Secretary Mary K. Corcoran of Los Angeles Parlor. Following the ceremonies a program of musical numbers was presented by Miss Lucy Curtis, Miss Margery Curtis and Mrs. Helen Powers-Cervantes.

In the banquet-room, where supper was prepared and served by Mmes. Johnson, Barton, Peters, Dodd and Miss Eleanore Johnson, the tables were adorned with red carnations, hearts and arrows. There were several short talks, and Mrs. Edgar McFadyen made a presentation to D.D.G.P. Lenhouse on the Parlor's behalf. Other presentations were made to Past President Charlotte Wharton and Miss Ellen M. Rogers. An immense cake, decorated with California poppies, was sent by Mrs. Alexina B. Beam, an out-of-town member.

The Thimble Club of the Parlor met February 5 at the home of Mrs. Laura Crowell. April 29, at Moose Hall, the Parlor will serve a 50-cent supper, to be followed by a card party. All Natives and their friends are invited.

CONSTRUCTIVE PROGRAM PROPOSED.

Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. will initiate a class of candidates March 4 and discuss, and probably act upon, constructive suggestions, among them affiliation with the Federation of States Society, the purchase of a State (Bear) Flag for the council-room in the new City Hall, and the issuance of a booklet for general distribution. A determined effort is being made to increase the membership.

With the Native Daughters, the Parlor featured a get-acquainted dancing party March 18, which proved a delightful affair and was largely attended. Mrs. T. T. Cervantes, accompanied by Mrs. Kate McFadyen, pleased with a couple of vocal solos. In charge of the dance was a joint committee composed of Dr. S. T. Luce, Edgar McFadyen, Philip Loree, Mmes. Johnson, Brittain, Crowell. During the evening refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mmes. Webber, Fay, Dillon, McPherson.

HARBOR EXPOSITION PLANNED.

The annual Long Beach Harbor Industrial Exposition is to be held in the Municipal Auditorium April 22 to 29, it has been announced. J. David Larson, executive secretary of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, will manage the exposition.

Passing of the California Pioneer

(Confined to Brief Notices of the Demise of Those Men and Women Who Came to California Prior to 1860.)

JOHN RUDDLE, NATIVE OF MISSOURI, 94; came across the plains to California via the Southern route in 1849 and after a short stay in Los Angeles City went to the Mariposa County mines; late in 1850 he established the well-known Ruddle ranch near Hopeton, then known as Forlorn Hope, in Merced County, and became closely identified with the development of the county; died at Merced City, survived by a wife and a son. As a tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased Pioneer, Yosemite Parlor No. 24 N.S.G.W. (Merced) attended his funeral in a body.

Charles D. Ferguson, native of Ohio, 94; crossed the plains in 1850, arriving in Butte County; after mining in Butte and Nevada Counties for a time, he went to Australia in 1852 in search of gold, returning in 1883; died at Chico, Butte County. Deceased was dearly loved by the members of Chico Parlor No. 21 N.S.G.W. and Annie K. Bidwell Parlor No. 168 N.D.G.W. (Chico), who were of considerable assistance to the Pioneer in his declining years. He was the author of "A Third of a Century in the Gold Fields," prized for its historical value.

Mrs. Lizzie S. Wagner, native of Wisconsin, 80; with her parents (the Craigs) crossed the plains in 1850 and resided in Merced and Mariposa Counties; died at Coulterville, survived by two children.

James Henry Brown, native of Ohio, 93; came via the Isthmus of Panama in 1852 and after several years' residence in Tuolumne County located in Stockton, where he died; five children survive.

Thomas J. Gibson, native of Tennessee, 90; crossed the plains in 1852 and six years later settled in Mendocino County; died at Ukiah, survived by ten children.

Mrs. Frances Louise Stackpole, native of Maine, 79; came in 1852 and for some time resided in Sacramento City; died at San Francisco. Deceased's father, the late Jefferson Lake, is said to have established the first saw-mill in the state at Centerville, Alameda County.

Summers Brumfield, native of West Virginia, 82; crossed the plains in 1852 and settled in Sonoma County; died at Healdsburg.

John W. Ensley, native of Illinois, 82; came in 1859 and long resided in Fresno County; died at Reedley.

Mrs. Angela Fontenrose-Quirolo, native of Italy; came in 1857 and for many years resided in Amador County; died at San Francisco, survived by six children, among them John J. Quirolo (Excelsior 31 N.S.G.W., Jackson), V. C. and F. C. Quirolo (Amador 17 N.S.G.W., Sutter Creek), J. M. Quirolo (Pacific 10 N.S.G.W., San Francisco), Marie M. Quirolo (Amapola 80 N.D.G.W., Sutter Creek).

CHARLES D. FERGUSON.

Loren D. Clark, native of Illinois, 78; came via the Isthmus of Panama in 1858 and settled in Tehama County; died at Red Bluff, survived by a wife and a daughter. Deceased was well known in newspaper circles in the northern part of the state.

Mrs. Martha J. Miller-Dickinson, native of Missouri, 85; came in 1852; died at Los Angeles City. Deceased and her husband, the late Rev. John Dickinson, were well known in Methodist church circles throughout the state.

Arthur W. Edwards, native of New York, 79; came in 1854 and long resided in Sacramento City; died in Shingle Springs, El Dorado County, survived by a son.

Mrs. Adelia Minerva Peed-Joslin, native of Illinois, 76; came with her parents via the Isthmus of Panama in 1852; died at San Francisco. Deceased was a charter member of the Society of Pioneer Women of California.

Phineas Potter Ward, native of Maine, 84; came via the Isthmus of Panama in 1859; died at Alameda City, survived by a wife and five children, among them Josiah E. Ward (Stockton 7 N.S.G.W.).

Joseph Henry Dower, native of New York, 83; came via the Isthmus of Panama in 1850 and resided in Calaveras and Amador Counties; died at Sutter Creek, survived by a wife and four children.

Mrs. Emily A. Woodworth-Bassett, native of Illinois, 79; with her parents crossed the plains in 1851 and long resided in Sonoma County; died at Benicia, Solano County, survived by a son.

Frank P. Hambleton, native of Missouri, 79; with his parents crossed the plains in 1856; died at Guinda, Yolo County, survived by a wife and three children.

Mrs. Sarah Catherine Wallace, native of Missouri, 96; came across the plains in 1849 and long resided in San Luis Obispo County, where she was one of the founders of Adelaide; died at Pismo, survived by two children.

Miles M. Vineyard, native of Wisconsin, 82; came in 1852; died at Smartsville, Yuba County.

Mrs. Simon Portilla, native of Mexico, 111; since 1845 resident of San Diego City, where she died.

Rufus Saddle mire, native of New York, 91; came around the Horn in 1850 and settled in San Joaquin County; died near Stockton, survived by two sons.

M. H. De Young, native of Missouri, 75; since 1854 a resident of San Francisco, where he died, survived by four daughters. Deceased with his brother, the late Charles De Young founded in 1865 the "Dramatic Chronicle," which grew into the daily "San Francisco Chronicle."

Mrs. Kittie Ann Fox, 80; with her parents (Thomas and Marietta Shepherd) crossed the plains in 1854 and long resided in Amador County; died at Stockton, survived by two daughters.

Isaac Raglin, native of Missouri, 99; crossed the plains in 1852 and resided in San Luis Obispo and Tehama Counties; died at Red Bluff, survived by eight children.

A. W. Davidson, 72; with his mother came by the Isthmus of Panama in 1854 and long resided in Tuolumne County; died at Oakland, survived by five children.

Joshua J. Bailey, native of Ohio, 97; came in 1850; died at Roseville, Placer County, survived by a son.

James H. Brown, 93; crossed the plains in 1850; died at Stockton, his home since 1860.

Louis Ebinger, native of Germany, 80; came in 1849; died at Los Angeles City, survived by a wife and six children. Deceased was a member of the Pioneer Society of Los Angeles County.

William Lynch, native of Arkansas, 82; crossed the plains in 1853; died at Fresno City, survived by a wife and three children.

Mrs. Sarah Shuey-Mann, native of Illinois, 75; came in 1859 and for forty-two years taught in the San Francisco schools; died at Berkeley, survived by three children. Deceased was a daughter of Robert A. Shuey, Pioneer of 1849.

Henry Cavill, native of England, 93; crossed the plains in 1859 and in 1867 settled in Stanislaus County; died at Modesto, survived by a wife and four children.

PIONEER NATIVES DEAD

San Jose (Santa Clara County)—Mrs. Gume-cinda Narvaez-Chaboya, born in this county in 1858, passed away January 16. She was a direct descendant of the Alviso and Narvaez families, whose names are so closely linked with California's earliest history.

Los Angeles City—Andrew Taylor, born in California in 1852, died January 18.

Grass Valley (Nevada County)—Fred Cryer, born here in 1857, died January 20.

Gilroy (Santa Clara County)—John A. Fellom Sr., born on the San Ysidro grant in 1840, died recently, survived by eight children. He was a son of Matthew Fellom, Pioneer of the early '30s, and Manuela Briones, a Santa Clara County native who died in 1858.

Glendale (Los Angeles County)—Francisco Verdugo, born on the San Rafael rancho in 1859, died January 21 in Verdugo Canyon, survived by two daughters. His Pioneer father was one of the earliest settlers in San Fernando Valley. The San Rafael rancho, which was owned by the Verdugo family, embraced what is now Glendale and Casa Verdugo; the Verdugo Mountains and Verdugo Canyon were named for the family.

Marysville (Yuba County)—Mrs. Emma Schuler, born in Colusa County in 1857, passed away January 22, survived by six children.

Morgan Hill (Santa Clara County)—William J. O'Neill, born at Mokelumne Hill, Calaveras County, in 1854, died January 26, survived by a wife and two children.

Sutter Creek (Amador County)—Miss Martha Y. Brown, born at Amador City, this county, in 1852, passed away January 26.

Oakdale (Stanislaus County)—Mrs. Maggie E. Grohl-Thomas, born at Columbia, Tuolumne County, in 1858, passed away January 27, survived by a husband.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

a crop of financial problems that stopped the agitation.

Father Cullen, an enthusiastic Catholic priest, offered a prize of $50 to the first producer of 1,000 pounds of hops in Siskiyou County.

On the Guayome rancho, San Diego County, there were two lambs, one with two mouths, and the other with eight legs.

Three prominent citizens of Santa Cruz published a card in the local newspaper announcing their agreement not to drink intoxicating liquor for a year.

Indian Card Sharp Cleans Up.

A brilliant meteor illuminated the heavens of Northern California at 11:30 p. m. March 13, shooting from the north to the south. It was seen to burst like an exploding rocket into stars of light, but no locality reported hearing the sound.

The United States Mint began coining 20-cent pieces to supply a supposed public need and stop what was called the "two-bit swindle." One bit was a dime; when two bits was asked and a quarter paid, no change was given. The 20-cent pieces proved to be a phantom idea and more of them were palmed off as quarters than took the places of two-bit transactions. They subsequently became an object of derision. So, went another progressive idea.

Two stages were put on the route between San Fernando, Los Angeles County, and the terminus of the Southern Pacific north of Tehachapi, and the stage time shortened to thirteen hours.

Charles Crowley, telegraph operator at Colusa, sent a telegram to the Bank of California in San Francisco to pay himself $1,200 and signed it Wm. P. Harrington, a prominent citizen of Colusa. He then went to San Francisco and drew the money. It was not discovered until some weeks later, and Crowley was gone from the haunts of vice that knew him.

A Shoshone card sharp from Winnemucca, Nevada State, came to Truckee, Nevada County, this month and played havoc with the Piute poker players of the Washoes rendezvousing there. He gathered in all their money, blankets, surplus clothing, hats, boots and many relics. The Truckee Indians had only their squaws and papooses left, and were quietly considering the best possible way to kill the Shoshone buck and evade the law.

Nebraska. San Francisco raised $15,000 for the relief of the sufferers, intending the funds to buy seed for the next year's sowing. In the meantime, immigration agents were sent to the distressed states to induce their farmers to come to California, a land with plenty awaiting the hand of development.

At Green Valley, Sonoma County, lived twin brothers, named Thomas and Abraham Towner. They were in love with two girls and wished to marry, but the lassies were under age and their parents would not give their consent.

The Rev. Abraham Towner, the grandfather of the youths, cut the Gordian knot by hiring a captain and his boat to sail out of Bodega Bay a dozen miles upon the Pacific Ocean, where he tied, matrimonially, Tom to Miss Ida Pitt and Abe to Miss Eva Hughes, and then landed them safely ashore.

Shipments of oranges by steamer from Los Angeles to San Francisco reached the then notable quantity of 968 boxes March 12.

Ike Dexter and Jim Smith, hunters in the Sierras, killed during the month seventy-nine foxes, nine coons, four wildcats and 110 skunks.

In a placer mine near Jackson, Amador County, the gravel was sluiced away to a depth of ten feet when there was found, placed on the bedrock, a large stone Indian mortar. Inside its pestle cavity was a miniature mortar evidently a child's toy one. Trees hundreds of years old grew on the flat and there was a fire mark on the bedrock. The Diggers of that vicinity never used mortars and knew nothing about them, hence they belonged to a prehistoric race.

Ezra Brown, 94 years old, living in Birchville, Nevada County, claimed to be the oldest Pioneer in the state.

James Lick, the philanthropic Pioneer, caused consternation in certain circles by revoking his deed of trust, valued at $4,000,000, March 27. He had come to the conclusion he was not going to die very soon and would be able to spend his money himself.

Captain Joe, a Washoe Indian chief, whose domain was along the Truckee River, paid a visit to the California capital and the metropolis. He called upon Governor Booth in Sacramento, who welcomed him with both hands, sent him to a hotel and paid for his several days' keep. This Joint Installation.

Ferndale—Officers of Ferndale 93 and Ononta 71 N.D.G.W. were jointly installed January 23, C. H. Rasmussen and Julia Givins becoming the respective presidents. For Ononta, D.D.G.P. Marie East, assisted by Nova Fowler, officiated, and for Ferndale, D.D.G.P. Joseph Bognuda, assisted by Henry Giacomini.

Following the ceremonies, which were largely attended, an excellent program was presented and refreshments were served. Recording Secretary George L. Collins, who has been seriously ill for some time, is now on the road to recovery.

Hall Directors Re-elected.

Sacramento—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Native Sons' Hall Association of Sacramento the board of directors were re-elected, as follows: E. H. Kraus (president), S. E. Pope, C. A. Root, J. C. Boyd, H. B. Bradford, M. F. Trebilcock, A. J. Delano, J. F. Didion, J. J. Monteverde, M. Zarick, P. G. West (secretary).

During 1924 the building loan was reduced, and a 2 percent dividend was paid on the $133,400 of outstanding stock. The income for the year was $25,498.48 and the operating expense $21,403.72.

Reception for New Officers.

San Diego—Officers of San Diego 108 were installed February 9 by D.D.G.P. Albert V. Mayrhofer, Wilbur Kelley becoming president. Following the ceremonies a reception was tendered the newly-installed officers, an entertainment program was presented and refreshments were served.

A delegation from the Parlor, headed by President Kelley and Recording Secretary Dan E. Shaffer, journeyed to San Pedro February 15 to witness the institution of Sepulveda 263. San Diego will institute a drive for new members during March.

Fortieth Birthday Observed.

Oakland—The fortieth anniversary of the institution of Oakland 50 was observed at a banquet February 5. W. R. Crosby was toastmaster and among the speakers were Past Grand Presidents Robert M. Fitzgerald and Harry G. Williams, State Railroad Commissioner Ezra Decoto, Judge J. J. Allen, George Cluff, J. Cal Ewing, J. F. Kennison, Pete Ziegenfuss, Lee Burnham, E. W. Abbey, Wade Snook.

The affair was arranged by a committee composed of President Douglas G. Montell, First Vice-president Peter J. Starasich and Harry N. Watkins, chairman good of the order committee.

Large Attendance at Installation.

Jackson—Excelsior 31 and Ursula 1 N.D.G.W. had a joint installation of officers January 28. Included in the large number in attendance were Past Grand President Ella E. Caminetti,

PIPE DREAM OF THE '60S
 ILLUMINATING OIL WAS DISTILLED FROM petroleum obtained from a seepage in Southern California as early as 1856 and used in lamps, and in 1860 this region, in our day so thoroughly advertised, was said to contain underground "rivers of oil" that could be carried to all the ports of the Pacific Coast through pipe lines. This pipe dream of the sixties found partial realization later, as may be seen by the fact that more than a billion barrels of oil has since been piped from wells in that region to Pacific ports.

1924 OIL PRODUCTION.
 During 1924 the California oil fields produced a total of 230,063,117 barrels of crude oil, a daily average of 628,588 barrels. The Long Beach district, credited with 60,122,002 barrels, was by far the greatest producer, second and third districts on the list being, respectively, the Midway Sunset, 37,464,889 barrels, and the Santa Fe Springs, 26,399,655 barrels.

HOLLYWOOD'S EXPANSION PHENOMENAL

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

BASED UPON PRESENT DEMANDS FOR construction permits, building in Hollywood during the current year will far exceed that of 1924, and seems destined to approach closely the best year's mark in the history of Hollywood.

This is a suggested prediction predicated largely upon the fact that permits have already been asked for the erection of at least a half-dozen major structures in central Hollywood, chiefly on and contiguous to Hollywood boulevard.

Up to the end of 1924, building permits contemplated the erection of structures reaching a total cost sum of $15,150,437. This was a decline of approximately $5,000,000, compared with 1923.

Thus far this year arrangements have been made to build at least a half-dozen major buildings, the total cost of which will approximate $15,000,000. Among these are the eight-story office and theater building planned by Charles E. Toberman, on property located immediately east of the Masonic Temple, near Highland avenue. The Moorish theater, on Vine street, one-half block north of Hollywood boulevard, will cost more than a million dollars. The Hellman bank and office building, at the corner of Hollywood boulevard and Cherokee street, is to be erected at a cost of $1,500,000, and the Business District Development Company has awarded a contract for the erection of a $500,000 hotel structure on Cahuenga avenue near Hollywood boulevard.

The Frank Case Company of New York has procured a site on Hollywood boulevard, a short distance west of Highland avenue, and contemplates the erection of a tourist hotel, to be known as the Algonquin, of deluxe pattern and equipment, to cost several million dollars, while late developments in the Hollywood California Hotel Company indicate that the $5,000,000 hotel project proposed for a site on Hollywood boulevard, between Gower street and Bronson avenue, will be carried through this year.

This is the major building outlook for Hollywood this year, with plans being developed for still further additions to the construction program. There are many structures of a more or less minor nature, running in cost from $50,000 to $250,000. One of these will be built at the corner of Vine street and Selma avenue, and is to cost more than $150,000. This will be devoted to mercantile purposes.

That Hollywood prospered in the year 1924 is amply indicated in the amount of bank clearings, as reported by the Hollywood Clearing House Association, which embraces fifteen local banks and branches. In the entire year the total clearings amounted to $319,147,541.85, as against $310,917,414.11 for 1923, showing an increase of $8,129,127.74 for the year just closed.

The population expansion of Hollywood in the past few years has been little short of phenomenal. Five years ago the census enumeration showed some 36,000 persons here. In 1922 the population had grown to 65,000, and today the population, based upon figures compiled by the registrar of voters, is not less than 130,000.

This expansion is reflected in the school census, which has more than doubled in the past three years. The total number of pupils now reaches more than 15,000, of which 3,000 or more are enrolled in the Hollywood senior high-

No Place Like California.
From Joseph B. Keenan (Niantic 105) of San Francisco the editor of The Grizzly Bear received the following postcard, dated Rome, January 19:
"They forward to me from home The Grizzly Bear, and I tell you it is mighty good to get the news. Enjoyed our trip to Jerusalem, up the Nile, to the pyramids, sphinx and old kings' tombs. But, after all, there is no place like good old California and home."
After Natives of the Redwoods.
Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn termi- nated his membership activities at Sacramento for Sutter Fort 241 February 28, when a big class of candidates were initiated. Details in The Grizzly Bear for April.

Cohn will now devote his attention to Hum- boldt County, visiting Arcata 20 March 5, Hum- boldt 14 (Eureka) March 9, Ferndale 93 March 16, Golden Star 88 (Alton) and Fortuna 218 at the latter place March 19. The Humboldt drive will close with a class initiation April 18.

PERSONAL MENTION.
Ezra W. Decoto (Oakland 50) of Oakland re- signed as district attorney of Alameda County to accept appointment on the State Railroad Commission by Governor Friend W. Richardson. To fill the district attorney vacancy, the Board of Supervisors appointed Earl W. Warren (Fruit- vale 252) of Oakland.

Big Development—Plans are under way, it is reported, for the intensive development of 110,000 acres of the Tejon ranch in Kern Coun- ty. An electric railway line from Los Angeles to Bakersfield, to run through the property, is said to be contemplated.

"But what can give pleasure, or what can seem fair, when the lingering moments are numbered with care?"—Robert Burns.

INSTALLATIONS CLAIM MUCH OF NATIVE DAUGHTERS' ATTENTION.

STOCKTON—ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY members of Joaquin 5 witnessed the installation of the Parlor's officers by D.D.G.P. Manuelita E. Aldecoa January 27, when Marian Stormes became the head of the Order's largest Parlor. The past term was a most happy and prosperous one, a distinctive gain in membership and finances being made, also a remarkable gain in attendance, the latter largely due to the unique social affairs arranged by Miss Aldecoa, the retiring president. During the evening she was installed by Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton as past president, and by the Parlor presented with a gold pencil, while the committee members who assisted throughout her administration remembered her with a dainty vanity case. The meeting-place had been transformed, by means of lanterns and hangings, into the beautiful "Cafe La Rosa." Following the installation ceremonies all were seated at small tables, and while a delicious menu, Spanish in nature, was served, fifteen members portrayed "A Dream of Spanish Revelry," replete with songs, dances and fiesta scenes.

Placerville—Marguerite 12 entertained Placerville 9 N.S.G.W. January 21, when officers of the Parlors were jointly installed. Miss Jessie Lyon and Lee Veerkamp officiated, and June Douglas and Will Darlington became the respective presidents. A program was presented and refreshments were served. Speeches, complimenting the Daughters on their ability as entertainers, were made by the Sons. Marguerite is arranging an entertainment program for the Grand Parlor, which meets here in June.

Grass Valley—Officers of Manzanita 29 were installed by D.D.G.P. Alyne McGagin, assisted by Past Grand President Allison F. Watt and Past President Lorraine Collins, Esther Fuller becoming president. There was a large attendance, including a big delegation from Laurel 6 (Nevada City). As a token of appreciation for her efforts in the Parlor's behalf an emblematic pin was presented Past President Collins, and Past Grand President Watt and D.D.G.P. McGagin were the recipients of gifts. A banquet was served at the conclusion of the installation ceremonies.

Modesto—Morada 199's officers were installed January 28 by D.D.G.P. Lou McCloud, Bertha Stowe becoming president. Mae Giovanetti read a California history selection from The Grizzly Bear. For having brought in the most members during the last term Rosetta Vivian, retiring president, presented a pillow to Cora Kelly. An emblematic pin was presented Ella Turner, retiring past president, and D.D.G.P. McCloud was also remembered with a gift. A tasty lunch followed the meeting. On Poppy Day the Parlor's members will sell California poppies to help swell the homeless children fund.

Elk Grove—Visitors were present from all parts of Sacramento County when the officers of Liberty 210 and Elk Grove 41 N.S.G.W. were jointly installed, Kathryn Martin and James Bradford becoming the respective presidents. On Liberty's behalf President Martin presented Mabel Thomas, retiring president, with an em-playing. Refreshments were followed by dancing. Mrs. John Lynn headed the capable committee in charge of the social. March 14, joint with General Winn 32 N.S.G.W., a dance will be given for the benefit of the homeless children.

Taft—Officers of Miocene 228 were installed January 20 by D.D.G.P. Mary E. Campbell, assisted by Effie Haverstock, Minnie Danner, Margaret Goodall, Calla Watson. Helen E. Hairston retiring president, was presented with a silver tray and candlestick, and presentations were also made to President Campbell and Recording Secretary Evalyn Towne. Delicious refreshments terminated a most enjoyable evening.

Oakland—At a joint public installation January 26 of Past Presidents' Association No. N.D.G.W. and East Bay Past Presidents' Assembly No. 3 N.S.G.W., Winifred Halter became president of the former and James P. Cronin governor of the latter. District Deputy Ma Moynihan and Governor-general Virgil Oreng officiated. The usual gift giving was a feature of the evening. At the ceremonies' close the Daughters were guests of the Sons at a banquet. Participating in the program were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Nyall, Mrs. St. John, Ethel Scheue, James P. Cronin, May C. Ward, Mae Cronin, Past Grand President Margaret Grote-Hill, Virgil Oreng, Ray B. Felton, Irene Rose, Josephine Schmidt and James P. Cronin were chairman and chairwoman, respectively, of the evening.

blematic pin, and to May Rhoades, who has retired from office after faithfully serving the Parlor since its institution in 1918, a gold pen and pencil set. A turkey supper concluded the ceremonies. Members of the two Parlors were royally entertained at a chicken-pie feast January 23 by Presidents Martin and Bradford. The dinner party given by the Past Presidents' Club of Liberty was a pleasant affair.

Petaluma—Officers of Petaluma 222 were installed January 20 by D.D.G.P. Florence Anderson, Emma Tomassi becoming president. Among the visitors were Past Grand President Emma Gruber-Foley and D.D.G.P. Vida Vollers, who have been of such valuable assistance to the Parlor since its institution, and delegations from Santa Rosa, Sonoma, Marinetta, Fairfax and Sea Point Parlors. D.D.G.P. Anderson received a beautiful gift. A banquet concluded the meeting. Katherine Marzolf deserves much credit for the wonderful success of the occasion. A neat sum was realized at the January 30 card party. Several members of the Parlor went to Sausalito February 9, when Grand President Catherine E. Gloster officially visited the Marin County Parlors, in joint session assembled.

Antioch—Officers of Antioch 223 were installed January 27 by D.D.G.P. Jasmine Burdewick, assisted by Grace Crumlin and Lucy White-man, all of Byron. Loretta Kelly, retiring past president, received a diamond-set emblematic pin, and gifts were presented D.D.G.P. Burdewick and Grand Organist Estelle Evans. The Parlor entertained a large number at a social function February 8. In recognition of Valentine Day hearts were used in the decorations and were also the evening's trumps in the card and it is estimated $1,000 will be required. Grand President Catherine E. Gloster made the first donation to the fund, and an additional $250 was raised at a card party February 3. The Parlor plans a pilgrimage to the mission, and also to feature an Admission Day festival there in September. Through its prompt action the roof of the historic building was repaired, so as to resist the rains.

In charge of the restoration work is an executive committee composed of President Edna Sharpe, Misses Mary Wood, Christina Moller, Tullita de la Cuesta, Winona Higgins, Inez Sharpe, Misses Irene Quinn, A. E. Platz, C. Reams, Alonzo Crabb, Floyd Stewart, Charles Sedgwick, William Belt, M. C. Harrison, F. L. Birabent.

"True Friendship" the Theme.

Oakland—A most cordial welcome was extended Grand President Catherine E. Gloster when she officially visited Piedmont 87 February 12. The officers were pleasingly attired in costumes of pastel shades. Loretta Reed's singing of "I Love You, California," was enjoyed by all. In the course of a much-appreciated address on "True Friendship," Miss Gloster complimented the officers on their rendition of the ritual.

On the Parlor's behalf Marlon E. Ring, chairman of the evening, presented Grand President Gloster with a thirteen-piece luncheon set in Madiera work, and presentations were made to D.D.G.P. May Barthold, Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher, President Edna Healy. In the banquet-room, where a wonderful repast was served, the decorations commemorated the birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln. The evening was a great success, due to the untiring efforts of Marlon E. Ring and her energetic committee. The twenty-ninth institution anniversary of Piedmont was celebrated with a banquet February 17.

New Citizens Welcomed.

Oroville—Naturalization day members of Gold of Ophir 190 appeared in court and Pansey Demes and Florence Boyle extended welcomes to the nation and the state to the newly-made citizens, and Irene Lund, in the Parlor's behalf, presented each with a copy of the "American Creed." Half the courtroom was occupied by students from the Durham and Oroville high-schools, and every Butte County community was represented in the attendance.

For its Pioneer Museum the Parlor has received from Fredericka Braden badges of the Marysville and the Sacramento Pioneer Associations belonging to her father, and from Emma Danforth a powder-horn used in 1849 by her father.

January 23 being Native Sons' and Daughters' night at the Social Center, Gold of Ophir and Argonaut 8 N.S.G.W. furnished the entire program, which consisted of two skits and several musical numbers.

Grand President's March Itinerary.

Alturas—During the month of March, Grand President Catherine E. Gloster will officially visit the following Subordinate Parlors on the dates noted:

2nd (jointly)—Santa Cruz 26, Santa Cruz; El Pajaro 35, Watsonville.

3rd (jointly)—Fremont 59, San Francisco; Las Lomas 72, San Francisco; Calaveras 103, San Francisco; Linda Rosa 170, San Francisco.

4th—James Lick 220, San Francisco.

9th—Mission 227, San Francisco.

10th—Argonaut 166, Oakland.

11th—Bay Side 204, Oakland.

12th—Keith 137, San Francisco.

13th—Twin Peaks 185, San Francisco.

14th—Alta 3, San Francisco.

17th—Caliz de Oro 206, Stockton.

18th—Ivy 88, Lodi.

Successful Social Function.

Tracy—February 10 one of the most successful social affairs ever held here was given by El Pescadero 82. Whist was the diversion, and forty tables of players contended for the twenty-one prizes, mostly of exquisite handwork. A large sum was realized, the nucleus of a fund to be raised by the Parlor to enable it to make an impressive demonstration at the September jubilee celebration in San Francisco.

Bobbed Heads Entertained.

Hollister—The unshorn members of Copa de Oro 105 entertained the "bobbed heads" at a theater party January 23, returning the compliment extended them several weeks previously. February 13 a delightful kitchen shower was

OLD TIMERS ARE GIVEN

A FEW MONTHS OF GRACE.

In compliance with a resolution adopted by the Legislature, Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, announces that he will not compel owners of cars manufactured prior to 1919 and lighted from magnetos to comply with provisions of the law requiring standard headlight equipment until September 1, 1925.

This action will save a large number of farmers and others who own an old-type car from the necessity of spending money for headlight equipment on automobiles that, because of their age, have become of small value.

"This ruling," says Marsh, "does not mean we are letting the bars down with regard to headlight equipment for cars manufactured since 1919. We are going to redouble our efforts to see that such cars are properly equipped, and it is our intention to put a charge of reckless driving against any person caught on the highways at night without proper lighting equipment."

LATEST MORELAND TRUCK

PROVES ITS PULLING POWER.

At the invitation of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, with the co-operation of the Glendale and Burbank Chambers of Commerce, foreign representatives located in Los Angeles visited manufacturing plants in the San Fernando Valley.

They had luncheon at the Moreland plant and afterwards went through the factory, where they witnessed a spectacular test of the latest Moreland product, a ten-ton six-wheel Moreland truck, in a tug-of-war with three ordinary four-ton trucks.

The six-wheel, ten-ton truck was easily the winner. It pulled the three trucks backward while their wheels were going forward; in fact, it played "cat and mouse" with them. When the driver cut out the clutch, it let itself be pulled back; when he let the clutch in again, it "walked" away with the three trucks at its back. It showed the remarkable pulling power and flexibility of the six-wheel construction, which represents the latest development in the automotive industry.

WHERE THE GOLDEN POPPIES GROW.

From J. H. Josselyn of San Diego, The Grizzly Bear has received the following verse, accompanied by this notation: "Here is something with merit, I think. It was written by an old California printer—Wm. F. Cutten (Shorty)—some years ago while absent from California in the East":

I have roamed the country over
In a vain, unending quest,
To still that never-ceasing,

Vague, spirit of unrest
And when mid the desert's silence
Or on mountains topped with snow,
My thoughts keep constantly turning
And my heart ne'er ceases yearning
For that glorious land of sunshine
Where the Golden Poppies grow.

Chorus

When the morning sunlight streaming
Ope's the dew-tipped petals gleaming,
Beside some sparkling streamlet
Where Sierra's waters flow;
And the balmy breezes o'er us,
Filled with songbirds' joyous chorus
Clothe the earth in song and beauty
Where the Golden Poppies grow.

Through vale and trackless forest,
Softly falling to the sea,
Wind countless limpid brooklets,
Making tuneful melody.
By some such stream I'd rest content
As the seasons come and go,
And when life's sands run over
'Neath some field of sweet-leaved clover
May I find a peace eternal
Whilst the Poppies o'er me grow.

MOTOR VEHICLE REGISTRATIONS.

Motor vehicle registrations in California during 1924 totaled 1,350,759, according to an announcement of the State Motor Vehicle Department February 11. The registrations increased 229,974, compared with the 1923 figures, and it is predicted the 1925 total will be a record-breaker. The final 1924 registration figures include: Autos, 1,125,381; solid-tire trucks, 41,959; pneumatic-tire trucks, 152,054; motorcycles, 12,325; trailers, 19,040.

Of the 1,125,381 autos registered in the state during 1924, 465,950 were credited to Los Angeles County, 84,665 to San Francisco, and 77,293 to Alameda County.

Millions From Gas Tax—For the year ending December 31, 1924, the state gasoline tax brought $17,406,824.51 into California's treasury, according to the State Board of Equalization. The returns, by quarters, included: First, $3,018,366.56; second, $3,111,200.60; third, $3,788,281.79; fourth, $3,969,975.56.

Vast Sum Spent by Motorists—A statistician of the United States Department of Agriculture has figured out that it cost California motorists $700,000,000 during 1924 to operate their vehicles over 10,122,000,000 miles of roadway.

Napa County's Productivity—Fruit produced in Napa County during 1924 had a value of $2,686,000, according to the county horticultural commissioner. The grape crop led in value, $1,300,000, closely followed by the prune crop, $1,050,000.

They're Coming—The touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California predicts this year's motor tourists will break all past records by at least 20 percent, in point of numbers.

Twins Popular—There were 87,000 births in California during 1924, reports the State Bureau of Vital Statistics. Included were 950 sets of twins, fifteen sets of triplets and one set of quadruplets.

Souvenirs—To commemorate the seventy-fifth anniversary of California's admission to statehood, Congress has authorized the coining of 300,000 souvenir four-bit-pieces at the San Francisco Mint.

given, with Irma Dettlinger as honored guest. A dainty basket of red and white decorated with hearts and red roses was filled to overflowing with various and sundry kitchen utensils, accompanied by congratulatory sentiments in prose and rhyme. Refreshments appropriate to the occasion were served at tables decorated with hearts and valentines. From the bride's cake Helen Leonard was the fortunate recipient of the ring.

Grand President at Joint Gathering.

Martinez. Fourteen Parlors were represented at the February 16 meeting of Las Juntas 221, when Grand President Catherine E. Gloster paid her official visit to the local Parlor, Richmond 147, Stirling 146 (Pittsburg), Antioch 223 and Donner 193 (Byron) in joint session. Other guests included Past Grand Presidents Mary E. Bell and Amy V. McAvoy, Grand Organist Estelle Evans, D.D.G.P. Jasmine Burdewick.

Las Juntas' officers exemplified the ritual, and were highly complimented. Addresses were delivered by the Grand President and other grand officers, and each was presented with a silver gift. To the president of Las Juntas, Miss Hazel Rice, Stirling Parlor made a presentation. Both the meeting-room and the banquet-hall, where refreshments were served, were beautifully decorated.

Initiations, President's Appeal.

San Jose. Vendome 100 has received notice of Grand President Catherine E. Gloster's official visit May 21. That is the prettiest month of the year here, the trees then being in full bloom, and a wonderful evening is looked forward to.

After the February 19 meeting a dinner was given in honor of Mrs. P. Arthur Nelson, a recent bride, who was Miss Emma Jennings, first vice-president of the Parlor. Her future home will be in Nevada. That same evening Washington's birthday was observed with appropriate exercises.

With the advent of Mrs. Margaret Weber as president, Vendome has gained new enthusiasm. The members are responding to her appeal for initiations. Many social affairs, to be held during her term, are in prepaation.

SAN FRANCISCO BULLETIN

THE REAL BRET HARTE

CHARLES A. MURDOCK DELIVERED an address on "The Real Bret Harte" before the California Historical Society January 20. He lived in Uniontown, Humboldt County, in 1860, and it was there that he first met Harte. A Uniontown newspaper owner employed Harte as printer and assistant editor. Murdock subsequently moved to San Francisco, where he renewed his relations with Harte, who had preceded him, and they continued their friendship during the prosperous years of the "Overland Monthly" magazine, and until Harte left California.

Murdock put the quietus on the story that Harte was a shotgun messenger on the Wells-Fargo stages said to have been running from Eureka, Humboldt County, to the northern mines near Mount Shasta. "That was an impossibility," he said, "because there were no wagon roads to the mines, and no stages to run on them." Bret Harte's charming qualities as a friend, a companion and a man were dwelt upon at length.

Ina Coolbrith, poet-laureate of California, who was a writer for the "Overland," followed Murdock and spoke of the author of "The Luck" as "Frank" during the first part of her talk, but upon reaching the climax of her address she exclaimed: "I knew Bret Harte! He was a true friend, a man of genius, a gentleman—without fear and without reproach." Plaudits were showered on both speakers and the members manifested their appreciation by unanimous votes of thanks.

The society's exhibition of Bret Harte material during the week of January 19-24 was the first of its kind ever held. It was a splendid success. Sufficient material was contributed by members of the society and their friends to fill twelve large showcases. The interest manifested showed the high esteem in which Bret Harte is held. The society's rooms in the Wells-Fargo Building were thronged during the six days that they were thrown open to the public.

Rare manuscripts were shown. Among these was the original draft of the poem entitled "Dickens in Camp." Autograph letters and other original manuscripts were placed side by side with printed copies of Harte's works in the cases. Several extensive collections were loaned by owners. One of them came from Sacramento and two from Los Angeles. Some of this material doubtless will reappear at the society's exhibition of historical material which will be held next September in honor of the diamond jubilee which will celebrate California's seventy-fifth anniversary of admission to the union.

COMMEMORATE DISCOVERY GOLD.

The "Old Timers," an organization composed of Native Sons who joined the fraternity over twenty years ago, held a banquet January 24 to commemorate the seventy-seventh anniversary of the discovery of gold by James W. Marshall at Coloma, El Dorado County.

Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington acted as toastmaster, and the banquet was made most interesting by having each old-timer introduce himself and state where he was born, when he joined the Order, and when and by what route his parents came to California.

CAMPAIGN IS ON.

Complimentary to Grand President Edward J. Lynch, the twenty-eight Native Son Parlor in San Francisco are conducting a membership campaign, and indications are that 400 and more candidates will be rounded up. The class will be initiated by the grand officers March 28 in the auditorium of Native Sons' Building.

as these officers: Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez (Pacific 10), chairman; S. A. Bernstein (Mission 4), vice-chairman; Fred Kockler (Twin Peaks 14), secretary; Walter Stobing (Marshall 202), treasurer. To create a friendly rivalry the committee is offering three prizes to the competing parlors, which have been divided into four classes, according to present membership.

GROWING IN POPULARITY.

The Tuesday night social dances at the Win- Garden ballroom under the auspices of Rin- Parlor No. 72, Dolores Parlor No. 208, Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 and Balboa Parlor No. 234 S.G.W. are becoming more than popular, as indicated by the increased attendance each week. Natives and their friends. The dances are held for the benefit of the social funds of the Parlors, and the money will be used in defraying their expenses incident to the diamond jubilee celebration in September.

PRaises BESTOWED.

Rincon Parlor No. 72 N.S.G.W. received an official visit January 28 from Grand Trustee Fred H. McKnew, who was greeted by a splendid attendance. Officers of the Parlor were installed by D.D.G.P. Jos. Burton, Frank Carl becoming president. Grand Trustee McKnew was strong in his commendation of the Parlor, particularly commending the splendid financial condition, and D.D.G.P. Burton praised the officers for the efficient manner in which they exemplified the ritual.

Other speakers included Dave Capurro of San Francisco 49, Fred Boyken of Stanford 76 and Rincon's own, Grand Trustee James F. Wilson, who appealed to his hearers to be better Natives and to take more interest in the affairs of the Parlor and the Order. At the San Bernardino Grand Parlor in May, Rincon will present Grand Trustee Wilson as a candidate for grand and vice-president.

CALIFORNIA THE WONDERLAND.

Officers of Bay City Parlor No. 104 N.S.G.W. were installed by D.D.G.P. I. M. Peckham January 28, Harry J. Frank becoming president and promising a great year for the Parlor. George H. Barron (Precita 187), curator of the M. H. De Young Memorial Museum in Golden Gate Park, delivered a masterful and most illuminating address on "California, the Wonderland of the World," and held his audience spellbound. Bay City has engaged the Italian ballroom of the Saint Francis Hotel for the Admission Day festivities and will hold "open house."

MERRYMAKERS ENTERTAIN.

Assisted by his crew of Castro 232 merry-makers, D.D.G.P. V. D. Collins installed the officers of Olympus 189 February 4, Thomas J. Flahavan becoming president. Grand Trustee James A. Wilson was present on his official visit, and spoke on "What the Order Means to the Natives." The good of the order committee—Elmer Cuadro, Henry Joost, George Collin, Frank Fahey, Tom McDonnell—took charge after the installation and served a Spanish supper. Between courses Castro's merrymakers supplied entertainment.

Olympus and Fremont 59 N.D.G.W. hold joint monthly dances at Redmen's Hall; the proceeds are turned into the Admission Day celebration fund. Secretary Frank I. Butler says Olympus may have a 50 percent membership increase after the joint class initiation March 28; at any rate, the Parlor will be well represented among the initiates. "The Parlor reports progress," he says.

WHIST PARTY, MARCH 23.

February 9, La Estrella Parlor 89 N.D.G.W. initiated two candidates and celebrated the birthdays of the January and February girls. The table from which a delectable repast was served was decorated with red tulpe and hearts, and a centerpiece consisting of a large crepe-paper heart holding carnations and asparagus ferns. Valentines were in profusion. Preparations are under way for a whist party March 23.

Grand President Catherine E. Gloster officially visited La Estrella, Minerva 2, Oro Fino 9, Las Lomas 96 at a joint meeting January 26. Among those present were Past Grand President May C. Boldemann, Grand Marshal Mae Himes-Noonan, Grand Trustees Lillian Beguhl and May L. Edwards, D.D.G.Ps. May McCarthy, Helen Mann, Frances Kenny and Marguerite Kauffmann. Grand President Gloster was presented with a half-dozen silver dinner knives as a memento of the occasion.

MOTHERS GUESTS.

Fourteen years ago when the Moreland Trucks were first made, many people scoffed at the idea that quality manufactured products could be made in California.

In 1923, over $4,000,000 worth of Moreland Trucks and Buses were sold in direct competition with the leading makes in the United States.

The Moreland Company has demonstrated California's manufacturing possibilities by building trucks and buses of a quality unexcelled by any produced anywhere in this country.

Fanny Munter, Theresa Wichrowski, Emma Horber, Rose Leone, Pauline Burke, Emma Carr, Beth Reddy, Marie Weder, Mary Bailey, Anna Witt, Elise Witt, Annie McGrath, Myrtle Curtis, Abbie Hayes, Charlotte Gunther, Ida Cordy, the latter two being members of the Parlor. Other guests were D.D.G.Ps. Isabelle Neilsen and Helen T. Mann. To each guest was presented a corsage bouquet. The evening closed with dancing and the playing of games.

Officers of the Parlor were publicly installed February 13 by D.D.G.P. Isabelle Neilsen, assisted by Margaret Lewis, Mrs. Hall, Winifred Biederman and Mrs. H. Leader, Faye Curtis becoming president. At the ceremonies' close the following program was presented: Piano solo, Miss Regina Sanders; fancy dances, little Miss Marie Polaski; piano solo, Miss Mary Crawford; song, Dr. Dennis. Light refreshments were served.

SURPRISE SHOWER.

Golden Gate Parlor No. 153 N.D.G.W. had a valentine fancy dress party February 9, when several members appeared in elaborate dresses of the long ago, and others in fine character costumes of the present day. During the serving of refreshments a messenger called for Treasurer Edith Griffin and handed her three suitcases filled with gifts from the members. It was a surprise shower, in honor of her approaching marriage.

February 12 the Parlor celebrated its seven-tenth institution anniversary with a banquet. Between courses dancing was enjoyed and Miss Wardlow delighted with several popular vocal numbers. The Parlor has taken up the study of California history.

INSTRUCTIVE.

State Forester M. B. Pratt addressed the Native Sons' Luncheon Club on forest preservation and reforestation. T. C. Conmy, past president and charter member Golden Gate 29, gave a two-minute talk on the old town of Shasta, Shasta County.

February 18, Supreme Court Justice William H. Waste (Berkeley 210) spoke on "The California Missions." Walter N. Brunt (Mission 38) gave a two-minute talk on early San Francisco and the establishment of the first printing office in the city.

There are sixteen stories in all, of Centerville and its civilians. Each is a masterpiece etched by a master. From "Grandpa Gilpin," the first, to "Peter Quigley," the last, the reader is swept along in a swift current of tingling words, now bubbling with humor, but ever widening out into unexpected depths of pathos. Each story has as its nucleus one character, which develops as the plot and action proceed. It is as though Merz turned a microscopic light on each life, subjected it to brief but comprehensive probing, and passed on.

An "O. Henry" twist, subtle humor, terseness of diction and a sympathetic knowledge of characters, make this book of splendid worthwhile. At last, the Centervilles, overshadowed by numberless cartoons or blank obscurity, have found a place in the sun.

WHO WAS "SAM HILL"?

The simile, "Swear like Sam Hill," is somewhat widely used in the United States, but who Sam Hill was—if ever—is as yet unknown. The suggestion has been offered that it may have originated in 1848-49, when for eighteen months the song sensation of one of London's music-halls was "Sam Hill," a weird chant with a haunting refrain.

That theory, however, is effectively disproved by Frank J. Willstach, whose hobby for the past twenty years has been the collecting of similes for his "Dictionary of Similes," recently published by Little, Brown & Company in an enlarged edition.

Willstach has been in quest of the origin of Sam Hill for 10, these many years, and the best

Previous to the institution ceremonies, a barbecue, prepared by the Sepulveda Parlor boys, was served. The following neighboring Parlors were represented by large delegations: Los An-

SUN-DIAL UNVEILED.

Commemorating Philip De Neva, who surveyed the original pueblo of Los Angeles in 1781, Cabrillo Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, unveiled a large sun dial in Lafayette Park, February 22, Washington's birthday.

THIRD ANNUAL GRAND BALL.

The Native Sons' and Native Daughters' third annual grand ball is billed for April 24. Through the courtesy of President A. C. Davis of Corona N.S.G.W., it will be held at the Wilshire Country Club and will be strictly formal. Admission will be $1.00 per person. A wonderful time is assured, so plan to be one of the participants.

MASQUERADE, MARCH 17.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. will feature a masquerade ball Saint Patrick's Day, March 17. It will be given in the auditorium of Native Sons' Building, 136 West Seventeenth street, which, by that date, will have been remodeled to satisfy the demand of the most exacting. A committee composed of Sidney Witkowski (chairman), President Ronald M. Ross,
A. G. Beazell, W. G. Newell, C. E. Lloyd and L. W. Smith have the ball in charge. Numerous prizes will be awarded and high-class music provided. Admission will be 50c per person, and all Natives and their friends are extended an invitation. As the proceeds from the masquerade will go to Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 for its Grand Parlor entertainment fund, there should be an immense outpouring.

Los Angeles is conducting a novel membership campaign, which will close April 23. The active members have been divided, according to ages, into three teams. The "old boys" (over 45) are captained by Henry Brodek, Ira H.
Nance is in charge of the 35-to-45ers, while Joseph F. Velasco Jr. is captain of the "youngsters" (under 35). The next regular monthly initiation will be held March 12. Following this drive the Parlor's initiation fee will be considerably advanced.

Andrew Stodel, chairman of the Parlor's baseball committee, is arranging for a Native Son baseball game at San Bernardino during the Grand Parlor in May; those interested should get in touch with him. February 26 was "Witkowski night" at Los Angeles, "Sid," who is chairman of the good of the order committee, staging another long-to-be-remembered affair,
which was attended by many eligible.

FOOTHILL PLAYGROUND ENLARGED.

The Federal Congress has passed and President Coolidge signed a bill creating the Greater Los Angeles County Public Park in the San Bernardino foothills.

Los Angeles County now owns a 560-acre playground there, and by action of Congress has been given perpetual jurisdiction over 5,000 acres of forest reserve adjoining for public park purposes.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS WILL HAVE PARLOR IN SAN PEDRO.

San Pedro is to have a Native Daughter parlor, too! It is being organized by Deputy Grand President Carrie Lenhouse, and will be instituted March 7 by Grand President Catherine E. Gloster of Alturas, Modoc County, assisted by Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty of San Francisco.
Mrs. Lenhouse has made a bet with John T.
Newell, Grand Trustee N.S.G.W., that it will have more charter members than the newly-instituted Sepulveda N.S.G.W. Parlor, and indications are that Newell will "have to buy."

The new parlor will be known as Rudecinda, being so named in honor of Mrs. Rudecinda Sep-

Landscaping—

Older residents of California are familiar with the fact that Howard & Smith have created many of the most beautiful gardens in the State. With the vast development which has recently taken place in Southern California, however, it may be that some of the newer residents are not aware of the fact that Howard & Smith have a landscape department capable of rendering the very highest service in the treatment of their grounds. In the development of a property, confidence can only be placed in those having a thorough understanding of landscaping in its entirety. A full comprehension of this subject, from the minutest detail to the placing of the house itself, is essential if beauty and harmony are to be the ultimate result.

If you are contemplating the development of your grounds we will be pleased to have you confer with us.

ulveda-Dodson, who was selected for the first senior past president at the preliminary meeting February 19, when a full corps of officers, with Lottie Sanstrom as president, were chosen. D.D.G.P. Lenhouse presided, and 114 applications were presented. Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer was an interested visitor and outlined the Order's aims and accomplishments. Long Beach Parlor No. 154 was represented by a large delegation of its members, who served refreshments.

LADIES' NIGHT, MARCH 19.

Corona Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. added several new names to its membership-roll during February. The 19th, Los Angeles Parlor adjourned early and, headed by President Ronald M. Ross and Grand Trustee John T. Newell, paid a visit to Corona in force and its officers exemplified the ritual in a most efficient manner. March has been dedicated to the membership campaign committee, and Chairman John Topham says "the steam roller is performing beautifully." There will be initiations the 5th and 26th.

Corona will entertain the womenfolks March 19, the affair being in the hands of the good of the order committee, Carl E. Frowein (chairman), William Kennedy, Henry Bodkin, George McLain, Harry Jorder, G. W. Haight, A. G. Boschke. February 12th the committee had charge of a dance, which was one of the most successful social affairs ever given by the Parlor and was largely attended.

TO ATTEND INSTITUTION.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. officers were installed February 20 by D.D.G.P. Carrie Lenhouse. The meeting of the 27th was given over to a songfest and the celebration of the birthdays of the February members. Delicious refreshments were served.

March 6 the Parlor will initiate a class of six candidates, and on the 7th attend the institution of Rudecinda Parlor at San Pedro. The 20th John Steven McGroarty will speak on the missions, and the 27th will be another songfest. During March, the date to be announced later, Los Angeles will give a dance, arrangements for which are in charge of Jennie Raymond, Viola McKenzie, Sherie Garison, Marvel Thomas.

CANDIDACIES ANNOUNCED.

Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W., by initiations during February, increased its membership to 102. The February 24 meeting was an interesting one, several talks being made on matters of general interest. Pascoe Michel, in charge of the Hellman stables, gave an interesting account of his trip to the Denver Horse Show with a string of horses, and described how the prizes, as well as the hearts of the people there, had been captured. Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer spoke on organization work in the south.

During the evening it was announced that Edgar McKee (Ramona 109) will be a candidate for mayor at the May primary, and that Sidney Neighbours of Vaquero and James H. Dodson Jr. (Sepulveda 263) will seek places in the council.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Theodore La Franchi Sr., father of Theodore La Franchi Jr. (Los Angeles N.S.), died February 10.

Mrs. Mary Catherine Payne, mother of Lee Payne (Los Angeles N.S.), passed away February 20.

Joseph Arthur Mendoza, affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., died February 20. A wife survives.

CALIFORNIA COUNTIES OLDER THAN STATE

"THERE'S A KID IN OAKLAND who's his own mother's brother," a young reporter remarked to me the other day. Then, as I registered perplexity, "That's right—he's his grandmother's son." I blinked, and the enlightener continued, "His father's brother-in-law understand?" "No. How'd he get that way?" I inquired. "Why, it's perfectly simple. His mother's still alive, but for property reasons his grandmother's adopted him. The other relationships naturally follow."

If a state can be looked upon as the mother of its counties, then California and some of her counties have a relationship about as curious as that of the Oakland child cited; for twenty-seven California counties are older than the mother state herself.

The act creating California's original counties was signed by Governor Peter H. Burnett February 18, 1850. The admission of California to the union took place September 9, 1850. So, while California must wait until next fall for her seventy-fifth birthday party, nearly half her counties could have celebrated theirs during February.

The twenty-seven counties which are older than the state are: San Diego, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, Monterey, "Branciforte," San Francisco, Santa Clara, Contra Costa, Marin, Sonoma, Solano, "Yola," Napa, Mendocino, Sacramento, El Dorado, Sutter, Yuba, Butte, "Colusi," Shasta, Trinity, Calaveras, San Joaquin, Tuolumne and Mariposa. By amendatory acts passed during the First Session of the Legislature, the name "Branciforte" was changed to Santa Cruz, and "Yola" became Yolo. The name Colusa evolved imperceptibly and through force of public opinion, apparently. As late as 1857, the statutes speak quaintly of "Colusi."

The Cities of San Diego, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, Santa Cruz, San Francisco, San Jose, Martinez, San Rafael, Napa, Ukiah, Sacramento, Marysville, Weaverville, Stockton and Sonora are all original county-seats.

Monterey County's first county-seat, however, was Monterey; not until 1875 did Salinas attain its present headship. Not Fairfield, but Benicia, was Solano County's original seat. Similarly, Sonoma Town once took precedence over Santa Rosa as the county-seat of Sonoma County. And Fremont, Washington and Cacheville all had their turns before Woodland became the county-seat of Yolo. Until 1857, instead of Placerville, Coloma—site of Marshall's discovery of gold—was the county-seat of El Dorado County. Sutter County, like Yolo, has had a variety of county-seats—Oro, Nicolaus, Auburn and Vernon all preceding Yuba City in that capacity.

Oroville did not become the county-seat of Butte County until Chico, Hamilton and Bidwell Bar had all had their day at it. Before Colusa became county-seat of Colusa County, Monroeville had that distinction. Shasta County, having first taken Redding for its county-seat, vacillated over to Shasta, but changed its mind again in favor of Redding. Calaveras has had still more difficulty in making up its mind, Double Springs, Jackson and Mokelumne Hill all having antedated San Andreas as county-seat. And Mariposa County made Agua Fria its headquarters until 1854, when they were removed to Mariposa Town.

It is interesting to compare present-day population figures with those of 1850 in the various original counties. In the days of gold, El Dorado had her 20,000-odd residents; according to the census of 1920, she had only 6,426. Calaveras has fallen off similarly, from 16,884 to 6,183. But San Luis Obispo from 336 had grown in 1920 to 21,893; Santa Barbara from 1,185 to 41,097; San Joaquin from 3,647 to 79,905; San Diego from 798 to 112,248, and Los Angeles from 3,530 to 936,438.

In view of the importance of the year 1925 as a California anniversary and of the big celebration plans afoot, it is unfortunate that we have no well established and financed state agency for research, publication and advisory functions in state history. In this respect, California, which claims for itself to be usually in the lead, takes lowest rank. In the lead, did we say? Well, that depends on what you're talking about. If it's state historical activity, the words apply to Iowa, Kansas and Missouri, to Oregon and Nevada and Arizona—but not to California. Here's why: California, at present, gives not a cent of state funds to such work!

However, California is waking up. Senate Bill No. 727, now pending, provides for the recognition and support of the California State Historical Association, which for the past two years has been functioning gallantly but desperately on membership fees and a catch-22 catch-can—or can't—salary basis. Senate Bill No. 727 doesn't provide for the lavish honoraria of state historical work. It is too modest to attract the attention of the economy-hewers. All it asks for is $15,000 for the biennium. But if it is passed it will raise California from the bottom rung to a position above Arizona and Nevada and to the level of Hawaii. So it deserves the support of every honest to goodness Californian.

WAKE UP, AMERICANS!

from our shores. A blood that cannot and will not assimilate will destroy Americanization and America. The future demands that we be powerful enough to make laws and enforce them.

"Greed of individuals, corporations and international bankers has caused us to lose all sense of proportion. We are governed by idealism, new thought, clever captions and worshiping the rising star, with little thought of history, respect or reverence for our great men and American organizations that made us great. Very little tradition and practical patriotism remain.

"The Limitation of Arms Treaty was the result of a well-laid plot to strip us of power. Today, in every country, new plans are formulating against our wealth, and to further weaken us. Are we ready to take another step in the dark? We never won a conference, and we never lost a war. We will never win a conference against odds, and we could lose the next war if we are weakened further. Through the act of our stupid statesmen, the Limitation of Arms Treaty leaves us weak on the sea, and our own stupidity leaves us weaker in the air and under the sea.

"The influence behind the move to further weaken our defense is powerful—foreign lobbies and pacifist lobbies. The pacifists know not what they do. They are playing the game of the foreigners and bolshevik, believing, in their good intent, that they can secure peace through our weakness and foreign conscience. There are certain organizations and individuals in this country conducting a campaign, wilfully or otherwise, to weaken us further. These organizations are backed by powerful influences, financial and otherwise.

"The pacifist move is a serious menace to national defense! One of the chief backers of organizations that spread this propaganda is a backer of the League of Nations Society; his attorney is its chairman. He would dominate the policies of this nation, as he dominates the wealth of the nation.

"These organizations are about ready to force us into European entanglements. Certain religious organizations have stated they will not defend, even if invaded; certain colleges have adopted the same spirit. The pacifist move has become sentimental hysteria. The National Civic Federation, the National Security League, the National Defense Society, are aware of these activities, yet they do little to offset them.

"A few days ago, Mrs. Carrie Catts, with a letter from Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr., held a meeting at Washington to further weaken our defense in the interest of peace. It was only last April that the same Mrs. Catts, with her delegation, paraded Washington, carrying banners, 'Abolish the Army and Navy.' I notice that the navy is being used to protect Rockefeller's interests in China, and it was the officers of the navy who were used to get information for the Standard Oil in the Orient. Another move of these interests is to get control of the navy fuel, and make our first-line defense a subsidiary to the big oil interests. Every move in the interest of defense is blocked! Urging these interests on, is one object—to force us into the League of Nations or the World's Court, which is the same show only different seats. If their doctrine was preached in Europe, they might stop the race for military and naval supremacy. To preach it here, is only to weaken us further and force us into foreign entanglements that we could not withdraw from without the entire world being against us.

"While Raymond B. Fosdick, the chairman of the League of Nations Society and the Rockefeller Foundation, is making speeches for the League of Nations, Mrs. Carrie Catts, with the same support, is trying to tear down our national defense. The government, on the other hand, is preparing to take from the navy its chances of storing its own fuel. If the navy reserves are closed down there will be a colossal loss of oil, by draining to the companies surrounding the navy reserves, the deterioration of all machinery and equipment. Like all other policies for national defense, they will go into the discard.

"The navy will be further forced under the domination of big corporations, as will be Muscle Shoals, the government nitrate plant, and as is our aeroplane industry, which would drain the treasury for the benefit of the owners of patents instead of machines. Gradually, but surely, we are slipping further under corporation control, which will make our national defense a subsidiary to a few big corporations, as was our aeroplane program during the last war. $1,000,000,000 spent, and not one fit machine overseas!

"Another serious situation was and is the submarine program, which is in private hands. The government has paid to private submarine builders over $150,000,000. The submarines delivered by those corporations are, in most cases, worthless. Admiral Coontz, in his report of 1923 on the submarine boats, said the submarine boat program was inaugurated in 1917. It has taken seven years to complete fifty submarines, and the majority of them are unsatisfactory. Admiral Coontz further in his report said, 'The T boats, the last boats to be delivered to this country—submarines T1, T2 and T3—were of such inferior character as to make it inadvisable to retain them in commission longer.' These vessels were also sent to Hampton Roads and decommissioned.

"Private corporations have done much to retard the progress of submarines in this country. The navy was in their hands and was compelled to take such junk as was delivered. It was not until the navy copied a German submarine and built in a government yard under and by naval officers that we got our first two fleet submarines, the V1 and the V2, the only fleet submarines in the navy. Yet, the submarine was invented in this country and we paid over $150,000,000 for worthless junk. How can the people stand by and see our national defense played with! Everything that would make and keep us secure is interfered with, until the initiative of your officers is gone; then the navy is but a name. There have been over two hundred resignations in the last year, more court martials and desertions than ever before, and BEHIND THIS IS A FIGHT TO DELIVER US BY DISARMING.

"The navy must be independent and self-maintained, regardless of international Americans who would commercialize even the flag. The navy cannot make plans to defend this nation, with every sinew of war in the hands of people who have but one ambition—the League of Nations. It is a foreign concoction, carrying only obligations and penalties for the United States. Fosdick says the League of Nations has rooted itself in the hearts of fifty-five nations. He did not say they were looking for a nice rich, fat boy to come over and bring his playthings. He did not say that Japan insisted that the Exclusion Law be left to the League of Nations, and that that body held over our heads a $12,000,000,000 obligation, and would play that trump card against the debt.

"The voice of the people of the United States in two elections was against foreign entanglements. The new plan is, to further weaken the army and navy and force us into the combine. The same methods used by big business against the little man are being resorted to: weaken him and he is ours. The powers controlling the destiny of this nation are becoming a menace. Their competitive methods in business are not of 'brotherly love' quality. These same men or type of men who are interested in doing so much for Europe, even to weakening the United States, are more powerful today than in 1909, when that fearless leader, that great American, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, challenged the power of the Standard Oil, the Harriman interests and others. Harriman's answer was, that whenever it was necessary he could buy a sufficient number of senators, congressmen and judiciary. Today a plan is laid before the government, coming from certain interests through one of their subsidiaries, that will put the navy's fuel beyond the navy's reach. All work to further construct will stop under this plan; to maintain what we already have will be interfered with. Work and expense will count for nothing. What little oil the navy has under its control will be

THE AMERICAN CREED.

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I, therefore, believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag and to defend it against all enemies.—William Tyler Page.

lost. These corporations will drive a dagger in the heart of the war plans division. The navy cannot make plans under any such arrangements. The navy must be independent and self-maintained. TO TAKE FROM THE NAVY THE SINEWS OF WAR, IS A TREASONABLE POLICY, KNOWING THAT JAPAN IS ARMING AND PREPARING!

"If any Americans or others tamper with the lawmaking body at Washington in its apparent determination to deliver us into the hands of Europe by further weakening us, they are dubbed by the pacifists and interests enemies or traitors. The House sub-committee on naval affairs refused to hear me. The Senate committee on naval affairs refused to hear me. I was informed that certain information that I had should not come out. I had stated our submarines were worthless and that the navy should build its own. I further stated the navy should build its own ships. I stated the navy's fuel supplies should be under the navy and that great reserves should be stored at strategic points. I stated that officers should be permitted to speak without fear or reprimand, transfer or demotion. That the navy should be taken out of politics, and that corporations during the last war did not qualify to govern our defense policies. I cited as one incident the air craft scandal. The navy cannot depend on private corporations in time of war. Plans must be made in advance. Pledges from corporations are not sufficient for a navy to depend upon. Commandeering in time of war is only successful, providing there is anything to commandeer. To you on the Pacific, and other Americans, I repeat the navy's requirements on the Pacific: light cruisers that must be built and naval bases that must be built, with sufficient fuel supplies stored in naval tanks at strategic points.

"At present the only base on the Pacific is being built and equipped by private funds. The fight for naval oil reserves makes us the laughing stock of the world. If Congress will not supply the necessary funds to give the fleet its own fuel, then the government must make leases in the interest of national defense. The oil fight means who is to get the navy reserve leases, and while that is being fought in the interest of oil corporations, the national defense interests wait. All values and sense of proportion are gone, in finding out which company is permitted to operate the leases. In the meantime the oil reserves are being drained and the navy is without fuel in its own tanks and subject to the manipulation of prices.

"In time of war, the public would pay a price that would cost what our construction cost in the last war on the cost-plus contract agreement. The future danger lays on the Pacific.

"You of California will be the first to suffer, and the first to fight. For that reason, you should be the first to wake this country up to our common cause—national defense—regardless of who you hit, politician, corporation or citizen. It is a condition that must be met!

"The only qualification I offer in laying this before you, is my experience in foreign countries, my service under the American Flag, my service in fighting for an adequate navy, knowing that I am right, and that I am an American."

RESOLUTION ADOPTED.

At the conclusion of Shearer's address the following resolution was unanimously adopted by the assemblage, consisting of Native Sons and other Californians:

"Resolved, That this meeting go on record as endorsing the policy of the exclusion of all aliens ineligible to citizenship; that we recognize the fact that this policy has aroused resentment in Japan and that, despite the thorough righteousness and justice of this policy, it will be resented by Japan, even to the point of war, if we are not properly prepared to defend ourselves on land, on sea and in air; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we oppose any and every surrender of our sovereign rights to regulate immigration to our shores or the strength of any branch of our national defense, and that we protest against any move, conference, treaty or agreement with any other nation or nations limiting our rights to whatever armanent we may at any time see fit to maintain; and further

"Resolved, That we are opposed to any affiliation with the World Court, League of Nations, or any similar organization, and to all pacifist teachings and impractical dreams of universal peace while others plan to attack us and deny our sovereign rights; and further

"Resolved, That these resolutions be forwarded to the California Senators and Congressmen."

"As life runs on the way grows strange, with faces new, and near its end the milestones into headstones change, 'neath everyone, a friend."

HOT SHOT

WB SHEARER, WHO IS RENDERING great peace-time service to the United States by giving "inside" information to the common people those who furnish the manpower and the finances in time of war—the condition of utter unpreparedness into which the United States has drifted, through the conniving of alien-lobbyists and peace-pacifists with the League of Nations and other world-peace-bunk advocates, turned his hot-guns loose in the State Capitol at Sacramento, March 18, before a joint session of the State Legislature.

Into the ears of his auditors, Shearer, who is nationally prominent and "knows his onions," poured volley after volley of authentic declarations to prove that, as a result of the acceptance of the numerous "peace-packages" handed it, the United States has not only become the world's "goat," but is wholly unprepared to protect itself either at home or abroad. Here is some of the hot shot fired by Shearer in California's legislative chamber:

"Japan has just finished her naval maneuvers of offensive and defensive strategy, but resents our holding maneuvers in our own waters off Hawaii. The press of Japan states it would be considered an act of war, if our fleet went to Hawaii in fighting trim. If our ships should be faced to the Philippines, it would be regarded as openly hostile."

"Certain newspapers throughout the country are overly cautious about printing anything on national defense. The same cautious news mediums are very considerate of all foreign propaganda. Any message on the League of Nations, World's Court, pacifism or disarming is well played up."

"If one should be so indiscreet as to advocate national defense and preparedness, the pacifists and their backers throw their weight against official Washington,—and on goes the soft pedal! The pacifists must know the army and the navy are parts of the Constitution of the United States, and in their sentimental, impractical fight for peace they only help foreign propaganda."

"Japan's weight and hitting power of ships give her the control of the Western Pacific and the Far East. Russia recognizes that power. England recognizes that power, and we recognize that power. A recognized power must be met with the same power. We must have a well-balanced navy, as is permitted under the treaty pledged by the party. That means surface ships, under-surface ships, naval bases fully equipped and, above all, an adequate air force, army, naval and commercial. The commerce of the world belongs to merchant ships. Merchant ships must be backed up by a navy, a navy with a naval base. The air and the submarine are the two most powerful arms."

"The British naval program, the Japanese naval program, and the 281 ships of war built and under construction since the Washington Arms Conference, show there is no evidence that any power other than the United States is making a move to disarm. This country is a hotbed of propaganda, but only to disarm this nation! As long as England maintains and increases her power, as long as Japan maintains and increases her sea power, we must do likewise, and move to further weaken us is traitorous!"

"Senator James D. Phelan points out a concrete case of what is happening: British interests are buying oil properties in California without hindrance, and now own, perhaps, 30 percent of the state's resources. The Dutch Shell Co. sold recently more than 100,000 barrels of oil to Japan, and in Japanese tankers it was shipped from San Francisco to Japan. The price of that oil was $1.86 per barrel, and at the same time local consumers were charged $2.35. The local agent confidentially admitted the wrong to local interests, but said he took the orders from London."

"Great Britain won't disarm. Great Britain can't disarm, and will remain at the highest point of efficiency of offense and defense. Great Britain has a policy, and will maintain that policy. Japan will do likewise. Japan dominates the Far East and will continue to do so. The treaty with the Soviet government places vast resources and wealth at Japan's disposal. Japan has a policy and an ambition. She will not budge one inch on her imperialistic policy or surrender her domination of the East. Japan's naval policy is a religion. Japan is nearly ready, and will stay ready. She will never disarm! The exclusion law gives Japan the argument to preach her doctrine. The die is cast; the day Japan is ready, Japan will strike! If we are not prepared to defend our possessions and our own shores, then the greatest humiliation is upon us. Our future nationalization is at stake, the future of our nation. Our gluttony for luxury and thinking only of self will be our downfall."

"The pacifists' and their backers' appeal to this nation to disarm, is a betrayal. Their only defense is their trust in foreign conscience. Conscience plays little part in any government's policies or ambitions, or the business policies or ambitions even of self."

"There is interference all over the world against certain American oil interests. How much more must we surrender before England and Japan make a move in the interest of peace? There is a special significance in the cancellation of concessions to Americans in Sakhalin. Japan has used her troops to drive out Americans and hold Russian territory against Americans who have legitimate rights and claims to proceed under their concession. Japan brings pressure to bear on Russia, not only to grant the Japanese demands, but to repudiate any other agreement. Simultaneously, Japan drops Port Arthur as a naval base and strengthens the naval base at Ominato, at the northern end of the main island of Japan, giving as the reason the crossing of the Pacific by air by the United States. Admiral Hough, director of naval intelligence, states Japan is building with feverish rapidity every type of ship not included in the treaty. Japan is making every effort to provide adequate fuel oil reserves and to develop new sources of supply."

"America alone has paid the price on the Pacific, not only by the loss of two naval bases,

WAY MADE BRIGHT AN EASTER THOUGHT

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

Since some have died,
The way does not seem quite so far;
We fain would see the barks that crossed the bar,

We hark to hear, perchance, the angels' song
That welcomed them to that immortal throng;
We feel that Heaven cannot be so far today,—
Not like it was before they went away;
We think it would be good to cross the tide,
Since some have died.

Since some have died,
The way does not seem dark at all;
We do not shrink to think of death's cold pall,
We feel it would be sweet to greet once more
The ones who safely dwell on that blest shore;
We'd join our hands and hearts in one
And wait to hear the Master's words, "well done";

We love to think they're waiting on the other side,
Since some have died.

Since One has died,
He paves the way with light;
Has changed the pall and made the pathway bright,— Death's valley has no shadows lurking there;
He walks with us our lonely way to share,
He, too, will bear us safe to heights above;
To be with Him and meet the ones we love,
To dwell forever in the place His hands have plied,
Since He has died, since He has died.

Guam and the Philippines, but commercially we will suffer. Our influence in the Far East is waning. Japan, in her alliance with Great Britain, learned much. The pupil now becomes the master in the Far East and carries out her policies of interference with Americans, knowing our meek protests mean nothing. Our past friendship for Russia, our benevolence, even charity, counts for little. This should be a lesson to the pacifists, who would weaken us further, trusting to conscience."

"Russia, China and all nations are alike. They recognize power only. It is the British policy, it is the Japanese policy. Do we propose to surrender more and give way to every protest and interference, or to take a stand based on right and justice backed up with a proper navy? American citizens must be backed up and protected all over the world. We are a power, or we are not!"

"The Pacific will not remain peaceful without a superior force ready. There is too much hyphenated influence in this country already; too much compromising for self, power and greed. We need a national spirit, defenders of our nationalization, defenders of our blood and faith, defenders of our nation and flag—a 100 percent national policy and a 100 percent defense."

"This nation must build and maintain a modern navy! We must keep the army and the navy up to their fullest efficiency. We must encourage the officers and the men, and make the army's and the navy's attractions such that every American will be proud of them. Above all other reasons, is our future nationalization. In thirty-three states of this country we have from 5 percent to 50 percent Negro population; in Texas, 750,000 Mexicans; Arizona is over one-half Mexican; twenty states permit intermarriage between the white and negroid blood."

"The smuggling of aliens into the country is on the increase. I believe in the State of California there are more than 12,000 unregistered Orientals. The immigration law will stop the legal admission of Mongolians from Europe and the Far East. It will never stop the smuggling or the influx of oriental and negroid blood over our borders. The increase of the colored and the mulatto population and the admission of Orientals would, in fifty years, destroy the White race in America."

"The continuous pressure brought to bear to break down our immigration laws and increase the quota, must be watched. The class of immigration waiting to flood this country is not a pure white blood, nor is it a blood that will assimilate. Every move is being made to go around our immigration laws. European ports are filled with undesirables—some ports as close as Cuba—only waiting entrance into this country. The immigration law must be enforced and Oriental barred! This nation cannot survive unless we are prepared to take a stand. Our defense means more than building ships and aeroplanes; it means enforcing the immigration law and the exclusion law. WE MUST FIGHT TO KEEP OUR BLOOD WHITE AND THE NATION WHITE."

Those who have their ears to the ground are convinced that an effort will be made to have the exclusion provision of the national Immigration Law repealed, or modified to satisfy the "pride" of Japan.

The new ambassador of Japan, upon arrival at Washington, declared that while he had received no instructions, "hope still was entertained in Japan that at some future date the problem might be taken up again."

That "future date" undoubtedly refers to the next session of the Congress, and the expressed "hope" has been held out by the Japan Society of America, the Protestant Church Federation, and their subsidiary organizations. Leave the matter to those "birds," and Japan's wishes will be acceded to, and the whole Pacific Coast will be so thoroughly Japanized that in another half-century no self-respecting White man would remain.

The San Francisco "Bulletin" of March 4 carried a story by Fielding J. Stilson headed, "Financiers Do Not Recognize a Division in Cal." Nothing strange in that! How may anyone recognize that which does not exist? California, which the "Cal" refers to, is not divided, nor is it going to be divided.

Stilson's heart is properly placed, for he well says: "There is no north nor south. It's California! The spirit of service and co-operation is in the air and it is good to feel its influence. Geographically speaking, there is in a sense a Northern California and a Southern California, but, after all, there is really only one California."

The California Supreme Court rendered a decision February 28 that Japs may, in accordance with a United States-Japan treaty, lease land in California for residential and commercial purposes. The Los Angeles "Times" headed its account of the decision, "Anti-Japanese Law Modified."

California has no "Anti-Japanese Law," but one directed against all ineligible-to-citizenship aliens. The court did not modify the Alien Land Law, which recognizes the supremacy of the treaty. The case at bar simply involved the question as to whether certain land, leased by Japs, was being used for agricultural or commercial purposes.

No Jap or other ineligible-to-citizenship alien can, within the law, own or lease land for agricultural use in California, that provision of the Alien Land Law having been sustained by both the State and the United States Supreme Courts. He may, however, lease, BUT NOT OWN, land for residential or commercial purposes.

In an account of the Legislature's probe of the herb bill, published March 2, the Sacramento "Bee" said a Chinese "informed a 'Bee' representative that he is a member of the Oakland Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West."

If the Chinese made any such statement, which is doubtful, he uttered an untruth. A little buzzing around on the part of the "Bee's" young man would have resulted in enlightenment to the effect that the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is composed exclusively of White males.

The Washington State Supreme Court has upheld a lower court decree escheating to that state land obtained by a Jap-controlled corporation in violation of Washington's alien land law, which is patterned after the California statute.

Thousands of California's most fertile acres are unlawfully possessed by Japs, yet no official is sufficiently interested in the state's welfare to have the lands escheated to the state. The course of the Washington officials should be followed by those of California.

The stock of Brigadier-General William Mitchell, and not that of the national administration, went up when he was demoted for telling the truth about the country's air service.

Kansas now has a law forbidding Jap ownership or leasing of agricultural land in that state. And so, the cause progresses. Here's hoping the Kansas officials do not, like those of California, sleep on the job and permit the Japs to acquire all the land they desire, despite the law.

SAVING MISSION SANTA INEZ BEGUN BY SANTA BARBARA NATIVE DAUGHTERS Laura Bride Powers

(AUTHOR OF "STORY OF THE OLD MISSIONS.")

A RENAISSANCE OF CALIFORNIA history is on its way! And with it comes a revived interest in preserving the historic landmarks that give point to the history—a history that is richer in romance and personality than that of any other part of Colonial America, excepting only the birthplace of American independence. And though the beginnings of both were coincidental—Washington leading on the Atlantic and Serra on the Pacific—each body of history carries its own personality and human interest, until both streams meet in 1846, when California became a part of the nation.

And so it is that the landmarks of California are a part, and a vital part, of America's romantic history. And their preservation is not only an evidence of intelligent patriotism, but an evidence of good hard business sense. Historic spots have an economic value, wholly aside from their ethical or esthetic worth, as the wise old nations of Europe long ago recognized. Picture what France or Italy would be, if their places of historic interest were wiped out. Would tourists continue to flood them?

As the old missions of California are the cradles of Western civilization, from which sprang the agriculture, viticulture, irrigation systems, manufactures, education and art of the West, it is a part of wisdom to save them for our children, even though we, so close to them, are not particularly interested in them. This wholly apart from their romance and their picturesque beauty.

And so it is that the Native Daughters of Santa Barbara have taken upon themselves the task—or is it the joy?—of preserving Mission Santa Inez from further disintegration. Miss Edna Sharp is president of the local Parlor, Reina del Mar No. 126. And be it said at the start that they are already at their work—incidentally, with very little talking about it,—and when the last rains came there were no leaks in the old tile roof of the sanctuary. "Never again," says the committee, headed by Miss Mary Wood, "will the lovely old chapel be threatened by the rain, if the members can awaken their fellows to the community value of the beautiful old landmark. For it lies only a little over an hour's drive from Santa Barbara over the highway, with a two-and-a-half-mile lateral of good dirt road. And, incidentally, a road of beauty all the way." What a charming place for an objective for a moonlight drive on a summer night! How lovely, on a soft spring morning, to run over, and indulge one's soul a bit before a round of golf.

How are these Native Daughters going to handle the work of restoration? Make a NEW mission out of it? That is what they are all asking.

Be assured that the utmost intelligence is being employed. A harmonious relation—and this is no mere persiflage—exists between the Franciscan (Capuchin), Father Stephen, Miss Wood's committee and the contractor, Thomas Sullivan. So that every step is taken only after a careful survey, historical and architectural. And in this, the help of local artists, architects and historians is available. Among the latter is Father Englehardt, the famous source historian. And the artists include Edward Borel who knows the tradition of the missions from "A" to "Z."

Where are the funds coming from? The Daughters don't seem to be worrying. They received enough from two card parties to carry them on quite a distance, with the kind of contractor they picked. "Was it judgment, just luck?" "Judgment," says Miss Anna M. Caughy, a well-known member of the committee. "We knew of his work in Saint Vincent orphanage. And he's running according to form."

Since the work began, less than a month ago the urgent repairs have been made, inside and out. Through the generosity of Mrs. F. F. Pebody—though this is told in confidence, got from Father Stephen,—water is being piped in the living quarters of the mission, whereat the padre is rejoicing like a schoolboy that neither he nor his companion-friar will have to carry the water from the Donahue place, a good thing of a mile away, when they are hungry lads, at dinner hour is upon them.

And another thing—the attic. The space between the roof and the rooms off the colonnade is, at this writing, being depopulated of bad millions of them. It has apparently been the favorite bat-burial ground of all Southern California. Contractor Sullivan opines that the cost of the work will be met, or nearly met, from the sale of the tons of deposit for fertilizer. Incidentally, the bats don't like the sudden decision to clean up. Conservative creature bats.

The Native Daughters are planning to hold their Admission Day celebration at the old mission, when the old days will be revived at the spot where history was made.

Previous to 1912, the Native Sons of the Golden West lent their support to the restoration of the bell-tower that had fallen in the earthquake of 1906, and have, in consequence, sort of stewardship over the old landmark. And now that the Daughters have taken the mission under their wing, the older organization withdraws them morally—and undoubtedly financially, also, since the preservation of historic landmarks is one of the primal objects of both these patriotic and non-sectarian organizations. Indeed, the Landmarks Committee of the Native Sons is one of the most important units of the body. Joseph R. Knowland is the chairman.

It might be of interest to call attention to the highly interesting works of art that still repose in the sacristy of Santa Inez. And some of the finest things are on the walls of inner chamber. All of the vestments and the art treasures are being gathered in a museum, now being arranged in the old sala of the padres, a soft light entering the room from the cool colonnade.

One of the greatest charms of Santa Inez is its setting among the hills, almost in the pastoral beauty of the days of its prime. But now the highway runs near, and it is no longer aloof from the passing world.

Major Rupert Hughes, novelist and soldier, in an address at the March 5 luncheon of the One Hundred and Sixth Infantry, C.N.G., Los Angeles, predicted the next war will come without warning, and urged this country to be prepared for the unexpected.

Referring to the howlers for no preparation, he said: "The pacifists, when war comes, spit their venom upon the government for its unpreparedness."

From Colonel Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel of San Francisco, The Grizzly Bear has received a copy of "Liberty," published in New York, dated March 7. Attention was called to an editorial entitled "The Pacific Coast Frontier." The concluding paragraphs indicate that the West's anti-Jap attitude is becoming better understood and more generally endorsed in the East:

"The non-assimilable Japanese say they will storm the frontier if they are not allowed entrance in peace, and the people who have won their way across a continent to possess that land say that it shall not be done either in peace or in war.

"They are competent, with the forces behind them, to defend this frontier. California, Oregon and Washington are not the Briton Kingdoms against the Romans. They are not the Saxon Kingdoms against the Danes. The new frontier of America, looking toward the yellow races, will suffice against them because of the quality of the men who hold the wall."

According to the report of a United States Senate investigating committee, the United States Steel Corporation, the Aluminum Company of America and other wealthy corporations have mulcted the government out of millions of dollars due for taxes.

If the big fellows were forced by the federal authorities to contribute their just shares of the taxes, the little fellows' burdens would not be so heavy. But there's not one iota of a possibility of that being done, no siree. There's too much power behind the big ones.

"Some" Passengers—San Francisco Bay ferry boats carried 55,427,239 passengers during 1923, an increase, compared with the 1922 record, of 786,748.

SUTTER LETTER OF 1841

THE CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY AT Sacramento is to be enriched by a historical document—a letter written from Sacramento, then known as New Helvetia, by General John A. Sutter to Don Juan Bautista Alvarado, Spanish governor of California, dated November 4, 1841.

The letter is in the possession of Judge Henry V. Alvarado of Martinez, Contra Costa County, son of Governor Alvarado, who will present it to the State Library that it may be preserved for all time. The letter follows:

"Al ste Excel Excelencia Senor Don Juan Bautista Alvarado, Gobernador Constitucional de las dos Californias en Monterey.

"Excellent Sir:—

"Allow me to write you at this time in English because I like not to make mistakes in an expression.

"I have the honor to send you with this an account of a committed crime on this place: please give me your orders, what I have to do with the Delinquent, which is kept as a prisoner here.

"Delinquent Henry Bee was put in irons but his friends bound themselves for $1000 security, when I would take the irons from him, in which their wishes I consented.

"John Wilson (Black Jack) is well known, as at life he was a bad character, which may be something in Bee's favour.

"Waiting for your orders, I shall keep the delinquent in prison.

"The trapping party from the Columbia river will be here in about eight days under command of Mr. Ermatinger. I am also waiting for one of my friends, a German gentleman, with the same party. I believe he travels for his pleasure.

"A strong body of American farmers are coming here. A young man of the party got lost from the party since 16 days, nearly starved to death, and on foot. He don't know which direction the party took. I believe the [word probably omitted] will come about the direction of the pueblo. I am also informed another party is coming, stronger than this, under Mr. Farnum.

"Some very curious reports come to me, which made me at first a little afraid but after two hours, I get over the fright.

"I remain most excellent sir.

"J. A. SUTTER.

"Neuva Helvetia, November 4, 1841.

"P. S.—In a short time, I will have a Secretary who is able to write Spanish."

RECORD CLEARINGS.

San Francisco bank clearings for February 1925 amounted to $716,500,000.00, setting another record in the city's financial history. Of the entire increase of bank clearings in the state, over the corresponding month of 1924, San Francisco contributed 83%. All indications are that San Francisco, during 1925, will witness the greatest building program in the city's history.

Bank deposits in San Francisco, Oakland and Berkeley combined show the tremendous increase of $90,769,906.00 in six months, according to figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco. These do not include deposits

To Weed 'Em Out—The weeding out of incompetent, careless and physically defective drivers of automobiles in California is proposed in a bill which Senator Arthur Breed has introduced in the State Legislature. In brief, it provides that applicants for operators' licenses must be able to prove to the satisfaction of officials of the State Division of Motor Vehicles that they have sufficient knowledge of driving to enable them to handle a car on the highways without menacing the lives of others and that they have no physical defects of such nature as to incapacitate them for driving. Will H. Marsh, chief of the division, announces he has examined the measure and gives it his unqualified approval.

Big Bore—A contract involving $3,882,958 has been let for the construction of a vehicular tube under the Oakland estuary between that city and Alameda City. The work must be completed in 900 days.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS HAVE NEW "BABY"

SETTING A RECORD IN NATIVE DAUGHTER circles, Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 was instituted at San Pedro, March 7, with 106 members. While the record of the recently-instituted Sepulveda Parlor of Native Sons at San Pedro was not equaled, everyone "sat up and took notice." The Parlor, credit for the organization of which belongs to D.D.G.P. Carrie Lenhouse, was named in honor of Mrs. Rudecinda F. S. de Dodson, member of the pioneer Sepulveda family.

Grand President Catherine E. Gloster officiated at the institution ceremonies, and was assisted by Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty and the following members of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 which, along with Los Angeles Parlor No. 124, was represented by a large delegation: Rosa Ford, Clara Fay, Maud Kiasgve, Bernice Rankin, Mary Brittain, Lucretia Coates, Leonora Dodd, Lucy Curtis, Lottie Wharton, Kattie Dillon, Mrs. C. E. Crowell. Officers of the Parlor, as follows, were installed by D.D.G.P. Lenhouse: Rudecinda de Dodson, senior past president; Mabel Adair, junior past president; Lottie Sandstrom, past president; Hazel Boston, president; Viva Foot, first vice-president; Florence Langan, second vice-president; Madeline Larrison, third vice-president; Charlotte Bennett, recording secretary; Madeline Mallock, financial secretary; Christina Gaffey, treasurer; Marie Stone, marshal; Madeline Boone, inside sentinel; Emily Pinheiro, outside sentinel; Katherine Dodson, Charlotte Dinsmore, Alice Cripe, trustees; Mary Walton, organist. During the ceremonies Helen Cervantes sang the installation ode.

Grand President Gloster spoke on the Order's aims and ideals and was profuse in her compliments to the "baby" Parlor. Mrs. Rudecinda de Dodson presented the American and the State (Bear) Flags to the Parlor, Long Beach Parlor presented the Bible and a gavel, Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, on behalf of Los Angeles Parlor, presented a beautiful floral basket, and Recording Secretary Bennett, on behalf of Sepulveda Parlor of Native Sons, presented a $50 check. Through Marjorie Curtis, Long Beach Parlor presented floral baskets to President Boston and D.D.G.P. Lenhouse. Mrs. Margaret Dever, on behalf of the committee composed of Mrs. Katherine Dodson and Mrs. Mary Pico de Pierce, presented gifts from Rudecinda Parlor to Grand President Gloster, Grand Secretary Dougherty, Past Grand President Stoermer and D.D.G.P. Lenhouse.

American Legion hall, where the installation ceremonies were held, was artistically decorated in the Order's colors—red, white and gold—by a committee composed of Mmes. Carrie Lenhouse, Charlotte Bennett, Hazel Boston, Louise Steinkamp, Theo. Walsworth, Mary Bailey. Following the ceremonies, a banquet, also a gift from Mrs. Rudecinda Dodson, was served by a committee made up of Dora Baly, Madeline Boone, Lottie Sandstrom, Katie Ross, Josephine Cassidy, Alice Cripe, Kathryn Baldwin, Aurelia McWilliams.

Among the charter members of Rudecinda are the following San Pedro Pioneers: Mmes. Rudecinda Sepulveda de Dodson, Mary Pico de Pierce, Carolina Sepulveda, Eliza Gilbert, Palonia Sylvia. Three generations of the well-known Spanish pioneer family were represented among the initiates by Mrs. Carolina Sepulveda, her daughter, Mrs. Modesta Contos, and her granddaughter, Miss Ramona Sepulveda. In many instances mother and daughter affiliated, among them being: Mrs. Rudecinda Dodson and Mrs. Florence Schoneman, Mrs. Katherine and Miss Ynez Dodson, Mrs. Christina and Miss Christina Gaffey, Mrs. Kathryn Baldwin and Mrs. Madeline Mallock, Mrs. Eliza Gilbert and Mrs. Charlotte Densmore, Mrs. Mary Halverson and Mrs. Agnes Hruza, Mrs. Caroline Richards and Mrs. Theo. Walsworth, Mrs. Minnie and Miss Minnie Fairall, Mrs. Catherine Furlong and Mrs. Loretta Motto.

Rudecinda had its first meeting March 13, and although it was Friday, too, the proverbial "jinx" did not materialize. Instead, the officers, assisted by D.D.G.P. Lenhouse, initiated eight candidates, bringing the membership to 114. Before the charter closes the membership will, it is predicted, go beyond the 150-mark. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting. Many social functions are being enthusiastically planned.

CALIFORNIA BLOOMS— SCOTCH HEATHER Annie L. Adair

IT WAS A THRIVING CALIFORNIA MINING camp, with a sixty-stamp quartz mill in which were employed a large force of men on the day and night shifts. The surrounding mountains were dotted with cottages, the homes of the miners.

The sun, resembling a full-blown golden poppy against the blue sky, was just disappearing beyond the pine- and cedar-covered hills; a horizon of dazzling yellow, flecked with violet, faded upward to palest azure. Far overhead floated a snowy, fleecy cloud, tinged with exquisite roseate hues.

From the porch of a cottage gazed six feet of vigorous Scotch manhood. He was broad of shoulders and deep of chest; his head was splendidly shaped, and his eyes, honest and steadfast, were of gray. Sincerity, sympathy, integrity and strength of character were written upon his face. He stepped into the three-room house with its cheerful log-fire and wide chimney, shelves of books and potted plants. Yet, with all this cheeriness, the man was sad.

He was thinking: "I, Donald McGregor, ought to be a happy man. Why can't I be content? I have money put by, a fruit ranch in the Santa Clara Valley, and I like my work as a millman. Every man in this camp is my friend. This awful sadness that overpowers me is not homesickness, for I have no home, in the proper sense of the word. It is pure, sheer lonesomeness."

Up the incline approached a tall young fellow, the foreman of the day-shift men. He was singing, in a rich tenor voice, and as he drew near, on the way to his cabin above, the Scotchman listened to these words:

"Oh, Jean! My bonnie Jean,
Come to your laddie once again.
They say you are false,
But I still believe you true.
You are my bonnie, blue-eyed,
Scotch lassie, Jean!"

The Scotchman turned pale. Hastily entering an inner room, his head dropped forward on his clenched hands as memory went back to beautiful Jean Douglass, whom he had wooed and won among the Highland heather. How he had loved her! How she had loved him, his bonnie Scotch lassie! To them, the sun was more golden, the sky had a bluer hue, and life seemed one long roseate dream.

Then had come their bitter misunderstanding, and hot-tempered, foolish Donald left immediately for California. In time, this foolish anger softened. He expected Jean to explain, but she was so sensitive and wounded her pride kept her from writing.

After three years Donald pocketed his pride and went back to the Highlands, only to find that his bonnie Scotch lassie was not there. Her parents had passed away. Jean and her young brother had gone, none knew whither.

Donald searched far and wide, without success. And this was why he suffered from that awful feeling that is not homesickness, but something deeper, lonesomeness. He unlocked a drawer and took from it a picture, that of his beautiful, lost, Jean Douglass, and murmured: "Jean, my bonnie lassie! We dinna ha na hame."

Before noon of the next day a number of the night-shift miners were sunning themselves on the porch of the boarding-house, waiting for the noonday meal. Over the hill came four fair-haired men, apparently Germans, each carrying a brass horn. On nearer view they proved to be strolling musicians, three of whom had left the fatherland in hopes of becoming members of a San Francisco orchestra. This plan failing, however, they had clung together and strolled, during the summer months, from town to town, learning quite a little English and earning a living by playing. The fourth member of the quartet was a merry, boyish, young fellow, evidently a Highlander by birth but a Californian by rearing. They placed their music-stands and proceeded to entertain the miners.

The music was charming, and the delighted miners again and again encored. The leader explained the predicament of his fellows and himself, and a liberal donation was the result. The musicians were then hospitably invited to partake of the noon-day repast, which they did with evident relish. After resting and chatting prior to departure, and being delighted with the reception accorded them, they proceeded to charm the miners with more soul-lifting quartets. The last strains faded away and the four folded their music-stands to depart, when a tall, slender fellow, the foreman with the tenor voice, who had been an ardent listener, suggested that it would be a capital idea to play a joke on the amalgamator, the easy-dispositioned Scotchman, Donald McGregor, and persuaded the innocent and unsuspecting Germans to go up into the quartz mill and play for his edification.

So, the foreman, a native of the Golden State on mischief bent but without Machiavellian intent, made this proposition to the leader: "See here, Rhinehart, I know you are anxious to make money. There is a fellow, a Scotchman, up there, indicating the huge red-painted mill a quarter of a mile up the incline, who is passionately fond of music. He is on duty now, and can't be let off, but will be disappointed when he learns that he has missed the music. If you go up there and play, he will pay you liberally for your trouble. I will take you there and you can place your stands right near where he is working, watching the quicksilver plates. Of course, you will think the noise of the stamps almost deafening, but that fellow up there has been so many years in the mill he has grown perfectly accustomed to the noise and will consequently be able to hear your music easily and will be delighted. None of your soft playing, but blow your horns like the bugle-horn of the Scotch Highlander—"one blast were worth a thousand men!"

The leader conferred with the others, and the result was that they trudged up the incline, followed by the crowd of miners, apparently bent on hearing the music, but in reality to witness the fun. The promoter of the scheme led the unsuspecting quartet into the mill, through the engine-room, past the concentrator, and pointed to a stairway leading to a large room, containing the stamps, batteries and plates, which he told the innocent musicians to enter. Then he and his followers placed themselves where they could see, and yet not be seen. The credulous quartet entered and proceeded, according to instructions, to entertain the amalgamator and his assistant. McGregor gazed spellbound at the astonishing spectacle. Down came the ponderous stamps, crushing the gold-veined ore. The players, remembering instructions, blew loudly on their horns. The astonished amalgamator and his assistant perceived, by the puffing out of the cheeks of the Teutons, that they were playing. Down came the unrelenting sixty thunderous iron monsters. Louder played the musicians, puffing, blowing and sweating, their faces scarlet with exertion. Crash, crash, came the never-ceasing roar of the stamps. Beads of perspiration stood on the foreheads of the fair-haired Saxons, and they concluded with what would have been a grand finale, had the sounds of their horns been audible.

They prepared to play a second number. This was too much for the stoical gravity of the amalgamator and his assistant, who discreetly retired to the engine-room to have their laugh out. Presently the leader perceived that the audience had vanished, and it finally dawned on the four that, in the language of American parlance, they had been badly "stung." Not a man was visible but themselves. With flushed faces and bent heads they passed out of the quartz mill, a sadder but a wiser quartet. Happily, the ponderous roar of the stamps prevented them from hearing the laughter of the concealed miners.

As the quartet departed, the miners emerged from their hiding places, and the joke was explained to the amalgamator. The thought of the poor Teutons' credulity was too much for kind-hearted McGregor, who dispatched a lad with a five-dollar gold-piece and told him to overtake the Saxons and present it to the leader with his compliments. Returning, the lad told

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

APRIL 5, 1875, THERE WERE SEVERAL furies of snow in the valleys of California and six inches of the beautiful fell along the foothills of the Sierras. An unprecedented freeze followed, the killing frost destroying sprouting vegetables, vineyards and orchards from San Diego to Siskiyou. This was the greatest frost disaster that had befallen the state, and losses amounting to many thousands of dollars were sustained. Crop forecasts were gloomy.

At Sacramento, the thermometer established a new record April 7, dropping to 23 degrees at 5 a.m. During the day locomotives arriving from the East had a crystal fringe about the tenders, made by hanging icicles formed there.

A. A. Sargent, United States Senator from California, was in the zenith of his popularity and on return from Washington April 5 was given a reception by his fellow-citizens of Nevada County, at Nevada City. Another followed his arrival in San Francisco at a later date.

Charles Pickett, a well-known member of the bar in San Francisco and popularly dubbed "Philosopher Pickett" on account of his eccentric ways, had been confined in the jail there since September for contempt, expressed by usurping a seat at the session of the supreme court. His case had excited a great deal of discussion, the powers of the court being questioned by many. April 22, concluding that discretion was the better part of valor, he apologized and was liberated.

The steamer "Ventura," with 132 passengers and 400 tons of freight, left San Francisco April 20 for southern ports. It struck a rock near Monterey Bay and sank in fifteen feet of water. The passengers were all saved, but the freight, mostly for Los Angeles and which caused the merchants there a heavy loss, was not.

Fire in San Jose April 23 destroyed the Saint Joseph Catholic Church, causing a $50,000 loss.

The largest farm in Sonoma County was known as the Cotati ranch and was owned by the heirs of Dr. Thomas Page. It had 10,100 acres lying midway between Santa Rosa and Petaluma.

Tulare Lake was officially measured and reported to be thirty miles wide and seventy-five miles long in its largest dimensions.

H. C. Gerby sold 800 acres of Yolo County farming land, three miles north of Woodland, for $32,000, or $40 an acre.

J. L. Barker of Santa Barbara County was planting 100 acres of eucalyptus trees on his foothill acreage.

STEAM WAGON INVENTED.

"Lucky" Baldwin was making extensive investments in Southern California ranches.

I. Friedlander, who was given the title of "grain king" at this time, had 6,800 tons of wheat awaiting vessels at Vallejo, Solano County, to be shipped to the United Kingdom.

A young farmer in San Bernardino County advertised for a wife between 20 and 30 years of age, and received ninety answers during the first week's advertising.

Watson's Ferry, at the head of navigation of the San Joaquin River, was a lively town, made so by the influx of sheepmen shearing and bringing their wool in for shipment. Over 3,000 sheep were being sheared nearby daily. On owner reported his flock of 556 ewes had raised 735 lambs this season.

Oakland had a plague of caterpillars. The covered trees, shrubbery and lawns, and the sidewalks became slippery from their numerous crushed bodies.

R. Doan of Sacramento invented and built a steam wagon of four wheels, designed to haul gangplows and plow 100 acres of land a day also to haul grain from field to market.

A rich oil field was reported discovered two miles from Los Angeles.

The Kennedy mine at Jackson, Amador County, reported a strike of rich ore six feet wide on the 700-foot level.

M. Robinson of Minshew, Butte County, struck a deposit of chrome iron twelve miles from Chico. It was worth $40 a ton in Swansea, Wales where it was to be shipped and smelted.

Los Angeles shippers forwarded 733 boxes of oranges by steamer to San Francisco April 14. It was considered the best shipment of the season.

St. John, Abbot & Co., extensive stock dealer in Fresno County, failed April 14 for $250,000. They were heavily indebted to the stockmen of that locality, and ran the big Laguna de Tachigant.

Los Angeles held a special election April 13 to vote on a special tax of $12,000 for school purposes. It carried. Think of that sum, compared with what is needed now.

The ranch of Aplegarth & Drake was sold a sheriff's sale in Fresno County. It contained 4,800 acres and went for $210,000, or $43.75 an acre.

Chavez, the former partner of Vasquez, with two other Mexicans robbed a station on the Panamint road April 1. They tied the men at the station together, then cooked a dinner and, collecting all the money and arms they could find, departed. Before leaving, Chavez, to show his skill with a gun, shot the head off a rooster 300 feet away without apparently taking aim.

IMMIGRATION INCREASES.

The first birth on a railroad train in California was that of a daughter born to a Mrs. Schuhuber on a Central Pacific passenger train crossing the Sierras April 5. The new arrival was named Moleen, that being the name of the station near which she was born.

Spelling matches were now in vogue throughout the state, being popular and largely attended in both the cities and the mining towns.

Politics began to show signs of life. The first convention of the year, that of the Democratic party, was held at Sacramento April 15. It split into two wings, one having a Johnson as its head and its tail—Grove L. Johnson for state senator and J. J. Johnson for coroner of Sacramento County.

There was an unexpected increase in immigration by rail to California this month that took the transportation companies and the people by surprise. The big day of the month was the 15th, when thirty-four cars with over a thousand immigrants arrived. At least ninety percent of them were bound for San Francisco, and no inducement of employment or argument prevailed to have them stop short of that destination. They all seemed imbued with the belief that San Francisco had a warm climate, which they sought after a cold winter in the East, and also that a job awaited every man on arrival there. Just as the different counties and towns seeking population woke up, the influx dropped to normal proportions. A large majority of those arriving were under 30 years of age.

Rev. Hammond was holding a successful revival meeting in Vallejo, Solano County, this month. Among the loudest in singing and one of the most ardent of the pleaders to sinners was a rather demure maiden in her teens. One evening, seated in a shadow-darkened corner of the edifice during the sermon, she was observed being assiduously kissed and hugged by a young man by whom she was sitting and apparently enjoying the innovation. When the sermon ended and the solicitation of sinners began the maiden came to the observing one and made the inquiry, "Do you love Jesus?" "Well," answered he, "I don't think I do as well as you love the boys." "Don't you wish you were one of the boys?" archly asked she.

BEAR STORIES.

William Carter and Jonathan Watson were pasturing their sheep near the Santiago Mountains in Southern California and April 5 came upon a huge grizzly bear. A combat ensued. The bear downed Carter before he had a chance to

H. E. BENTLEY, L. A. 45, N.S.G.W.

With his gun and took two huge bites out of his back, tearing the flesh shockingly. It then started after Watson. He fired a shot from his rifle, hitting the grizzly's shoulder, which infuriated it more. He shot a second time, hitting about did not stop its rush. He missed it with his third shot, and when it was within five feet of him he luckily sent a bullet into its brain, killing it.

Three young men, Elias Woodford, Charles Gallagher and Dennis Wyckoff, were engaged in trapping on Gaddes Creek, east of Placerville, El Dorado County. April 10 their dog began excitedly barking at the entrance of a long hole in the tree, but would not enter it. Gallagher, with the intrepidity of youth, did so. After crawling about forty feet in the tree he suddenly saw the head of a pair of eyes and immediately received a blow from a paw that tore away part of his scalp and knocked him back a dozen feet. He got up on moving back until he emerged, bleeding profusely. Woodford, with an ax, began chopping a hole in the tree trunk about where he had heard the disturbance and when he had made an incision in the log the grizzly inside stuck out its head to take a sniff and received a bullet in the brain from Wyckoff's rifle. They had to saw the tree in two to get the grizzly out. It was lying in the tree. It was of a large size, and they got thirty gallons of bear grease out of the carcass.

The next day they caught one of the grizzly's cubs alive in a bear trap and, looking around the locality again, discovered another cub in a tree about forty feet above the ground. Wyckoff, with a lasso, ascended the tree. He succeeded in getting the noose over the cub's head, but in the resulting struggle both fell to the ground. There they had a rough-and-tumble ending in the capture of the cub. The cubs were easily tamed, and at the end of the month the young men were in Placerville trying to sell them, but could find no market.

A large grizzly bear was seen to walk through the town of Susanville, Lassen County, the night of April 1, but did not stop to fool with anybody.

STAGE ROBBERS ACTIVE.

A hawk was attacked by a flock of crows near Marysville, Yuba County, as a farmer was driving along the road in a buggy. To get away from the pecking it was receiving, it took refuge beneath the buggy, where it was captured. It did not seem to have received any injury, but was scared almost to death.

April 8 a gang of ten armed Mexicans stopped the stage from Cerro Gordo to Lone Pine, Inyo County, and took the United States mail and the express box and robbed the passengers. They took one of the stage horses to carry off their prey.

April 14 the stage from Downieville, Sierra County, was stopped by a masked man at Oregon City, thirty miles from Marysville, and only the express box taken. The box contained gold-bars of gold-dust valued at $5,300. The robber did not molest the passengers. Subsequently an ex-convict named Austin H. Smith was arrested and convicted of being the robber.

April 16 the stage from Grass Valley, Nevada County, to Colfax, Placer County, was held up by two men two miles from Colfax. The express box did not contain enough wealth to satisfy them, so they robbed the passengers. They got from them two gold watches and about $400 in cash. One of the highwaymen was so nervous he accidentally fired his gun.

The assessor of Nevada County, James Donald, meeting polltax from a gang of Chinamen in a Chinese store in North Bloomfield, left his book of receipts, forty-seven in number, in a satchel temporarily in the store. When he returned the satchel was there but the receipts and the gang were gone. "No sabbee," was all the information he could get.

April 20 Thomas R. Jones (not the writer) of Simpson's Flat, Butte County, was on his way home from Oroville in the evening and was stuck on the back of the head and knocked senseless. He was then robbed of $50, and a pair of boots were pulled off his feet, forcing him to go home barefooted.

William Dona was hung at Merced April 2 for killing John Connelly in December. He was stolid and indifferent to his fate. The name he gave was known not to be his real one. Jailer Stinson was fixing the black cap on the prisoner's head when the sheriff sprung the trap, and the jailer went through with the prisoner and was severely injured.

POWDER, PIPE—DISASTER.

Two young men from Oregon named Frank Slum and Ham English had a feud. They met in Woodland, Yolo County, April 13. Each ordered the other to leave town before dark, or

SAN BERNARDINO N. S. GRAND PARLOR

SUBORDINATE PARLORS OF THE Order of Native Sons of the Golden West will this month (April) elect their delegates to the Forty-eighth Grand Parlor, which will assemble in San Bernardino May 11 for a week's deliberation. Grand President Edward J. Lynch (Pacific 10) of San Francisco will preside throughout the Grand Parlor sessions, which will be held May 11, 13 and 15.

The intervening days, May 12 and 14, will be devoted to pleasure, and Arrowhead Parlor No 110, which has charge of the entertainment program, is arranging features which will occupy every moment of the spare time of the Orange Show City's visitors. Arrowhead's Grand Parlor committee is "on the job," and gives assurance that there will be no dull moment. John Andreson is chairman and R. W. Brazelton secretary of the committee, and any desired information will be promptly supplied by communicating with them. Here is an outline of the program:

Sunday a large percentage of the delegates will arrive at 9:30 p. m. via special Santa Fe train and conducted to headquarters, where they will register and be given handsome souvenir badges, and then escorted to their various quarters. Right here it must be again stated that San Bernardino can accommodate any number of visitors.

Monday the Grand Parlor will be in session. The womenfolk will be entertained in the afternoon. In the evening there will be an informal general reception at the Municipal Auditorium. There will be short addresses by Mayor Grant Holcomb, Grand President Edward J. Lynch and others, followed by dancing.

Tuesday will be given over to an all-day outing in the San Bernardino Mountains, with a barbecue at noon. Any one who has attended an Arrowhead mountain-barbecue knows what is in store for the visitors! Conveyance will be provided for Grand Parlor members, visiting members of the Order and the womenfolk.

Wednesday will be a Grand Parlor session. In the afternoon the delegates' wives will be entertained at the country club. The grand ball is billed for the evening in the Municipal Auditorium.

Thursday will be devoted to an auto tour of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties for Grand Parlor delegates and their wives. Lunch will be served at Redlands. In the evening, at the Orange Show Pavilion, Arrowhead Parlor will tender a banquet to the Grand Parlor members. While that is in progress the womenfolk will be entertained at a theater party.

Friday will be an all-day Grand Parlor session. The womenfolk will be specially entertained during the afternoon, and in the evening there will be a jollification for everybody at Pickering Park.

GRAND PARLOR OFFICE CANDIDATES.

Several hats, it is rumored, will come flying into the ring for Grand Parlor offices following the election of delegates. There is no reason whatever to suspicion, however, that any but the usual course will be followed as to the ranking grand officers. Hence it is practically a certainty that Grand First Vice-president Fletcher A. Cutler (Humboldt 14) of Eureka will be elevated to the grand presidency, that Grand Second Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch (Lodi 18) of Lodi will be elected grand first vice-president, and that Grand Third Vice-president Charles A. Thompson (Santa Clara 100) of Santa Clara will become the grand second vice-president.

For grand secretary, the prediction is made that the incumbent, John T. Regan (South San Francisco 157) of San Francisco, having faithfully and well attended to the duties of that important office, will be re-elected without opposition.

Numerous rumors of candidates for the other Grand Parlor offices have reached The Grizzly Bear, but inquiry has failed to bring confirmation from any but the following. However, there need be no apprehension as to a dearth of candidates:

For the grand third vice-presidency, the so-called stepping-stone to the grand presidency, and the "big" contest at most Grand Parlors, the aspirants are Grand Trustee Seth A. Millington (Colusa 69) of Colusa and Grand Trustee James A. Wilson (Rincon 72) of San Francisco.

For grand marshal, Harry W. Gaetjen (Golden Gate 29) of San Francisco is a candidate.

For grand inside sentinel, Grand Outside Sentinel J. Hartley Russell (Yerba Buena 84) of San Francisco is a candidate.

For grand outside sentinel, William I. Forrest (Claremont 240) of Oakland is a candidate.

For grand trustee, seven to be elected, the candidates are: John T. Newell (Los Angeles 45) of Los Angeles, incumbent; Alfred H. Mc-

SAN FRANCISCO BULLETIN

BIG CROWD HEAR PREPAREDNESS TALK

THE ORDER OF NATIVE SONS OF the Golden West is more than an organization of the State of California," declared W. B. Shearer in an address on adequate national defense before the San Francisco Native Sons' Luncheon Club March 18. "It is an American organization that the rest of the United States should endorse and copy. It stands for insists upon complete Americanism."

Shearer, who is preaching the gospel of preparedness, then proceeded to acquaint his hearers with the facts, and called attention to the facts being put forth by foreign propagandists, pacifists and brotherhood-of-mankindists to weaken the United States, while foreign nations are feverishly strengthening their defenses of every nature.

Grand President Edward J. Lynch introduced the speaker, who was well received and repeatedly applauded. There was a very large attendance, the largest in the club's history, and those in attendance included prominent businessmen, supreme court justices and judges, as well as representatives of the army and the navy.

At the conclusion of his address, Shearer was thanked by the club, and his auditors congratulated him on the splendid fight he is making for the nation's welfare. A resolution was unanimously passed, urging the Congress of the United States to make provision for adequate defenses, particularly on the Pacific.

SAN FRANCISCO SECOND PORT OF U. S.

With a record of some twenty-eight million cargo tons in 1924, San Francisco Bay ranks as the second port of the United States, surpassed only by New York. San Francisco Bay cargo in 1924 was valued at over two billion dollars, making it the second largest shipping center in the United States and outdistancing Galveston Harbor, the next in rank, by almost a billion dollars. These figures include all water-borne commerce, both foreign and domestic.

In foreign trade alone San Francisco advanced from sixth to fifth place in 1924, being surpassed by New York, Galveston, New Orleans and Seattle. Following San Francisco come Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Buffalo, Norfolk and Baltimore. The only regular around-the-world passenger and freight service from the Pacific Coast was recently inaugurated from San Francisco.

More American ships make their headquarters in San Francisco than in any other American port, except New York, according to the latest report of the United States Bureau of Navigation. The net registered tonnage in San Francisco is 1,495,272, almost equal to the combined tonnage of the other Pacific Coast ports. The Department of Commerce report also shows that in the past five years San Francisco has handled 43% of the entire foreign trade of the Pacific Coast. The value of all water-borne tonnage of San Francisco Bay is greater than the tonnage of all other Pacific Coast ports combined. The following figures are estimates based upon the latest data from port authorities of San Francisco, Seattle, Los Angeles and Portland: San Francisco Bay, $2,240,000,000; Seattle, $840,000,000; Los Angeles, $607,000,000; Portland, $450,000,000.

SPRING BLOSSOM FESTIVAL.

Historic custom of early-day California will be revived at the San Francisco spring blossom and wild flower festival, April 15 and 16, under the direction of Miss Alice Eastwood, president of the California Spring Blossom and Wild Flower Association.

"Far back in the early days of California," writes Miss Eastwood, "when life centered around Mission Dolores, Easter week was celebrated as a flower festival. To this celebration came the Spanish matrons from all around San Francisco, bringing not only the most exquisite wild flowers, but also choice spring blossoms from their gardens. A desire to revive that early custom has prompted us to choose Easter week for our blossom show."

HISTORICAL.

At the February 16 meeting of the Daughters of California Pioneers, Miss Elizabeth W. Latham spoke on the "Life of John A. Sutter," and Mrs. Mary T. Gamage gave "Reminiscences of Admiral Sloat."

The story of the coming to California of I. F. Van Winkle, father of the president of the Society of California Pioneers, was related by Mrs. Wm. A. Limbaugh.

ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED.

Washington's birthday, February 22, Senator James D. Phelan, affiliated with Pacific Parlor No. 10 N.S.G.W., entertained at an elaborate and most enjoyable dinner the directors of the San Francisco Native Sons' Hall Association and Native Son grand officers. The date selected was the thirteenth anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of Native Sons' Building, which has always been one of the senator's pets.

In Memoriam

LILLIAN BAKER-CROWDER.

To the Officers and Members of Annie K. Bidwell Parlor No. 184 Native Daughters of the Golden West—We, your committee, appointed to draft resolutions of respect and condolence to the memory of our beloved departed sister, Lillian Baker Crowder, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, has called from our midst our dearly beloved sister, Lillian Baker Crowder, thus taking from us one of our most devoted and loyal members, a faithful, true and loyal friend whose loss is deeply felt by all, and whereas, by her death the husband has lost a devoted wife and companion and the family a loving member.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved husband and family our most sincere and loving sympathy, and be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the husband and mother, to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Parlor.

NORA B. ANOLD,
SARAH HENNIGAN,
CLARA COFFMAN,
Committee

Chico, March 14, 1925.

JOHN MEDDLE.

The following resolution of condolence was submitted by the undersigned committee at a meeting of Diamond Parlor No. 246 N.S.G.W. March 11, and adopted by the Parlor.

Whereas, The Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, has called from his earthly duties our brother, John Meddle, and whereas, by the death of our beloved brother our Order has suffered a loss that can never be replaced, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the officers and members of Diamond Parlor No. 246 of the Native Sons of the Golden West do extend to Hugh Meddle our sincere sympathy and condolence in this hour of bereavement, and be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to Hugh Meddle, brother of the deceased, that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear for publication, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor.

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"MEMORIES OF MARK TWAIN AND STEVE GILLIS."

By Wm. R. Gillis; Printed by "The Banner," Sonoma, California.

"Mark Twain had been writing news items for the 'Enterprise' for something like a year when Goodman offered him a place as reporter on the paper. One night, shortly after this offer had been made, a young man with a great bushy shock of brown hair entered, and a long-drawling voice said, 'Does either of you gentlemen happen to be Mister J. T. Goodman?' 'I am Joe Goodman,' said Joe. 'Can I do anything for you?'"

"Mister Goodman, if you will just look me over I think you will observe that the clothes I have on would not be suitable ones to wear at a fashionable tea party, also that a haircut and a shave, together with a new hat, would greatly improve my personal appearance. A bath, too, would feel mighty good to me, and a steak or a dish of ham and eggs would be very satisfying."

"My friend," said Joe, with a broad smile, "if you will just look this room over, I think you will observe that it is neither a clothing store nor a barber shop. I am sorry for you, but you have come to the wrong place."

The stranger, presenting a letter, said, "Mr. Goodman, if you will read this letter, I think you will agree with me that my reception has not been cordial, as I was led to expect it would be." "Well, by the Great Hornspoon," exclaimed Joe, dropping the letter, "this is Sam Clemens."

Innumerable and quaintly humorous are the intimate glimpses of Mark Twain, such as the above, which Gillis writes of in his "Memories." The author is the brother of Steve Gillis, inseparable pal of Sam Clemens. Of how Sam came to go to Jackass Hill, there to write the stories which made him famous, of his journalistic days as reporter on the "Enterprise," of his experience in a hold-up and, lastly, of his career as a lecturer, Gillis recounts all.

Besides being "Memories of Mark Twain and Steve Gillis," the book gives some interesting pictures of Western mining towns and their citizens. "It is just a plain story of peoples and happenings of long ago," says the author. Perhaps that, after all, is the best analysis of the book.

"TALES OF THE OLD-TIMERS."

By Frederick R. Becholdt; The Century Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

"On the May morning when this tale begins, Parker's Fort was a lonely landmark on the Texas prairie. At nine o'clock a woman cried out—pointing through the open gateway. Less than half a mile away six hundred Comanche Indians were riding toward the fort."—Excerpt from "Red Blood and White."

"Santa Anna sent an order to execute the prisoners to the last man. A storm of protest arose. Then Santa Anna modified the sentence. Let one man out of every ten be led out and shot. Chance would decide on the victims. Two soldiers brought a jar; they poured into its mouth one hundred and fifty-nine white beans and seventeen black ones. No lottery ever looked fairer than this grim game that he had set before the Texans."—Excerpt from "The First Cowboy."

The old-timers alone remember the fate of Parker's Fort and that of the gallant Texans. Happily for us, who love the stirring tales of the frontier days, Becholdt has faithfully chronicled the "Tales of the Old-Timers." It is the more thrilling for its truthness.

"THE SIGN OF EVIL."

By Anthony Wynne; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

A well-written, consistent, realistic detective story is a thing of the past. At least, so it would seem after skimming through modern stories. "The Sign of Evil" is a very modern one.

A wealthy English gentleman is murdered, his daughter abducted, and the deuce is to pay. No one wants to be the deuce. The rest of the story wastes time concealing the deuce until next to the last chapter, where he is triumphantly dragged forth by an amateur detective. An insanity complex lends the tale a disagreeable atmosphere. It might rouse a slight shiver, not of

CRYER

MAYORALTY CAMPAIGN BASED ON RECORD AND BOULDER CANYON STAND.

The candidacy of Mayor George E. Cryer of Los Angeles for re-election at the primaries, May 5, has been launched, based upon a real record for achievement and fulfilled campaign promises during his past administration, and a positive stand in favor of the Swing-Johnson Bill, which provides for the construction of a high dam at Boulder Canyon together with the All-American Canal. This latter will open up Los Angeles' entire back country and afford land for development for thousands of ex-service men.

Los Angeles sorely needs the added water and power which the Boulder Canyon project would provide, to care for her future development, to secure power as an inducement for new industries, and to free her from the grip of private corporations which are charging an exorbitant rate for the surplus power required to supply her needs over and above what the city power and light bureau is able to produce (at one-half the cost) with its limited facilities.

Private and special interests are using every possible means to defeat this step toward municipal independence, in spite of the fact that the Los Angeles municipal system clearly demonstrates its ability to provide water and power at practically one-half the cost formerly charged by private corporations.

In virtually every department of the city government, Mayor Cryer has been instrumental in effecting important improvements. In accordance with his campaign promises, and due to his efforts, Los Angeles now has a new and modern city charter. New city jail facilities have been secured, a new city hall is definitely scheduled, the new library is up to its full height, the police force has been increased from 775 to 2,514 men, with like increases in the fire department, and amazing strides have been taken in water, power, harbor and other developments.

Mayor Cryer has gained the whole-souled support and admiration of his entire administration by the deep interest he has taken in, and the close co-operation and genuine assistance he has given, every department, and it is felt that he is the logical man to make operative the provisions of the new charter which becomes effective July 1.

CALIFORNIA'S PLAYGROUNDS

CALIFORNIA'S GREAT SUMMER PLAY-grounds, the National Forests, attracted 4,154,761 people during 1924, according to a report of the San Francisco headquarters of the United States Forest Service. The number is 4 percent less than the number of 1923 visitors.

Travel statistics received from more than 100 forest supervisors and rangers in the National Forests of the Golden State indicate that 1,755,972 people actually visited and made use of the federal forests for rest, sport and recreation, while 2,398,789 people passed through the forests over main motor highways. Seventy-six percent of this total travel was into the Angeles, Santa Barbara and Cleveland National Forests of Southern California, while 24 percent is credited to the fourteen government forests located north of the Tehachapi.

The figures show that the Angeles National Forest of Southern California, with over 1,000,000 visitors and 720,000 transient tourists, is the greatest mountain playground in America, if not in the world. Nearly three-quarters of a million campers and picnickers alone visited this federal forest in 1924. In the northern part of the state, the Tahoe National Forest, with 90,700 visitors and 167,900 transient tourists, was the most popular recreation area.

The automobile has revolutionized vacation travel, foresters say, and this is borne out by the report figures, which show that 3,768,480 people, or over 90 percent of all visitors to the National Forests of California, traveled by motor car. The people who went into the mountains on horseback or on foot numbered only a little over one percent of the total.

"Every one is welcome to make use of the National Forests for rest, sport and recreation," says District Forester Paul G. Redington. "Their popularity is shown by the tremendous volume of travel last year—and that in face of the worst fire season ever experienced in California and the emergency closing to public use of more than 12,000,000 acres of government forest land. There is one thing, however, the Forest Service does insist on, and that is that every one who visits the forests must use extreme care with all forms of fire—matches, tobacco of every form and campfires while in the woods. Last year 71 percent of the fires that occurred in the state were man-caused. Such carelessness must stop, and I appeal to every right-thinking citizen to make it his personal business this year to see that it is stopped."

Would Remove Blot—A statewide, intensive campaign to lessen the fatalities and accidents on the streets and roads of California was launched at a recent conference of interested organizations and agencies in Del Monte, according to the California Development Association. The conference was called by the women's division of the association in co-operation with the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California. The purpose of the conference was to organize the entire state to remove the blot against the fair name of California as having the blackest traffic fatality record in the United States.

GOLF IN LONG BEACH

Verne Wickham

LONG BEACH IS RAPIDLY BECOMING one of the southland's most favored golf centers. To the vacationist or the tourist whose golf-bag is the most important part of his vacation luggage, Long Beach has many good things in store. In a climate which makes golf possible twelve months of the year and on fairways cooled by ocean breezes, the golf enthusiast will find the game at its best. Only a few years ago one course took care of the golfers of this community, but now three courses are in use and one more will be completed and open to play within two or three months. Two of these courses are situated within the city limits, one the Virginia Country to try out their shots annually and make Long Beach truly a golfer's paradise.

On fairways within sight of the Pacific Ocean, the Recreation Park course is a pleasant and sporty course to play. Only a trifle over 5,000 yards in length, it is a delight to the average golfer and typically a course for the come-and-go golfers. The man who is not on very good speaking terms with par will get a great deal of real enjoyment playing these fairways, for all pars are easy and there are but two 5-par holes on the card. Plans have been drawn and work will start in the near future that call for grass greens and an additional thousand yards added to the course, which will make the course

A CLOSE PLAY ON THE SIXTH GREEN AT THE VIRGINIA COUNTRY CLUB, LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA.

Club, a private club, but which extends its courtesies to members of out-of-town golf clubs, and another, the Municipal Club, open to the public. Both of these clubs are within ten minutes' ride from the center of town. Within a half-hour's ride is the Palos Verdes Golf Club, whose grass greens and fairways were thrown open to the golf public of Southern California just a few weeks back. The Long Beach Country Club has a beautiful little course under construction on a hundred acres of land lying a few miles east of Long Beach, which will be ready for play within a few months. These four courses provide ample opportunity for thousands of golfers of championship calibre.

Par for the course is 67. Going out in 36 and back in 31. The greens are of specially prepared sea sand, which makes one of the finest putting surfaces obtainable. Now, for just a short trip around the 18 holes. No. 1 is 365 yards long, an easy par 4 and a nice hole to start the round with. No. 2 calls for a straight drive and a nice iron to reach the 342 yards to the green; par is 4. No. 3 is but three hundred yards long, but demands good playing to get the par figure, which is 4. No. 4 is one of the 5-par holes, being on the top of a hill, which demands a well-played second shot to reach. The fifth and sixth are two one-shot holes. Par on both is 3. No. 6 is one of the feature holes on the course, being a sloping green on a rising slope with plenty of trouble between you and the green. No. 7, a par 4 hole, calls for a long drive and a well-played iron. No. 8, another one-shot hole, measures 229 yards and there is plenty of trouble to be carried on the drive. No. 9, another 5-par hole, is 412 yards long, with plenty of trouble in the woods for the sliced drive. No. 10, par 3, is just 203 yards long. No. 11 is par 4. No. 12 is a sporty hole of some 149 yards; par is 3. No. 13 is a blind hole, calling for nice direction and a well-played iron to a green on the down slope; par is 4. No. 14 measures 385 yards and is par 4. No. 15, measuring but 183 yards, is a hard par 3, for there is plenty of trouble all the way and the woods catch the over-ambitious driver. No. 16 is 260 yards and uphill all the way, making par 4 a hard figure to get. The home green, another par-3 hole, measures 194, and a row of trees and the out-of-bounds line makes this hole a hard par.

This course was the first home of the Virginia Country Club and a pioneer among Southern California golf courses. When the Virginia Club obtained its lease on a patch of rolling ground north of Long Beach and moved its course there the City of Long Beach, through a bond issue, purchased over 400 acres of the golf course and the surrounding ground, and plans to make there one of the greatest recreation centers in the world. The golf course will be a championship course, measuring over 6,000 yards, with grass greens and a small nine-hole course for women and beginners. In addition to the golf course there will be basketball courts, baseball, volleyball, soccer, tennis, and in fact every outdoor sport, even boating, will be given ample room. The green fee on the golf course is 50 cents a day, with annual memberships selling for $20.

Since the opening of this popular municipal course to the Long Beach golf fans and hundreds of tourists in May 1922, approximately 155,000 persons have played the course. The daily average is about 200 persons since the opening. However, the daily average is steadily on the increase. More than $25,000 annually from green fees has been turned into the city treasury from the receipts on the municipal course. During 1923 the resident players on the municipal course formed a permanent Municipal Golf Club for the purpose of organizing and conducting golf tournaments with the co-operation of the City Recreation Department and otherwise stimulate wider interest in this popular pastime. It was largely through the efforts and leadership of the members of this club that the city fathers were induced to start an improvement program in February 1925, which will provide grass greens and grass fairways, involving a total expenditure of approximately $75,000. This huge development program was started by an appropriation in January 1925 of $15,000. The work of changing from sand to grass greens is proceeding without interrupting play on the course by improving only five or six holes at a time, always leaving a full eighteen holes for constant daily use. When this improvement program has been completed, Long Beach will have one of the finest and most attractive municipal golf courses on the Pacific Coast.

The Virginia Country Club's course is rated as one of the sportiest courses in Southern California. It is a full eighteen holes and a real test for the shots in any golfer's bag. This course is one of the most exclusive clubs in Southern California, and boasts of some fine golfers who play over a wonderful course. Grass greens and fairways that cover the rolling hills like a blanket, several blind holes and some sporty "one-shotters" add to the pleasure of playing a round on this ideally located golf course.

The Long Beach Country Club will open its eighteen-hole course in the near future. This club is formed of about 400 real golfers, who have built their course on 100 acres of land situated about ten miles down the coast from Long Beach. The drive to the course follows the ocean along the Coast to Coast highway and the course itself is within sight of the ocean and will be fanned by the perpetual breezes from the Pacific. This course will be one of the most beautiful courses in Southern California when completed. The entire estate of the club has been plowed and sowed to grass and over 700 trees planted, so that the finished product will be as a huge park. It is planned to be one of those golf courses that is a test of golf and not strength. There is enough rise and fall in the ground to make for sportiness, the fairways are narrow, long and well-trapped, and shots will have to be well placed if one is to write par on his card, but 36 holes a day over this course will not be over-tiring. This feature will be appreciated by the experienced golfer. Two artificial lakes add sport to several of the holes. The personnel of this club have been meeting and holding tournaments over the Municipal and Palo Verdes courses and have developed a good crop of golfers. Golf is the main feature of the club, which already has won the name of "The Friendly Golf Club," though the social side of the organization will find ample chance to be fostered in a beautiful clubhouse of Colonial-American style, which will be erected in the near future. The site selected for this clubhouse will be on a knoll overlooking the entire course. A temporary clubhouse will take care of the golfing needs of the members until the big home is completed.

These three courses are of Long Beach proper, but many local golfers and visitors have been playing over the new Palo Verdes course, which was thrown open to the public just a few weeks back. Here is the supreme test of golf. This is a real he-man course and no place for the golf weakling. Suffice to say that par has never been equaled and many of the south's leading players have played over the course. It is really one of the truly great golf courses of the world. Golf writers and critics who have viewed the layout state that it is without doubt one of the most picturesque and majestic courses to be found anywhere. With its green fairways covering the sides of that mighty hill like a green blanket, it makes the golfer stand in awe at the mighty beauty of his surroundings. Its proximity to Long Beach has made it a very popular course with local golfers.

In addition to these three courses of our own there are some seventy golf courses within an hour's ride of Long Beach that make this city an ideal one for the man or woman who combines vacation with golf.

NEIGHBORS GUESTS.

Mrs. Clara Fay, president Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W., was hostess March 6 at a delightful dinner party at her home. She was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Alpha Harper. The guests included members of the americanization, history and music committees of the Parlor, who discussed plans for programs. The table was charmingly decorated with Saint Patrick's Day favors and fresias.

The Thimble Club of the Parlor met at the home of Mrs. Stephen Ford March 5 and completed plans for participation in the work of the Social Welfare League. March 25 the Parlor had as its guests members of the newly-instituted Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 of San Pedro, and initiated several candidates.

April 29, at Moose Hall, 1320 Elm avenue, the Parlor will serve a supper, to be followed by cards and dancing. All Native Sons and Native Daughters, as well as their friends, are extended an invitation.

GOOD IDEA.

At its March 18 meeting Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. initiated three candidates, and Howard Norwood is devoting his time and talent to getting the membership interested in the Order's and the Parlor's undertakings and is meeting with much success. Deputy Grand President Albert V. the entrances to places where Parlors exist. A committee made up of President Harold Leedom and Harold Feiock has been investigating, and reported its findings, to the effect that, in quantities, the signs may be procured at such a low price that every Parlor could well afford to invest. Long Beach's delegates will present the project to the San Bernardino Grand Parlor, and it has so much of merit that it is believed the Grand Parlor will approve it. If that be the case, soon there will appear alongside the highways of California at the gateways to the places where the Native Sons hold forth numerous replicas of the Order's emblem.

CALIFORNIA'S FLOWER

(DELMAR H. WILLIAMS.)

From where Sierra's summits, crowned with snow,
Look out across Nevada's wide plateau,
To where the Western Ocean's power is spent
To shape the margin of a continent;
From where the heavens pour libations on
The densely wooded hills of Oregon,
To where a tropic sun's unhampered glow
Rests on the northern rim of Mexico;
You'll find the poppy some time in the year—
Sown by gnomes when gold was planted here,
And left to bud, and bloom, and seed, and wait
Just to become the emblem of our State.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

REQUIREMENTS FOR WELL ARRANGED HOME

NO HOME IS COMPLETE, BE IT IN THE country or the city, without its planting of shrubs, trees and flowers. The first requirements of a well-arranged home are a good lawn and attractive natural arrangement of trees and shrubs. Shrubs massed about the foundation of the house, "tying it to the ground," as the landscape architect says, with those of higher growth behind and smaller ones in front, are the first step in the beautification program. What these shrubs will be, depends upon locality, for California has a wide range of soil, climate and altitude. A professional landscape gardener, if he can be afforded, no doubt will give the best results, otherwise the home-owner must use his judgment, following the lines of other plans that have proved pleasing to his eye. In larger homes the entrances of walks and drives, particularly on the farm, can well be set off by shrubs, and these, when of the evergreen varieties, furnish beauty spots the year around.

TO HOLD FARM CONFERENCE.

Of interest to farmers in California will be the announcement of the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California that the Farm Bureau Travel Conference will be held this spring. The last conference of this sort was run from Berkeley down the coast to Los Angeles, thence over to Riverside, San Bernardino and Redlands, and then back to Orange and San Diego Counties.

This year it will go from Berkeley through Contra Costa to San Joaquin and Sacramento Counties, then will include Yolo, Yuba, Sutter, Butte, Glenn and Tehama Counties. The conference will start in Berkeley on Monday, May 4, and will end the following Saturday night in Red Bluff. Each county that has a farm bureau sends its farm adviser with three delegates in an automobile. The cars are lined up at Berkeley and each is given a number designating the place in line that must be kept for the week.

About fifty cars will make the trip this year, with some 200 men. Demonstrations of the work being done co-operatively by the Agricultural Extension Service and the Farm Bureau will be shown during the day, and meetings at night will make up a full program for the delegates who, upon return to their own counties, are required to make reports of their observations at every farm bureau meeting in the county. It is an interesting and profitable trip. Last year the foot-and-mouth epidemic made it impossible; and the year before it was omitted because of other reasons. This will be the seventh of its kind.

SHADE TREES.

Shade trees, so important in nearly every California locality, are lost by the thousands every year because they are not properly planted and do not get the right care after planting. See that the hole in which they are set is big and roomy, so the roots may be accommodated without crowding. If the soil is not good in that particular place, make the hole twice as large as need be otherwise, and fill in with good dirt. Don't pack the roots with manure, but after the tree is planted, spade in this sort of fertilizer in the ground around the tree in a circle five or six feet in diameter. A layer of manure three or four inches deep over the spaded area will furnish more food for the tree and will conserve moisture. Whitewash, especially in the fall and winter, should be applied to prevent sun scald or sunburn, following which insect pests most frequently make their attacks. The kind of trees depends upon the locality and the personal inclination of the person planting. However, in view of the very serious situation that arose in the San Joaquin Valley last summer with the invasion of elm leaf beetle, it might be wise to plant some tree other than this, for it is hardly conceivable the entire state will not have this pest to fight within a few years.

ALFALFA WEEVIL.

A meeting of men interested in agriculture, representing every section of the state, was called last month in Stockton to consider the danger of invasion of the alfalfa weevil. The danger lies not so much in the damage the weevil itself will cause, for it is rather easily controlled by spraying before the first crop is cut; but rather in the crop of quarantine regulations that are sure to spring up in other states as a result of the appearance of the disease here.

A campaign of education, to acquaint the public of the true nature of the disease and the consequences that would follow, if it appears in the state, is to be undertaken. Every avenue of ingress is being watched closely, but with the weevil on the Nevada border, its natural flight may be expected to carry it to the great interior valleys in a few years, at most.

PROPER FEEDING IMPORTANT.

There are some things in poultry and egg production that are essential to remember. One of these is, that feeding is a mighty important part of the poultry business. Chickens may be bred to lay, from the most productive strains known, but these embryo eggs never will be brought forth if the proper feeding methods are not employed. Protein, first of all, is essential, whether from green bone, meat scraps, tankage or other source.

Green feed always is essential, and where it is not obtainable, sprouted grain, preferably oats, will be a good substitute. Dry mash, fed in hoppers where it is at all times obtainable, and balanced by an almost equal amount of grain by weight as the mash consumed, will be about right.

The poultryman may mix his own mash if he so desires, but he can find on the markets now well-known brands of ready-mixed mashes, properly balanced in their content, and at a price that hardly will justify the work of mixing. It must be remembered that any addition to such a mash will throw it off balance, and if such an addition is tried, results should be watched carefully. With breeding and feeding cared for, sanitation, ventilation and eternal vigilance must never be neglected.

HIGH PRICES FOR HOGS.

Not more than a few weeks ago, a breeder of registered swine in California attempted an auction sale, the first since the foot-and-mouth disease epidemic in the state. The result was near to failure. Few of the offerings, which consisted of bred sows and gilts, were sold. Farmers were afraid of the hog business, notwithstanding the fact that reports showed there are fewer hogs on farms now than since 1909 and that high prices seemed assured.

In the short time since this sale was attempted, the expected change in the hog business has come. Prices have gone up, as had been predicted, and the owners of hogs are in an enviable position for the first time since the post-war depression. The purchasing power of hogs fell below the general level of farm prices early in 1922, but it now has recovered and there are indications that the hog business will be good from this time on.

CALIFORNIA'S SHEEP INDUSTRY.

While the sheep industry in California is at the high tide of prosperity just at present, with lamb prices attractive and wool production inviting, the grower will do well to take a glance at the future. There are ups and downs in every line of agriculture, and no one knows this better than the sheepman when he consults his memory of but a few short years ago. These days will come again, not soon, let it be hoped, but they are inevitable, it must be agreed. Then the grower whose lambs attain size quickly and whose sheep yield the biggest clip is the one who makes money while others show a deficit on operations.

The answer to this is the breeding of better sheep. Australia has pointed the way, and the sheep business there is more profitable than here is due in a great measure to the fact that their sheep are better bred, as well as to the fact that their range is greater. Better sheep, through the use of purebred rams, must be part of the growers' problem. More returns per ewe, through bigger, better, easier fed and more quickly developing lambs, and through an increased clip of a finer wool, will pay heavily the investment required. More and more, to the production of sheep under fenced conditions must be expected, and here again the better breeding is necessary. At any time and under any conditions, even the most favorable, as no it will pay; but in days when adversity besets the industry, it is imperative.

Lamb prices this spring bid fair to be excellent, and there will come the temptation to growers to sell as many lambs as they think they can spare, which often is more than they can afford to part with. Ewe lambs must be kept to keep up the flock.

CORRECTING PEAR TREE GROWTH.

Young pear trees have a desire to grow straight up into the sun. This often results in the main branches being too close together, so that there is no sunlight or air admitted to the center of the tree. This can be corrected in two ways. One of these is the so-called California system of tying down the young branch to the trunk of the tree, bending them over so they are forced into a horizontal position. This it has been found, brings the tree into production at an earlier age.

Another method is to use spreaders made box lumber a quarter of an inch thick. Notched at each end, when of the right length they will force the limbs apart and at the end of a few months the spread is permanent, as it is in the tying down plan. Three or four main branches, under ordinary conditions, are sufficient for the pear tree.

REVISING WHEAT BREEDING METHODS.

Wheat breeding methods are being revised by the agronomists of the College of Agriculture of the University of California and of the United States Department of Agriculture, co-operating. When new varieties of grains are bred, it requires six or eight years of breeding to get them fixed for commercial seed selection. To breed a new variety and get the seed into commercial use, requires about ten years.

The agronomists in California, however, taking advantage of the climatic conditions, are ripening two crops a year, and if this plan can be developed successfully, the time of wheat breeding will be cut in two. Grain is planted in the test plots following the breeding work. When the seed ripens, it is taken from the interior valley, where the first crop is grown, to the coastal district, and there a second yield is matured. This plan not only will speed up work on wheat breeding, but that of oats and barley as well. Where crops have a shorter growing period, there is, obviously, a better chance to practice this new method.

EXPERIENCE COUNTS WITH POULTRYMEN.

It's one thing to say how a thing should be done, but it's another to do it. Experience is gained by doing a thing many times, and if the eyes are kept sharply open while this experience is being gained, there is profit in experience. The poultryman is one with whom experience counts heavily. He knows immature and undersized pullets often are the cause of low egg production and he doesn't try to fool himself on the size of his laying stock by weighing his largest fowls. The undersized pullet will not lay enough to be profitable, as a rule. There are standards of weight which are about right for egg production, and the poultryman does not have to guess.

The experienced poultryman keeps his flock healthy by careful sanitation, and lice and mites have no home with his hens. The first symptom of disease is the signal for the isolation of the sick fowl, and promptness in this respect often saves his flock. The man who has gained from doing it, knows green feed pays; he knows that while his hens may be bred to lay, they also must be fed to lay. This is not to say the beginner cannot be successful, but he must keep his eyes open.

NEW VARIETIES GRAPES.

New grape varieties have been announced by the United States Department of Agriculture, as likely to prove of value to the vineyardist of California. They are recommended as more valuable than many of the commercial varieties now commonly grown in the state. There is a doubt in many minds, though, if these grapes will stand up to the test of the California demands. In fact, some of these varieties have been tried and found wanting, and while they—or some of them at least—may be found of value, it will be well to go slow in replacing any tried varieties until the new ones have been given a thorough demonstration under field varieties.

SPECIALIZING PAYS.

Diversification and specialization are two items pointing to profit that farmers cannot afford to overlook. In one Washington county, the farmers are specializing on Belgian horses, Guernsey cows and Duroc Jersey hogs. The breeds are a matter of choice, but the specialization in them is where the Washington farmers are making money, for they have established a reputation and have created a demand that means real profits.

In California there is room for improvement along this line. The White Leghorn has paid in Petaluma, the Jersey cow in Humboldt County, citrus culture in the southern part of the state. Find what does well, then do that well, establish a reputation and prosperity will inevitably result.

LIVESTOCK ALMOST NORMAL.

Despite drought and foot-and-mouth disease, the livestock on farms in California at the end of 1924 was 96.3 percent of normal, according to the report of Agricultural Statistician E. E. Kaufman of the California Co-operative Crop Reporting Service. The value of the animals was $148,575,000, as compared to $165,502,000 the year before, and $162,044,000 the second preceding year.

Native Sons of the Golden West

GAVEL, DEMOLISHED MANY YEARS AGO, IS FINALLY REPLACED.

SAN RAFAEL—TWENTY-ONE YEARS ago Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn, who is meeting with tremendous success as an organizer, having increased the membership of several Parlors by 100 percent and more, occupied the principal chair of Mount Tamalpais 64. At that time, Supreme Court Justice Thomas J. Lennon, State Senator Martinelli, Editor M. F. Cochrane, J. Emmett Hayden, supervisor of San Francisco, and other prominent legal lights and shining stars in the political firmament gave Cohn no credit for being a parliamentary genius. Being active at that time in the Parlor, they decided it would afford them a lot of entertainment to tease Cohn.

Well, Cohn wasn't going to stand for that, no siree! He pounded so vigorously for order that he broke the handle of an elegant mahogany gavel. It was repaired, but as it was a hasty, makeshift job, it has always looked bad and so D.D.G.P. Charles Locati, learning that Cohn wrecked it, demanded that he replace it. He did so.

Marin County Treasurer Charles Redding formally presented the new gavel to the Parlor March 9 in a brilliant speech on Cohn's behalf. "Its intrinsic value isn't much; it's true it isn't even so much for looks, but its historic value," rhapsodized the eloquent Charlie, "is immeasurable. The materials used in its construction were brought over in the 'Mayflower' by one of Cohn's ancestors and shipped around the Horn long before California was ever thought of. Why, if the State Hysterical Society ever discovers this precious relic—well, Mount Tamalpais will be in the market for another new gavel."

TO PETITION CONGRESS FOR ADEQUATE PACIFIC COAST DEFENSE.

San Francisco—The Board of Grand Officers met March 18. In addition to Grand President Edward J. Lynch, who presided, there were present: Grand Third Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees James A. Wilson, Charles L. Dodge, Richard M. Hamb, Seth Millington, John S. Ramsay, Alfred H. McKnew.

The bill before the State Legislature, providing for a central state park commission, was indorsed, and considerable routine business was disposed of.

At noon the Board adjourned to listen to an address by W. B. Shearer on defense of the Pacific Coast, and on reconvening adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Board of Grand Officers N.S.G.W. petition the Congress of the United States to construct a naval base on the Pacific Coast and to provide adequate defense thereon."

Fifteen Initiated.

Sacramento—A class of fifteen candidates were initiated into Sutter Fort 241, March 7, the ritual being exemplified by the following: Past Grand President William J. Hayes, president; Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew, junior past president; Grand Trustee Seth Millington, first vice-president; Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge, second vice-president; Grand Third Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, third vice-president; Grand Secretary John T. Regan, marshal; E. B. Johnston (Sutter Fort 241), inside sentinel; Carleton L. Katzenstein (Sutter Fort 241), organist.

Following the ceremonies a banquet was served and a program presented. Treasurer Albert W. Katzenstein of the Parlor was the toastmaster, and the speakers included: Past Grand President Hayes, President J. V. Hines and Secretary C. L. Katzenstein of Sutter Fort, Grand Secretary Regan, W. Holmes (Sunset 26), Grand Trustee Millington, Grand Third Vice-president Thompson, H. W. Frederick and Claud Simpson of the initiates, Grand Trustee John T. Newell. Entertainment features interspersed the talks.

This was the first class initiation in Sacramento for some time, but President John V. Hines says Sutter Fort will soon have another, and that it "is going to go some." To keep the membership informed, arrangements have been made to send The Grizzly Bear regularly to each member at the Parlor's expense. H. J. Sherwin, after faithfully filling the office of financial secretary for several years, has resigned and been succeeded by Alton Irwin.

"Hangtown."

San Bernardino—Arrowhead 110 staged at the Orange Show Pavilion, March 26, 27, 28, "Hangtown" show that attracted large crowds. Proceeds of the event went into the fund being raised by the Parlor to entertain the Grand Parlor which meets here in May.

The interior of the big showhouse was transformed into an early-day mining town, with all of the various resorts and businesses in full operation. As in the days of gold, money was freely spent. Members of the Parlor, who designed and built the town, as well as mannequins, the concessions, were clothed in the garb most popular in California's pioneer days.

Interesting Discussions.

Petaluma—Petaluma 27 had one of the best meetings in its history March 2, when the officer and members of Santa Rosa 28 motored over from the county-seat of old Sonoma, and Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew paid his official visit and delivered a splendid and most encouraging address. Among the many visitors were D.D.G.P. Charles Locati and Peter Lundberg of Mount Tamalpais 64 (San Rafael), Past President Frank Berger, Marshal W. M. Cook, Count, Treasurer James Ramage, Judge Marvin Vaughan, County Tax Collector Virgil Butts, Assistant District Attorney Churchill, Lee Lewis of the "Republican" and Recording Secretary Car Patterson of Santa Rosa Parlor.

Interesting subjects were discussed, the main one being the historic old adobe built by General Vallejo in 1834 and now the property of Petaluma. Its upkeep has cost the Parlor a large sum, $172 having been recently expended for wiring for electric lights, to reduce the fire hazard. The building, a two-story one 204x100 feet, is badly in need of repairs, particularly the roof, which will have to be replaced at a cost of $1,250. The Parlor named a committee to arrange, with the other Sonoma County Parlors for a picnic at historic Fort Ross in June. A banquet, which was a treat, followed the business meeting, and about the festive board many addresses were made. During the evening Peter Lundberg, A. Bettinelli and A. Elzi delighted with musical numbers.

Going Strong.

Eureka—Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn was a guest of Humboldt 14 at a supper-banquet March 9, when plans for a membership drive were perfected. A committee was named to prepare a list of eligibles, and one member designated to accompany Cohn on each of the fourteen days he will devote to the Parlor.

Saturday, April 18, the grand officers will come here and initiate a class of candidates rounded up by Cohn for Humboldt, Arcata 20 and Ferndale 93. The class, it is predicted, will be a record-breaker in numbers. In forty-eight hours' time Cohn signed up sixty-eight candidates for Arcata Parlor.

Daughters Guests.

Ferndale—Ferndale 93 had a rousing meeting March 16, when Grand Trustee John T. Newell and Deputy Grand President Newman Cohn were visitors. Twenty-two members of Golden Star 83, which has been consolidated with Ferndale, were welcomed. The Parlor appointed a committee of fourteen to assist Cohn in a membership drive he will start here April 1. Arcata 20 was represented at the meeting by a delegation of fifteen.

At a banquet which concluded the meeting members of Oneonta 71 N.D.G.W. were guests. A program was presented, and Grand Trustee Newell delivered an address on the value of the Order to the state, and D.G.P. Cohn spoke on membership. Dancing terminated a most enjoyable occasion.

Radio Program.

Oakland—February 18 Athens 195 and Aloha 106 N.D.G.W. broadcasted over KLX of the "Tribune." The program, which was furnished by talent from both Parlors and was favorably commented on, included:

Fortieth Birthday.

Nevada City—A banquet featured the observance of the fortieth institution anniversary of Hydraulic 56, March 10. Reminiscences of the Parlor's career were related by the several speakers. Of the nine surviving charter members, four were in attendance.

Membership Drive.

San Diego—San Diego 108 inaugurated a membership drive March 1 that is expected to materially add to its numerical strength. President Wilbur Kelley has named the following committee to direct the drive: Edward H. Dowell (chairman), Stephen Dove, Edgar F. Hastings, Harold C. Nelson, Carl Monroe, Joseph Tighe, Joseph Kelley, Henry P. Stelling, Marshall Cruze, Daniel Feeler, Dan E. Shaffer.

Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer is lending his valuable assistance. He has called the Parlor's attention to a published statement that 33,000 of San Diego's estimated population of 125,000 are native-borns. He says the Parlor will go "over the top" and have increased representation at the Grand Parlor in May. Commencing in April, the Parlor will meet the second Monday of each month at North San Diego, where several members reside. March 9 a native daughter arrived at the home of Deputy Grand President Mayrhofer.

"Some" Eggs.

Santa Rosa—At a recent meeting of Santa Rosa 28, Past President Frank Berger was presented by C. L. Miner with five White Leghorn eggs weighing, respectively, 3, 3 1/4, 3 3/4, 3 3/7, 4 ounces, a total of 17 3/7 ounces. "Some" eggs, when the fact is taken into consideration that choice eggs for Eastern shipment from California weigh 22 ounces to the dozen.

Land Wanted for Memorial.

Placerville—Placerville 9 has petitioned the El Dorado County Board of Supervisors to condemn a lot at Coloma needed to complete the memorial monument started by the Society of California Pioneers at the site of Sutter's mill, where gold was discovered by James W. Marshall in 1848. The Parlor will pay for the land, if the supervisors undertake the condemnation proceedings.

The Parlor has named Fred Irwin, Leo Leonard, J. H. Quigley, Jos. Scherrer and Euell Gray a committee to arrange for the immediate erection of two huge arches welcoming visitors to Placerville. They will be artistic in design and have engraved upon them historic legends, in which this section is rich.

Membership Standing Largest Parlor.

San Francisco—Grand Secretary John T. Regan reports the standing of the Subordinate Parlor having a membership of over 400 March 20 as follows, together with their membership figures January 1 1925:

Class Initiated.

Hollister—Members of Fremont 44 had an enjoyable dinner February 26, after which a class of candidates were initiated. Following the ceremonies members of Copa de Oro 105 N.D.G.W. were guests of the Parlor at a dancing party.

"Loyalty Visit."

Oakland—The custom of a "loyalty visit" by past presidents at least once every six months was established in Fruitvale 252, February 26, when several of the old-timers attended a reunion.

Among the numerous visitors were Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington, Grand Trustees James A. Wilson and Richard M. Hamb and His-

MOVEMENT UNDER WAY TO CHANGE

GRAND PARLOR MEETING PLACE.

AT THE GRAND PARLOR WHICH MET last year in Santa Cruz, Placerville, El Dorado County, and Yosemite Valley appeared upon the ballot as places for this year's Grand Parlor. Of the 352 votes cast, Placerville received 192, and that little city was, accordingly, declared the meeting-place for the Thirty-ninth (1925) Grand Parlor.

During the past month, a movement to change the meeting-place developed, the reason assigned for the proposed change being the mileage expense, if the session be held in Placerville. Grand President Catherine E. Gloster has communicated with the Subordinate Parlors regarding the situation. The result of the change-movement is "in the air," so to speak, but, there appearing to be no way in which the action of last year may be amended or voided within the Order's laws, except through action by a special session of the 1924 Grand Parlor, it is doubtful if, at this late date, Placerville will lose the victory won at Santa Cruz.

This year's Grand Parlor is billed to meet June 15, and Marguerite Parlor No. 12 of Placerville has for some time been working on a program of entertainment for the attendants. Delegates will be elected in May.

Rumors of candidates for office at the approaching Grand Parlor are afloat, but at this writing The Grizzly Bear has received definite information, in answer to its queries, from but two sources: Mary Quinn (Marguerite 12) of Placerville and Josephine Johnson (El Carmelo 181) of Daly City will seek places on the Board of Grand Trustees.—C.M.H.

Heroes Remembered.

San Jose—Under the auspices of the Past Presidents' Club of Vendome 100, a memorial tree, sequoia sempervirens, was planted in City Hall park March 7, in observance of Arbor Day. The tree was dedicated to all United States war-boys who made the supreme sacrifice for their country. Past Grand President Mamie Pierce-Carmichael presided at the dedicatory ceremonies. Assistant District Attorney Fred L. Thomas paid tribute to the dead heroes, and Judge Percy O'Connor responded. Miss Tillie Brohaska, president of the club, presented the tree to the city, and it was accepted by City Manager Clarence B. Goodwin. Rev. Zachary J. Maher of the Redwood Park Commission pronounced the benediction, and "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung by the big crowd, led by Mrs. Clara A. Gairaud. The Parlor's beautiful American Flag, made entirely of ribbon with hand-embroidered stars, the work of the late Past President Bessie McCrone, and its State (Bear) Flag, a recent gift from Mrs. P. Arthur Nelson, occupied prominent places beside the memorial tree. The club has endorsed Senator C. C. Spaulding's bill, now before the State Legislature, for the preservation of the California poppy.

March 4 the Thursday Club of the Parlor sent home-made cakes to the U. S. Veterans' Hospital at Palo Alto. March 19, Vendome inaugurated a series of card parties to raise funds for participation in the diamond jubilee at San Francisco in September; the third Thursday of each month has been set aside for the parties. A sewing club, with Mrs. I. L. Koppel as chairman, has been organized; it meets every two weeks. At the suggestion of Grand Trustee Josephine C. Barboni, the Parlor is collecting toys, etc., for distribution among the kiddies at the county hospital and other institutions, and Miss Tillie Brohaska and Mrs. Clara Gairaud are collecting magazines for the county farm.

Mission Visited.

Hollister—Grand President Catherine E. Gloster paid her official visit to Copa de Oro 105 and San Juan Bautista 179 in joint session here February 27. Dinner preceded the business session, and during its serving an enjoyable program was rendered, consisting of toasts by Grand President Gloster, Mayme Moran and Past President Josephine Winn, a vocal solo by Mildred Waters and a pianologue by Past President Harriet Hooton. Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs acted as toastmaster. The tables were pleasingly decorated with daffodils and California poppies, over which yellow candles in crystal candlesticks shed a soft glow.

The meeting-hall was artistically adorned with long sprays of vari-colored shrubbery and spring blossoms in large baskets. During the impressive rendition of the initiatory ceremonies by officers well-drilled in their respective charges, three candidates were initiated into Copa de Oro. Delegations were present from Salinas, Daly City and Oakland, in addition to the following grand officers: Grand President Gloster, Grand Vice-president Sue J. Irwin, District Deputy Grand Presidents Sallie Thaler, Carmelita Luhr, Marguerite Sullivan and Rena Mathias, all of whom made pleasing addresses. The Grand President gave a most inspiring talk on "Patriotism and Good Citizenship." Presentations of flowers and gifts were made to the visiting grand officers, to Past Grand President Briggs, to former District Deputy Justina Lewis and to Past President Harriet Hooton, who has served several years as organist of Copa de Oro. Saturday morning the visiting delegations, accompanied by members of Copa de Oro, visited San Juan Bautista Mission and enjoyed a breakfast party in the mission town.

Masque Ball.

Oakland—Aloha 106 and Athens 195 N.S.G.W. held their annual masque ball February 20, and it was a huge success.

Aloha was represented at the March 7 meeting of the joint Alameda County Parlors' Admission Day committee by Florence McLean, Alice Miller Sallie Thaler, Irene Brentzlow and Carmelita Luhr. At the election of officers of the committee Sallie Thaler was chosen first vice-chairman.

May Festival.

Mariposa—Mariposa 63 announces a festival for May 2, the proceeds from which will be largely devoted to charitable purposes.

Ready Response.

Alturas—The committee of Alturas 159 having in charge the building of the Modoc Indian war battlefield monument is meeting with ready response from Modoc County's fraternal organizations and the citizens in general. A nucleus for the required fund has already been received, and the committee is much encouraged.

Grand President Catherine E. Gloster returned to her home here March 20 and was given hearty welcome. During April the Parlor will initiate a class of candidates, assuring increased representation at the Placerville Grand Parlor in June.

Tree Planted.

Taft—Miocene 228, despite a downpour of rain, carried out its Arbor Day plans and planted a cedar deodora in the Lincoln school grounds. The Lincoln school was selected because a majority of the children there are native-born. They presented a program of vocal and instrumental numbers, and fancy danceling. They gave rousing cheers for the Native Daughters, following a talk on the Order by Miss Gray.

The tree planting was conducted by President Mary B. Campbell and the officers of the Parlor, amidst the constant cheering of the 750 children. The tree was dedicated to Grand President Catherine E. Gloster. The rain which descended during the planting was looked upon as a good omen.

Joint Session.

Salinas—Grand President Catherine E. Gloster paid an official visit February 26 to Aleli 102 and Junipero 141 (Monterey) in joint session here. One candidate was initiated for Aleli, the officers of both Parlor exemplifying the ritual. The work was highly commended, especially the music of Organist Julia Larkin. El Pajaro 141 (Watsonville) was represented by a large delegation. Refreshments were served at the meeting's close. The banquet-room and tables were decorated with masses of yellow acacia blooms, jonquills and daffodils. At the banquet-board Grand President Gloster was presented with a silver plate by the Parlor.

March 12 many of the members appeared in costumes of green, and the entertainment committee—Mrs. Adele Bramers, Miss Rose Rhyner, Mrs. F. M. Martin, Mrs. Arthur Lund—presented a Saint Patrick's day program, consisting of games and musical numbers. Refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mrs. Nellie Christenson, Miss Pauline Holmes, Mrs. Carrie Smith.

Increase Remarkable.

San Jose—Santa Clara County Past Presidents' Association No. 3, organized in August, is progressing rapidly. The increase in membership, now including past presidents of four Parlor, has been remarkable. Welfare work is the association's motto, and a committee has plans outlined that will doubtless bring good results. Another committee has outlined a California history study program.

Meetings are held at the members' homes, and delightful social evenings are the result. Mrs. Katherine Nelson entertained during March, Saint Patrick's day being the motif for the jolly function.

Good Returns.

Grass Valley—Members of Manzanita 29 are most gratified at the result of the sale of poppies, $70.21 being netted. The amount will be turned into the homeless children fund.

Pick Cherries.

Vallejo—Vallejo 195 had a George Washington party February 18. The famous tree was there, and during a penny march, during which hatchets and all-day suckers were distributed, the members were told to pick the cherries off the tree. Six of the cherries contained numbers which drew prizes. President Grace Birchmore announced additional social functions in the future.

Drill Team.

Petaluma—Plans were made at the March 3 meeting of Petaluma 222 to have a drill-team, and a wideawake committee composed of Annie Dickson, M. Alexander, Angie Miner has been appointed to organize one. Whist was played, prizes being awarded, and refreshments were served.

March 17 plans were made for a food sale to be held in the near future. It is in charge of a committee made up of Past President Pometta, District Deputy Anderson, President Tomasi. The public whist party of February 17 proved a social and financial success. Anna Wrobloff headed the committee in charge.

History Study Progressing.

Daly City—The fifteenth institution anniversary of El Carmelo 181 was observed at a banquet at a San Francisco cafe February 26. Among the large number attending were Mes. Matilda Herringa, Camille Benassini, Matilda Haubrich, charter members. Four birthday cakes and dainty favors adorned the tables. In a letter from Secretary W. J. Savage El Carmelo 256 N.S.G.W. extended to the Parlor sincere congratulations upon the great social and fraternal success achieved. The Parlor's California History Club is making good progress, meetings being recently held at the homes of Mes.

Annual Picnic.

Oakland—The eighteenth institution anniversary of Claremont 240 was observed with a banquet at which President William Katon presided. The affair was arranged by the good of the order committee, Charles Jensen chairman. Arrangements are being made for the Parlor's annual picnic in May.

NATIVES MAKE ANNUAL PILGRIMAGE TO HISTORIC SPOT.

Hollister (San Benito County)—In accordance with the annual custom, plans were made for the ascent of Fremont Peak, March 8, to raise the American Flag in commemoration of the raising of the flag by John C. Fremont on that historic spot. As the day dawned dark and threatening, many who had planned to participate in the ceremonies decided to forego that pleasure and inspiration, especially as the roads to the peak were not in the best of condition.

Fifty patriotic Native Daughters and Native Sons, however, with their friends braved the fury of the elements and enjoyed the most disagreeable weather ever experienced during the nineteen years in which this ceremony has been observed. Those who reached the summit experienced a heavy rainstorm, a cutting wind and a slight flurry of snow. As a result, the ceremonies were very brief, consisting of a talk by District Attorney G. H. Moore, community singing and the hoisting of Old Glory.

Rena Mathias, Horace Fellows, Rose Sweeney and Miss Elsie Forsell. Arbor Day was observed at the R. S. Thornton school, where trees dedicated to Pioneers R. S. Thornton and John D. Daly, iris, poppies and heather were planted.

Three hundred and fifty members of the Order were present when Grand President Catherine E. Gloster officially visited El Carmelo, Bonita and Menlo in joint session here. Six candidates were initiated by a ritual team made up of past presidents of the Parlor. The Grand President spoke on patriotism and created a profound impression on her hearers. Grand Trustee Lillian Bekuhl gave a short talk on the homeless children. In appreciation of her valued visit the hostess Parlor presented Miss Gloster with a gift of silver. A banquet closed a delightful occasion.

Grand Assembly.

Oakland—A grand assembly of the Past Presidents' Associations—No. 1, San Francisco; No. 2, Alameda CoCounty; No. 3, Santa Clara County—will be held here April 27. Christine Bartlett heads the arrangements committee.

Association No. 2 initiated several candidates March 9, the new members being welcomed by President Winifred Halter. Many visitors were in attendance. A banquet was served by the past presidents born in March.

Success Indicated.

San Jose—San Jose 81 is progressing nicely under the new regime, with Miss Elsie Fisher as president. Plans for future activities indicate a very successful term. A sewing club for the afternoons, a big card party April 14, and an informal dancing party soon after the Lenten season are being planned for the purpose of deriving funds to finance the Parlor's participation in the Diamond Jubilee in San Francisco in September.

Grand President Catherine E. Gloster paid the Parlor an official visit February 19, the occasion being made the motif for an elaborate social function which was very successful and enjoyable. A reception and dinner was held at 6:30 p. m., after which came the meeting, the officers giving the ritualistic work perfectly and being highly complimented by the Grand President, who also gave a very interesting and instructive address. Visitors were present from El Monte, Santa Cruz, Vendome, Palo Alto, Laurel and Pescadero Parlor. Past Grand President Mamie P. Carmichael and Grand Trustee Josie C. Barboni were also among the guests. March 19 a delightful Saint Patrick's day party was given, with the members having birthdays during the first quarter of the year as honor guests. A class of candidates were received. The beautiful cedar chest offered by Past President Miss Edythe Johnson to the member bringing in the largest number of candidates during her term has been awarded Mrs. Alice Koerber.

HOLLYWOOD'S TREE PLANTING CAMPAIGN

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

EVERY CIVIC, EDUCATIONAL, CLUB and commercial force in Hollywood has been enlisted under the banner of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce to further a campaign for planting in every available place, trees and shrubbery designed to add to the natural brilliance of scenic Hollywood.

In the past few weeks the Chamber of Commerce has launched the initiative for greatly increasing the tree census of this community through the community-wide adoption of the Hollywood tree planting plan, which proposes to utilize parkways, lawns, school grounds, public greens in driving the plan to the apex of success.

Already the campaign has progressed to a point where community organizations are to be called into counsel in the effort to organize the various sections in an intensive drive for tree planting. These meetings are to be directed by the district directors of the Chamber of Commerce, of which there are seven. The directors themselves have been named captains of their particular areas, with power to appoint working forces to cover every block in the districts.

In some instances, district directors have already engaged their lieutenants and through the aid of these maps have been drafted showing the number of existing trees and the voids throughout the areas governed by the directors. When all the district maps are in sectional arrangement organizations will be formed for the purpose of pledging property-owners to plant more trees where such planting is possible and practical.

It is the plan to operate the distribution of these pledges through schools and clubs, and it is believed that through these mediums the best results may be obtained.

There are two plans under which the Chamber of Commerce purposes to carry out the designs of the Hollywood tree planting plan, one involving a moral obligation, the other resort to enforcement through the operation of a city ordinance creating a tree-planting district, thus compelling the planting and care of trees. The latter method, however, has not been approved by the Chamber of Commerce for general application, and will be invoked only in the case of large projects, the first of which is to be Sunset boulevard from Normandie avenue on the east, to Laurel Canyon on the west, a distance of three and a half miles. Trees are to be planted to line both sides of the thoroughfare, after the road has been widened to make an eighty-foot roadway.

The opening gun of the campaign was fired with the appointment by the Chamber of Commerce of a general committee which devised a program of operation and which will serve as the central body controlling the campaign and directing the schedule of district operations. This committee is made up of representatives of business and civic organizations, with horticulturists drawn in as advisors.

It is not the intention to concentrate on residence sections in carrying out the ideals involved in the Hollywood tree planting plan, but to devote as much attention as is appropriate and practical to business streets. The Hollywood Chamber of Commerce entertains the notion that trees of a dwarf variety are as essential on com-

Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington was master of the evening, and responses were made by Grand President Edward J. Lynch, and First Vice-president Fletcher A. Cutler, Valentine S. McClatchy and Senator Phelan, who as given an ovation at the conclusion of an inspiring address. All present joined in singing of-time ballads, and a splendid musical program, including numbers by the celebrated Neopolitan quartet, was rendered.

NEIGHBORS GUESTS.

Pacific Parlor No. 10 N.S.G.W. and Portola Parlor No. 172 N.D.G.W. had as their guests a Saint Patrick's day party March 17, Aloha Parlor No. 106 N.D.G.W. and Athens Parlor No. 95 N.S.G.W. of Oakland.

OLYMPUS OFFICER WEDS.

Olympus Parlor No. 189 N.S.G.W. and Fremont Parlor No. 59 N.D.G.W. will give a dance at Redmen's Hall, 3053 Sixteenth street, April 5. The joint committee in charge is: Olympus—Elmer Cuadro, Harvey Carty, Henry Joost, Frank Fahey, Chas. Erickson, George Schonfeld; Fremont—Mabel Seely, Arline Purcell, Rita O'Shea, Louise and Elsie Adami, Ella Acker, Kathryn McGrath, May Grantly.

Miss Nomie Peterson became the bride of Lester Wehr, second vice-president of Olympus, Friday, March 13. Miss Sylvia Donohue of Chicago as the bridesmaid and Frank I. Butler, secretary of Olympus, the best man. Another member of Olympus, Harry "Cupid" Gough, in charge of the marriage-license bureau of the county clerk's office, issued the license, and Past President Frank W. Dunn, justice of the peace, tied the knot. The honeymoon was spent at the snowfields at Truckee, Nevada County.

GRAND PRESIDENT VISITS.

Alta Parlor No. 3 N.D.G.W. observed its anniversary March 14, when Grand President Catherine E. Gloster paid her official visit. A dinner, attended by many members and guests, including eighteen charter members, preceded the meeting.

The Grand President complimented the Parlor on its membership, and favorably commented on the business-like conduct of the Parlor affairs and the ritual rendition.

BABES IN THE WOODS

JUST AS CHILDREN ARE THE MEN AND women of tomorrow, so are the little seedling trees the forests of tomorrow. As we devote thought to the protection and welfare of our future citizens, so must we devote thought to our future forests.

To many people, reforestation means shade or roadside tree planting. "Where can we plant some trees?" they ask. Yet they give little thought to forest fires on cut-over land, which are preventing nature from growing millions of little seedlings. The forester strives always for natural reproduction, where it is at all possible. Planting on a large scale is expensive, uncertain, and in many cases unnecessary.

Every forest crop should be harvested so that a new crop will grow naturally. Various regions have different requirements. In the Douglas fir region of the Pacific Northwest, a modified system of clear cutting and slash burning are proper. In the Sierra Nevada Mountains, in the yellow pine and sugar pine belts, trees are carefully marked for cutting on all National Forest timber sales, and the brush piled and burned. Seed trees and young growth must not be harmed.

But in every case, the "babes in the woods," the young trees, must be carefully protected from fire. If they are burned, hand planting is often necessary—hard work and costly. Let's stamp out the idea that "fires in cut-over land do no harm." Such fires are doing the most serious kind of damage. They are hindering natural reforestation and are burning our future wealth.

PRESIDENT PROCLAIMS FOREST WEEK.

President Calvin Coolidge March 11 proclaimed April 27 to May 3 American Forest Week. In part, the proclamation says:

"We have too freely spent the rich and magnificent gift that Nature bestowed upon us. In our eagerness to use that gift we have stripped our forests; we have permitted fires to lay waste and devour them; we have all too often destroyed the young growth and the seed from which new forests might spring. And though we already feel the first grip of timber shortage, we have barely begun to save and restore.

"We have passed the pioneer stage and are no longer excusable for continuing this unwise dissipation of a great resource. . . . There must be a change in our national attitude. Our industries, our landowners, our farmers, all our citizens must learn to treat our forests as crops, to be used, but also to be renewed. We must learn to tend our woodlands as carefully as we tend our farms."

suffer death. About dusk they met on the street and both began firing. Slocum missed, but English hit him in the breast and the bullet caused his instant death.

A young man named F. K. Brandenburgh, broke, went into a lumber yard in San Francisco to find a place to sleep. A lumber pile near by where he lay fell during the night and imprisoned him. It was nine days before he was discovered. He was then in a dying condition, and soon expired.

Little Johnny Babb, 3 years old, at Gilroy, Santa Clara County, found a bottle containing a pound of quicksilver in an old trunk and drank

The metal did not leave his stomach for ten days, but with the exception of being drowsy at times he was not incommoded by the dose.

At Risdon's contracting office in San Francisco April 7 Foreman Clarke was filling giant powder cartridges and smoking a pipe at the same time. About 4 p.m. a terrific explosion occurred which destroyed several buildings, set fire to others and, besides blowing Clarke to pieces, killed four other people outright and injured a dozen more. There was a $500,000 loss of property. Four firemen were badly hurt during the conflagration.

A boy named Pollard, 7 years old, was picking flowers near Nevada City, Nevada County, April 25, when he grasped a rattlesnake coiled in a cluster of blooms and was bitten on the leg. Copious draughts of whisky pulled him through.

Robert Hall of Gridley, Butte County, was April 28 building a wagon road near La Porte, Plumas County, and had to remove a stump by blasting it. After lighting the fuse he retired behind a nearby cabin for safety. The blast hurled a part of the stump over the cabin and it fell on Hall's head, killing him.

A construction train on the Central Pacific was backing down grade near Clipper Gap, Placer County, April 30 and struck a cow crossing the track. Six cars were ditched. Ed. Sweeney, the engineer, Gus Hoth, a brakeman, and A. Buck, a telegraph operator, were all standing on the head car and were killed.

LANDMARKS ARE RECEIVING MUCH NEEDED ATTENTION.

Willows (Glenn County)—Historic spots in this county are to be preserved by the Daughters of the American Revolution, Glenn County Chapter.

Among the first to receive attention will be the adobe house, between Orland and Willows, built by Captain Granville Swift in 1847, and the home of William B. Ide, who led the revolt against Mexican rule in 1848 which resulted in the birth of the short-lived California Republic.

TWAIN'S CABIN RESTORED.

San Andreas (Calaveras County)—The historic cabin of Mark Twain at Jackass Hill has been restored and refurnished. The restoration work was carried on jointly by Calaveras County and William J. Loring, prominent mining man, the latter rebuilding the cabin.

BACK TO EARLY DAY FIELD.

San Diego City—After an interval of seventy-nine years the Franciscan fathers, February 8, again took possession of the Mission of the Immaculate Conception at Old Town where, in June 1846, Fr. Vicente Pasqual reluctantly ceased missionary activities. It was here that the history of California had its beginning.

SUTTER'S BRANCH FORT.

Marysville (Yuba County)—In their endeavor to perpetuate the historic landmarks of this and the neighboring, Sutter, county, the Native Sons and Daughters of this city will next give attention to Yuba Dam, where once flourished an early-day stage station, the "White House," and General John A. Sutter's branch fort. These sites will be marked with appropriate tablets.

Prosperity Barometer Up—"The Barometer of California prosperity," states John Mitchell in the "California Journal of Development," the official publication of the California Development Association, "is not only up, but is continuing to rise. Reports from every phase of the economic life of the Golden State show sound conditions prevailing, with great potentialities on the horizon. There is reason for this. California climate. California soil, nature's forces which year after year strive for the perfection of this Western Eden, are now combined with even a greater power, namely, human intelligence en masse. Leading civic thought, leading industrial thought, leading agricultural thought, leading scenic and recreational thought are being united from one end of the state to the other, thereby developing a co-ordinated program, and making rapid strides toward the ultimate prosperity which is our due."

CALIFORNIA BLOOMS

the Scotchman he found the musicians laughing heartily at the joke played on them and handed McGregor a card, saying the youngest man in the quartet had given it to him to give to the big Scotchman. McGregor glanced at the card and read, "Malcolm Douglass." His face blanched. He told the lad to saddle his horse, left the mill in charge of his assistant and, mounting, rode rapidly to overtake the musicians. He found them over the hill, preparing to make camp. They cordially greeted the millman and laughed heartily with him at the predicament the mischievous-loving foreman had placed them in.

The Scotchman grasped the hand of young Malcolm, drew him aside, and eagerly said: "Lad, I did not recognize you, you have changed so." His voice shook, despite an effort to control it. "Where is Jean, your sister?"

"Jean is at our home. We live in one of the suburban towns of San Francisco," answered the boy.

"Is she still Jean Douglass?" The question trembled on the lips of Donald McGregor.

"She is still Jean Douglass. The dearest, sweetest sister a brother ever had. She is still very beautiful," softly said Malcolm. "I have just recovered from a severe attack of fever. Our physician ordered me to the pine-clad mountains, to tramp and to sleep in the open. I took my cornet with me, met these kindly Germans, and joined in their music, thus paying my way. The home we have in California was left us by an uncle. I was educated here and am an assistant bookkeeper in a large factory. Jean raises flowers for the city florists. I am now restored to health, and am going home, back to work."

"Lad, did you know that I have loved Jean all my life? We were engaged and were to marry. We had a misunderstanding. I was a hot-tempered idiot and left immediately for California. Three years afterwards I went back. You had gone, none knew whither. Malcolm, will you take me now to Jean?"

She stood in the garden, tenderly tying to stakes the gorgeous carnations, herself the fairest flower of them all. Tall and slender was she, with eyes dark and soft as the velvety pansy and in color like the beautiful spring violet, and hair so golden that the summer sunbeams seemed to have been caught and imprisoned in its beautiful strands. A soft color like the mountain wild-rose suffused her cheeks. The verdure-clad hills at the foot of lofty Mount Tamalpais made a pretty background for this scene. She glanced about at the flower-beds, carnations here, lilies there, all ready to be culled for the florist.

This was Jean Douglass. The years, in passing, had touched but lightly this sweet, unselfish woman. Always bright and beautiful, she had become exquisite with womanly thought and consideration for others, especially the sick and the needy, and her kind-hearted, thoughtful attentions had endeared her to all her neighbors.

She was cutting the long-stemmed, deep-red carnations, to be ready for the florist's boy. Her thoughts flew back to the Highland heather, and to her misunderstanding with Donald McGregor. To the flowers she whispered: "Ah, Donald, dear, how easily I could have explained, if you had only given me a chance."

A step sounded on the gravel walk. Of course, it was the florist's boy. Her hands full of carnations, she slowly raised her eyes and gazed in amazement. Then, in a voice which was a mixture of surprise, joy, longing and love, involuntarily exclaimed: "Oh! Donald, Donald!"

The Scotchman had grasped the extended hands. All the tender yearnings that had lain

In his heart for years leaped to his eyes, and with it such devotion and reverence that the girl's eyes filled with happy tears as he softly murmured:

"Jean! My own little lass! My bonnie, my delight!" His voice was unsteady. Her loveliness startled him. He had supposed that he had realized it all these years, but her superb beauty bewildered him. Separation and longing had added to her charm, and cruel time had dealt so gently with her beauty.

"Oh, Donald! I am so happy!" murmured Jean. She led him down the path to the rustic summer garden house. There he drew her into his arms and said: "Jean, my bonnie lass! Do you remember the promise you made me among the white heather? Jean, Jean, can you give me again the right to your heart and lips?" The dark-fringed lids were slowly lifted, the beautiful eyes glanced up, the soft red lips were raised, and Donald McGregor took the kiss that his heart had hungered for during the years since their parting. "My bonnie lassie! My queen of the white heather! My lassie, whom I have loved all my life! Bonnie Jean, tell me, tell me, there has never been any one else but me, has there?"

"Only you, Donald. When a girl like me loves, she means it. There never could be any other man. For I loved you too well, my Highland lad! Even if you have been away from me so long, laddie," she whispered tenderly, as her arms tightened about his neck and tears dimmed the splendor of her violet eyes. "I am so happy now. It is like auld lang syne."

Presently, she continued: "Donald, do you want to know why I did not wear the carnations that night so long ago? Because my good mother, not knowing they were from you, had sent them to a sick neighbor."

"Ah, Jean. I was a hot-tempered idiot. Forgive me, wee lassie. See what happiness we have lost," said Donald, as he softly and tenderly drew her close and kissed her. "Three years after our estrangement I put my pride in my pocket and went back to the Highland heather, but, lassie, you had gone away, none knew whither. I searched far and wide, my heart heavy with longing. You know that, to me, there is but one fair woman in all the world, and that is you. Jean, you won't keep me waiting long now, will you?" pleaded the man. "I want my home, and my wife," he said softly.

"Indeed, I will not, dear," said Jean, blushing happily. A puzzled look came to her face, as presently she said: "Donald, how did you find out where I was? Oh, how I have longed for you!"

Donald told her of the mischief-loving foreman, of the joke played on the four musicians, and of his subsequent meeting with Malcolm.

Jean laughed happily, and said: "We owe a debt of gratitude to that same mischief-loving foreman. And Malcolm, where is he now?"

"He will be here presently," assured Donald. "He showed me your home, and then had the good sense and kindness to take a walk around the block. We need an assistant bookkeeper at the M. & M. Co. mills, and Malcolm can fill the position."

"Then come help me get luncheon," said Jean, and they went up the path to the cottage.

"Years ago we walked among the Highland heather, now it is among the California blossoms," said Donald.

That evening, in the bustling mountain mining camp, thump, bang, thump, bang, roared the sixty thunderous iron stamps as the mischief-loving foreman puzzled over the following telegram: "You builded better than you knew, when you sent the Saxons to the mill. Coming, but not alone. Donald McGregor."

"By jove!" exclaimed the puzzled foreman. "This is certainly one on me."

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

TO DRESS WELL A DUTY

MODES OF THE SEASON ARE RAV-ishing, colorful and distinctive. All colors prevail this season. Look about you everywhere, from the blue sea to the shimmering mountain tops, let your eyes take in the wide sweep of color, and you have the colors in the mode this season. Color specialists offer practically every shade under the sun in innumerable varieties of fabrics. No cloth seems to be too rich or too inexpensive to be stamped with a gorgeous or a delicate hue.

Chiffon and crepes present all of the pastel shades of nature, as well as the depths of tone in the green of the turtle, the blue of the bird, and the countless varieties of flowers.

Black and white is a combination that always has and always will receive its share of attention even when the rage for myriad colors is at its height. One costume of black and white foulard crepe is trimmed with deep white silk fringe, put on in circles, giving the effect of tiers. A tailored felt hat, white, of course, with rolling brim, is worn with it.

One gown of unusual distinction is of printed chiffon, in black and white deepened and accented by hand beading in black crystal. It has seven-eighths sleeves on flowing lines, a becoming low neckline and long alternating panels of printed and plain chiffon. This frock fills a dual role for afternoon or evening and also affords a delightful choice for tucking into the week-end bag.

Chiffons are to be the rage of the season. They come in a maze of fascinating designs and are patterned with bouquets of lustrous colored flowers, garlands of leaves in conventional designs and stripes, and stripes and plaids without number. So great is the chiffon rage that large flowered shawls, three or four of them with gorgeous colored blooms, are being combined in an afternoon frock and worn with a broad-brimmed hat of a single color.

Spanish types of color prevail in the printed silks, while surahs have been revived, both plain and printed, and are used for ensembles and matching coat linings.

Crepes in every imaginable design combine utility and style in the most effective way. The long-retired polka-dot has returned and reflects both light and dark backgrounds with brilliant hues. Polka-dot printed crepe is a rather startling material when used in an ensemble costume. The frock being of the crepe, the coat, black, is lined with crepe of white with colored dots.

Kasha cloth and crepes are extensively combined. They make the ideal two-piece suit. Kasha cloth, in natural color, with its soft silky camelshair finish, seems to be manufactured as a perfect background for a flaming frock of printed crepe or to envelop the costume with a quaker-like quietness until the wrap is removed.

Old shades arrive under the mask of new names that are very fascinating, such as chili red, cicada green, bubble gray, rouquette, bambino blue, tiger eye, wigwam brown and sawdust. Neutral tans and grays prevail, but the former is the favorite.

Tans range from the pinky beige to okra, and are considered the most practical and satisfactory. There is also an increased showing of navy blue costumes. Then, there are the ever-greens shown in all the shops. They are especially smart in bengaline coats, with hats to match.

The skirt must be full in front. The new mode requires godets, circular fullness, pleats, the apron effect, or any other method of adding to the full effect of the front skirt, for the full front is a dominant note of the fashion.

Fullness at the front is important for capes as well as for frocks. This tendency toward fullness in spring wear gives a moving-picture effect. Draperies, lace, cascades, panels and sashes sway with the motion of the body, but the back of the coat, cape or dress should be as flat as can be made.

Perhaps the greatest single advancement in clothes design for women the last decade—though it is generally conceded all designs have improved—has been toward the graceful gowning of the larger woman. She may go to any smart shop, where every gown has been made with the idea of slenderizing into grace the full lines of the mature and heavier figure, and may find frocks for all occasions.

Many of the best designers are confining all their time to designing in larger sizes, because the dowagers of the world, with their younger sisters and flapper daughters, inclined to embonpoint, pay so well for frocks and coats—which artfully elongate and slenderize their gracious contours—that the designers can afford to ignore the more easily pleased women of smaller size.

Gay colored embroideries lend a note in trimming for the spring costume. Motifs of embroidery add chic to shawl collars and deep cuffs and bag pockets.

A white wool frock, which is particularly appropriate for the summer, is ornamented in needlework of wool embroidery in yellow, black and green. A wool trimmed hat should match this costume.

Youth heralds itself in the season's modes. It reveals itself most in the length of the skirt, as it varies between eight inches from the floor to just below the knee. The psychology of the short skirt is in its association with youth. Women today are younger than they were ten years ago. The trend of the world is toward the preservation of youth, and so now we understand why the short skirt, which made its appearance a few short seasons ago, has come to stay.

To dress as well as one can afford, is a duty

Dress Up For Easter!

WHEN some of us were young and before others of us had left our downy clouds, Easter was the day on which we appeared at church resplendent in shining new shoes, a light coat no matter what the weather, and of course, an Easter bonnet!

This old tradition still rules the day and Easter is the greatest dress-up day of the year; and Coulter's the place to secure your finery and accessories.

(formerly of the Elite)

we owe first to ourselves and then to the public. To dress, does not always mean expensive apparel. It does mean well-made clothes, carefully chosen for different occasions, with harmonizing color effects and worn with the grace that comes with the knowledge of being well-groomed and correctly outfitted to conform with one's particular station in life.

A striking change has taken place in the domain of negligees. Trousers have been adopted along shapely, graceful lines to encase the feminine limb, entirely different to the flounces of lace and chiffon that peeped beneath the negligee of former seasons. The oriental robes are conceded to be the really desirable garments for the comfort of the home, with the Chinese kimono and harmonizing trousers.

For the woman who prefers the tea gown to the pajamas, and who still loves the softly draped robes, there are varieties of peach and sun-tinted fabrics which are always lovely, but the mode of the season for negligees is clearly distinctly for mandarin effects with trousers.

Sports clothes should be the foundation of the summer wardrobe. Purchase as many varieties of sports clothes as is possible—two-piece suits, three-piece suits, jumper outfits with high neck and long sleeves, one-piece flannel frocks. Then go out and get the accessories, such as scarfs, hats and smart sports shoes to match.

Choose any shade of homespun tweeds. There are cross-bars, horizontals and plaids; jerseys, knitted wear, kashas and fine flannels. White sports frocks are often used as daytime dresses. With these are used small close-fitting collars or the "V" neckline, long sleeves, buttons, contrasting colored pipings and stitched self-bands.

Sweaters are always an important part of the sports wardrobe. The type most favored just now follows boyish lines. The slipover sweater is as smart as ever and features the "V"-shaped neck with collar of figured silk and has a shoulder yoke with slight fullness at the shoulder, below the yoke.

Wraps to wear over the spring frock are beautifully developed in twill, silk, kasha and heavy satin.

The younger generation also wear jumper dresses and ensemble suits. The middy meets the demands of the juniors.

Eyelet embroidery and laces are features of many of the new frocks.

The youthful overblouse shares honors with the jumper and tunic effects.

A woman is only a woman, but carefully selected dresses make her more charming.

Sleeves are either very short—mere nothings—or else they are long, simple, slender and sleek.

suspense or thrill, but of disgust. If you must have shivers and must read books like "The Sign of Evil," choose a room cold and draughty for the reading. Then, at least, the shivers will be genuine.

"THE LAND OF JOURNEY'S ENDING."

By Mary Austin; The Century Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $4.00.

Written by a woman who for seventeen years lived among the Indians, on the Mojave Desert, "The Land of Journey's Ending" is realistically authentic.

From the days of the Indian supremacy to the coming of the Spaniard, and thence to the dying off of the tribes and cities, the book gives ordinarily dry data in colorful and romantic style. Another section deals with the topography and vegetation of the cactus country.

The stories dealing with the land which lies between the Rio Colorado and the upper course of the Rio Grande are not only of educational value, but are fascinatingly entertaining as well. The book is a worthy product of seventeen fruitful years spent there by the author.

"THESE WOMEN."

By William Johnston; Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York; Price, $2.00.

Why the title, Mr. Johnston? Note a few of the contents listed: "What Every Husband Knows," "Us Men and Hemigany," "What Has Happened to Home," "Their Parents," "Why Men Won't Marry," "The Best Job for a Girl."

With "These Women" as a subterfuge, the author waxes eloquent, discussing the modern problems of the day, using women as the object of his particular objections. After presenting such problems as the degeneration of the American home and the negligence of parents to their

A CALL FOR CITIZENS' CAMPS

MANY YOUNG MEN OF SOUTHERN California who are interested in spending a month this summer in one of the citizens' military training camps will be pleased to learn that enrollments are now being made for these camps to be held in California this year. Young men from Los Angeles County who enroll for the coast artillery course will be sent to Fort Winfield Scott, San Francisco, from June 20 to July 19; those who enroll for infantry, cavalry, field artillery, engineers and signal corps courses will receive their training at Del Monte from July 21 to August 19.

The object of this instruction is to bring together young men of high type from all sections of the country and thereby develop closer national and social unity, to teach the privileges, duties and responsibilities of American citizenship, to stimulate patriotism, to interest young men in the importance of military training, to teach self discipline, and to develop the physical standard of the American youth through participation in military exercises, athletic games and sports, conducted under expert directors. The young men are returned to their homes at the expiration of the thirty days' training.

The benefits to be derived from attendance at these camps are secured without expense to the students. Almost any young man attending or who has attended college or high-school who is now between the ages of 17 and 24 can meet the requirements for enrollment. The physical examination may be made by civilian physicians on prescribed forms. Southern Californians can get all information regarding these camps, including enrollment blanks, by addressing Colonel Joseph D. Leitch, 625 Detwiler Building, Los Angeles.

S. B. GRAND PARLOR

Knew (San Francisco 49) of San Francisco, incumbent; Edgar F. Hastings (San Diego 108) of San Diego; Richard M. Hamb (Piedmont 120) of Oakland, incumbent.

The many friends of Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez (Pacific 10) of San Francisco are endeavoring to get him to shy his hat into the grand trustee ring, and it appears at this writing as if James Holohan (Watsonville 65) of Watsonville, former United States Marshal, will be an entrant.

San Francisco will be designated as this year's Admission Day celebration city, and Stockton Parlor No. 7 will put in an advance bid in behalf of its home-city for next year's celebration, while the Los Angeles County Parlors, it is rumored, will also announce that they want the 1926 celebration in Los Angeles City. A rumor is abroad to the effect that Palo Alto Parlor No. 216 will ask that next year's Grand Parlor be held in its home-city, and the recently-instituted Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 is already planning to have the 1927 session held in San Pedro.—C.M.H.

which even a committee under the direction of Deputy Chief L. H. Davis is engaged in an active ticket selling campaign.

Although known as the annual ball, it is not held every year, but only as it becomes necessary to replenish the charity and the emergency funds of the firemen. The last annual ball was held in the spring of 1922, at which time sufficient funds were raised to maintain the needy widows' and orphans' fund and the firemen's emergency fund in good condition until this year, when a new effort must be made to replace these necessary accounts.

By the aid of these funds the firemen are supporting a number of widows and orphans of former members of the department who, by reason of technicalities of a former pension law, are unable to obtain any direct pension relief from the city. Tickets are one dollar per person, and by the extremely favorable figures granted the firemen on hall rent, musical talent, etc., and the fact that no commission or other overhead expense must be met, the returns from ticket sales will net at least 90 percent to the above-mentioned funds.

EXCELLENT.

The Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles County, through their joint Homeless Children Committee, found homes for sixty-two orphans during the fiscal year just ended, and parents-by-adoption for fifty-two. Irving Baxter is chairman and Annie L. Adair secretary of the committee, which has largely-attended meetings the second Friday of every month at Ramona Hall, 349 South Hill street.

The year just closed was the most successful in the committee's operations. The work was greatly facilitated through the acquisition of an auto, used to make numerous visits to prospective homes and to convey the homeless children to their new abodes.

"REGULAR" SHOW APRIL 9.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. had two class initiations during March, as a result of the membership drive now in progress. April 23 another class will be initiated, and it is expected the membership increase will be such as to give the Parlor an additional delegate to the San Bernardino Grand Parlor. Charley Lloyd will put on a show, for members of the Order only, April 9, and he promises that it will be a "regular" one, and one that no member should miss. Grand Parlor delegates will be elected April 2.

The Saint Patrick's day masquerade ball given by the Parlor March 17 was largely attended and a great social success. Many attractive and unique costumes were in evidence, and several prizes were distributed. Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 (San Bernardino) had a large delegation in attendance, and one of its members took home the ham, awarded as a door-prize. The good of the order committee has under way plans for erecting in the Malibu, on an acre of land donated by Grand Trustee John T. Newell, a clubhouse for use of Los Angeles' members. Earl Lemoine is arranging for some boxing bouts in May.

EASTER PAGEANT.

Easter morning an historic pageant will be staged at Pasadena by the mission players, carrying out their annual custom. Sunrise services will be held in the Tournament of Roses Bowl, also, Easter morning.

"LIVE" COMMITTEE AT WORK.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. has a very active committee—Ralph I. Harbison chairman, Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger vice-chairman and Glen J. Packer secretary—which has undertaken to materially increase the membership. A plan has been mapped out which, the committee says, will quickly bring the desired result, and then the initiation fee will be substantially increased and plans for the proposed new home perfected.

At the March 20 meeting Grand Trustee John T. Newell was endorsed for re-election at the San Bernardino Grand Parlor. Judge Louis Russill, Dwight Crittenden and "Bill" Coffey were appointed a committee to interview the local Parlor regarding a N.S.G.W. building, to be erected jointly. To the good of the order committee was delegated the organization of a minstrel show, with talent from all the Parlor.

Being by far the largest Parlor in the Order, Ramona will have the biggest delegation at the San Bernardino Grand Parlor in May; delegates will be elected April 3. The good of the order committee will feature a stag party April 10, and on the 17th a class of candidates will be initiated.

ANNIVERSARY SUPPER.

Corona Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. had a smoker March 12, which was greatly enjoyed. A first-class program was presented, there were some brief addresses, and refreshments were served. John Topham, in charge of the membership drive, presided. Several eligibles were guests, and signed applications during the evening. The womenfolk were entertained at cards March 19, and the 26th a class of candidates were initiated.

Corona's twenty-ninth institution anniversary will be observed at a supper in the Catholic Women's Clubhouse, April 16, at 6:30 p. m. Snappy entertainment will be provided. All members of the Order are invited, and tickets, $2.00 per plate, may be had from the secretary of any Parlor, or from John W. Topham, 210 Frost Building. Classes of candidates will be initiated the 9th and 30th of April. The Parlor is making rapid strides ahead, both numerically and socially.

INDIANS' WELFARE.

Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W., after listening to a talk March 24 by President Ed. Ayres on the deplorable condition of the California Indians, many of whom, he said, are starving to death, authorized an Indian welfare committee, which will endeavor to have the Order as a whole do something for the state's original settlers.

In future the Parlor will meet every Wednesday at Native Sons' Hall, 134 West Seventeenth street. Several candidates were initiated during March. Vaquero looks favorably on the suggested joint-owned Native Sons' home for Los Angeles and has appointed a committee to act with committees from the other Parlor.

ANNUAL GRAND BALL.

The third annual grand ball of the local Native Sons and Native Daughters will be held at the Wilshire Country Club, April 24. Tickets are $2.00 per couple, and the affair will be formal.

The arrangements committee is made up of Arthur C. Davis (chairman), Miss Marvel Thomas (secretary), Leon Leonard, Walter Baskerville, Andrew Beazell, Sidney Witkowski, John Topham, George McLain, Arthur Ford.

MAKING RAPID GROWTH.

There was a very large attendance at the March 27 meeting of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. (San Pedro), when thirty-two candidates were initiated by a ritual team composed of Walter E. Baskerville (Ramona 109), Sidney W. Neighbours (Vaquero 262), Ronald M. Ross (Los Angeles 45), Grand Trustee John T. Newell, John W. Topham (Corona 196), Andrew G. Beazell (Los Angeles 45), Charles E. Lloyd (Los Angeles 45), William G. Newell (Los Angeles 45), Charles Cassidy (Sepulveda).

Ramon Sepulveda thanked the Parlor for perpetuating his family name by adoption of the name Sepulveda, and caused no little amusement by reference to his sons' failure to do so. Grand Trustee Newell discoursed on the aims and purposes of the Order, and there were many short talks. William Maggio, at the time the Parlor was instituted, promised a handsome banner, and his tender was accepted with applause. Bert Mackley, long a member of the Order, presented a handsome punch-bowl, which was received with cheers and used for the liberal contributions in the homeless children march. At the meeting's close a Spanish "feed" was enjoyed.

Twenty-five additional candidates affiliated with the Parlor March 19, when the ritual was exemplified by the following officers of Ramona 109: President John M. McCroskey, Burrell D. Neighbours, Leon Leonard, Dwight Crittenden,

Landscaping—

Older residents of California are familiar with the fact that Howard & Smith have created many of the most beautiful gardens in the State. With the vast development which has recently taken place in Southern California, however, it may be that some of the newer residents are not aware of the fact that Howard & Smith have a landscape department capable of rendering the very highest service in the treatment of their grounds. In the development of a property, confidence can only be placed in those having a thorough understanding of landscaping in its entirety. A full comprehension of this subject, from the minutest detail to the placing of the house itself, is essential if beauty and harmony are to be the ultimate result.

If you are contemplating the development of your grounds we will be pleased to have you confer with us.

Although in existence but a short time, Sepulveda Parlor has a membership of 176, and thirty-seven applicants await initiation during April.

STATE UNIVERSITY STAYS.

Los Angeles City will not lose the University of California, Southern Branch, the regents having decided March 21 to accept a 375-acre tract of land at Westwood, within the city's corporate limits, for the institution of learning.

Within sixty days, it is announced, landscaping of the site will begin, and by September 1927 the new and greatly-enlarged university will be ready to receive students.

GRAND OFFICERS GUESTS.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. had as its guests March 6 Grand President Catherine E. Gloster and Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty. The hall was tastefully decorated and a class of candidates were initiated. Grand President Gloster gave a splendid talk on California and called attention to the importance of the jubilee celebration in San Francisco in September; she referred to the effectiveness of the initiatory ceremonies, and congratulated the Parlor on its personnel. Grand Secretary Dougherty expressed pleasure at this, her first, visit to Los Angeles, and complimented Organist Pearl Dwinell. Addresses were made by Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, Trustee Annie L. Adair and Grace C. Yarwood, the latter highly complimenting President Marvel Thomas. Bouquets were presented Grand President Gloster, Grand Secretary Dougherty and Past Grand President Stoermer. Delicious refreshments were served. March 8 the Grand President was the guest of Annie L. Adair, H. Adele White and Mary K. Corcoran at the "Mission Play," and the Grand Secretary was the guest of Miss Stoermer on an auto tour of the city.

March 20 the Parlor initiated another class of candidates. Lillian Denney presented a surprise program, featuring Lucille Anderson in Spanish costume dances. Secretary Mary K. Cor-

"IF."

Following is a parody on "If," composed by Walter Holtz, graduate of the Virgil high-school in the winter class of '25:

If you can rise when in a crowded street car
And let some flapper have your cherished seat;
If you can hang upon a strap for hours
While scores of people trample upon your feet;

If you can smile upon some irate female
Who tramples you and shoves you up the aisle;
If you can keep your rage from overflowing
When, pushing you, she grabs your strap the while;

If you can keep your temper when your quarter
Comes back in change as two Canadian dimes,
And gladly go your way though you remember
They've done that stunt to you a score of times;

If you can stand, a patient slave, for hours,
And never mind when others shove for place,
And don a little smile of sweet contentment
When some old gent's umbrella smacks your face;

If you can close your face and rest your chatter,
And never ask the reason for the crowd,
But sweetly tell yourself it doesn't matter
And never say a naughty word aloud;

If you can hold your peace and never argue,
Although you get a string of loud abuse,
And never want to kill the street-car franchise
Because the darned old car runs out of juice;

If you can pick yourself up from the corner
Where you've been thrown in going 'round a curve,
And to the world at large can gently murmur,
"Well, after all, I got what I deserve;"

If you can keep your head when some kind person,
In passing, drops upon your dome a dozen eggs,
And never thinks to ask your pardon
But makes remarks about your lengthy legs;

If you can leave the car without a roar
When it's carried you a mile beyond your stop,
And never start the poor conductor raving
By asking him if he's been smoking hop;

If you can still keep calm when you discover
That on the car some pickpocket has found
Your one and only bottle of "Green River,"
Which you've toted clean from Puget Sound;

If, after all this stuff, you still are happy,
And, 'spite of being tired, say "This is fun."
Why, then, 'though the world may call you witless,
That's what they call the best of us, my son.
